Robinson, Burke Tangle in Hot Debate Over Roosevelt Plan.

Arkansan Assails Hostile 'Prejudice'

Sumners Bill Is Signed; Hopkins Urges Change, Clark Attacks It.

Condensed texts of speeches by Harry L. Hopkins and Senator Bennett C. Clark are on Page 11.

By Robert C. Albright.

A charge of "unfair and deliberately dishonorable" propaganda against the President's court plan brought counter-accusations of Administration "propaganda" efforts for the program in the Senate yesterday as the judiciary proposals tore new rents in old-line political alignments.

The propaganda charges were tossed into Senate debate by Senate Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson, who called the Senate's attention to what he termed "a deliberate effort to prejudice the minds of the American people and to put pressure on the members of Congress to induce them to respond to a stimulated and false public opinion."

Burke Answers Robinson.

Robinson's claims were challenged immediately by Senator Edward R. Burke, Nebraska Democrat, who said American citizens have "a perfect right" to take a hostile stand on the court issue, and there was nothing "unfair" about it. The Nebraskan implied Administration efforts to influence WPA workers and others for the plan.

Burke's rebuttal coincided with reports that the Democratic National Committee was organizing support for the court plan. One Democratic Senator, who declined to be quoted, said material emanating from the national committee is being distributed through State Democratic organizations. Other Democratic opponents of the plan protested that speeches for the program have been mimeographed by the national committee.

As radio networks vibrated with fresh outbursts of oratory for and against the court plan, Capitol lobbies echoed new talk of "compromise" and President Roosevelt affixed his signature to the Sumners bill, permitting Supreme Court justices to retire voluntarily with full pay at 70.

The Sumners measure has been viewed by proponents as a possible solution of the judiciary differences, in the doubtful event that two or more justices retire under its terms. Six of the nine justices of the high court are eligible for retirement under the measure.

Wheeler Revises Amendment.

Other developments:

Senator Burton K. Wheeler, liberal Montana Democrat, outspoken opponent of the court program, was revising his constitutional amendment giving Congress power to override Supreme Court invalidations by a two-thirds vote after a Congressional election. Wheeler is planning to except the bill of rights from the operation of his amendment, and to speed up amendment procedure.

The Montana Senator believes, he said, that Congress has the power to call State conventions to ratify or reject proposed amendments and to fix the time for such conventions. He has weighty legal opinions to that effect, Wheeler said, leaving the implication that he expects to change his proposed amendment to provide for that method of submission.

White House officials said President Roosevelt, in his "victory dinner" address Thursday night will lay a foundation for the radio "fireside chat" he intends to deliver March 9, the day before Senate hearings open on the court plan. It had been intimated he would discuss the court issue in his radio speech.

Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins broadcast an appeal for support of the six-judge increase, declaring the lives and fortunes of millions of Americans depend on the "life span" of a few men who "refuse to resign because they disagree with the ideas of an Administration twice indorsed by the people."

Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, son of the late Speaker, broadcast an attack on Supreme Court features of the President's judiciary message and predicted it will be a long time before "the people consent to break

Screen Actor Taylor's Grandfather Dies at 82

Beatrice, Nebr., March 1 (AP).—Jacob A. Brugh, 82, grandfather of screen actor Robert Taylor, died at a son's home near Beatrice last night of influenza and old age. Brugh, who recently was a relief client at $16 a month, was moved to the home of Roy Brugh last week.

County relief officers a month ago informed Taylor of the aged man's plight, and Taylor promised to send aid.

Light 'Jumpers,' Jaywalkers Targets of Police in New Drive

'Don't Be a Traffic Cheater,' Slogan of District Traffic Officials, to Be Painted at Prominent Intersections.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

"Don't be a traffic cheater."

With this as their slogan, District traffic officials are completing plans for a new "crack down" safety campaign aimed at motorists and pedestrians who chisel and cheat at the popular game of "beat the law."

Beginning next week, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer and Police Superintendent Ernest W. Brown will join forces to combat highway evils attending the city's rapidly increasing traffic death toll.

The warning not to "cheat" will be printed in big yellow letters on the street and sidewalks at major downtown intersections. Policemen will be ready to enforce strictly all regulations governing traffic signals and pedestrian movements.

No. 2 of a Series

Light "jumpers" and jaywalkers are to be principal targets in the new drive to save lives.

"We have been watching these traffic cheaters for some time," said Van Duzer yesterday. "They think they are playing a winning game—but they lose in the end."

He indicated a large map hanging on his office wall. It is dotted with pins showing danger spots in the city's highway system. There are big pins for accidents, little pins for injuries and bright red pins for deaths—all gruesome reminders that 29 persons have been killed and scores injured on Washington streets since January 1.

"These traffic cheaters," Van Duzer said, "appear to take great delight in attempting to beat the other fellow at his own game. The driving cheater and the pedestrian cheater repeatedly lock horns in

Roman Council Drafts Reply to Britain's Arms

Duce Presides at 5-Hr. Session, Message Promised in Six Hours.

By the Associated Press.

Rome (Tuesday), March 2.—The Fascist Grand Council, supreme authority of the Italian state, concluded at 3 o'clock this morning a session summoned to consider how much further Italy should arm in the light of Great Britain's $7,500,000,000 rearmament program.

Premier Benito Mussolini presided over the five-hour session. What was done in that meeting inside the Palazzo Venezia was not disclosed.

It was admitted, however, that important problems were thoroughly discussed.

Besides acting on Italian foreign policy, the council was believed to have studied proposed Draconian laws which would practically force celibate Italians to marry and bear children.

Even as the council met, a jury of honor was pondering differences involving one of its members. Some thought a Mussolini rebuke was on the council program for his two quarreling aides, 70-year-old Marshal Emilio de Bono, who sits on the grand council, and the younger minister of colonies, Alessandro Lessona, who does not.

Dry Forces Plan State Campaigns In New Program

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 1 (AP). The Anti-Saloon League of America, in convention here today, outlined plans to seek a return of prohibition through campaigns in the individual States without any immediate effort to change the Constitution again.

Officials of the organization and speakers before the convention discussing the program said the new strategy would be to take advantage of the section of the twenty-first amendment prohibiting transportation or importation of intoxicants into dry territories.

Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, of Washington, general secretary of the board of temperance of the Methodist Episcopal Church, said the section "makes clear the right of States to deal with the problem."

Churches Fight Nazi Plan to Divide Lands

Prelates Would Ban Members of 'Neo-Heathen' Cult From Rural Tracts.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, March 1.—A deadlock in the government's drive for German churches to share part of their lands with the landless was reported tonight in Protestant Confessional circles because of church leaders' conditions.

Discussions between the church ministry and ecclesiastical leaders, these sources said, ended without success when the churchmen demanded fulfillment of the following two conditions:

1. Land must be granted to the church inside each new settlement of small farmers for erection of a church and establishment of a cemetery under administration of the church authorities.

2. The small-farm settlers in the future must not be members of the neo-heathen movement.

Hans Kerrl, minister for church affairs, appealed Saturday to Evangelical churches and German bishops to co-operate whole-heartedly in the government's task of finding land for small settlers.

(The appeal spoke of "the necessity of compulsory measures" if they failed to do so voluntarily.)

Tonight's reports were in direct conflict with the announcement in the official Reichsanzeiger that the conferences between church ministry and ecclesiastical leaders had ended with an agreement "in principle."

Protestant sources said the discussions so far were only informal and had ended without success.

They also asserted many new settlements on government land merely gave a "Gemeinschaftshaus" (community house) for meetings, with no churches.

Hawks' Plane Speeds 354 Miles for Record

East Hartford, Conn., March 1 (AP). Commander Frank Hawks landed his low-winged monoplane at Rentschler Field today after an unofficial speed test flight in which he said he attained an average speed of 354 miles an hour, 1.6 miles an hour faster than the existing land plane speed record held by Howard Hughes.

After his flight today Hawks said he was certain he would attain his objective—a speed of 375 miles per hour.

Court Again Upholds Gold Law Validity

Supreme Tribunal Votes, 5-4, in Favor of New Deal Measure.

Abrogation of Clause Also Includes Bullion, Majority Rules.

By Franklyn Waltman.

By another five-to-four decision, the Supreme Court yesterday again ruled in favor of the New Deal, when for the second time it upheld the act abrogating gold clauses in private contracts as a valid exercise of Congressional power in regulating the value of money.

The decision yesterday involved leases of water power rights between the Holyoke Water Power Co. and the American Writing Paper Co., made variously between 1881 and 1897 and calling for payment in a quantity of gold bullion which should be equal to a stated number of dollars of gold coin of the standard or weight and fineness existing at the time the contracts were made.

Thus this case differed somewhat in details from that of Norman versus the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad which was based on a contract to pay an obligation in gold coin of a stipulated weight and fineness. In that case the court two years ago held that Congress had the right to abrogate such contracts in the public welfare. In yesterday's case, involving the payment of a specified amount of gold bullion, rather than coin, the court reached the same conclusion.

Cardozo Presents Ruling.

Justice Benjamin N. Cardozo spoke for the same majority of the court which two years ago upheld the Congressional action—Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes and Justices Louis D. Brandeis, Harlan F. Stone and Owen J. Roberts concurring with him. Without, however, setting forth their objections in a written opinion, Justices Willis Vandevanter, James McReynolds, George Sutherland and Pierce Butler dissented, as they did two years ago.

This was the most important of 14 opinions handed down by the court on reconvening yesterday after its regular two-week recess. The court again failed to hand down its decision in the Washington minimum wage case, which was argued in December. Nor did it announce any action on the pending cases involving the Wagner Labor Relations Act, but that was not expected.

Because of the rapid increase in the number of automobile trailers and the efforts of State authorities to bring them under some form of taxation, a unanimous decision of the court holding invalid California's 1935 "caravan act" was regarded as interesting. This statute assessed a fee of $15 for each motor vehicle driven or towed into the State for sale. Justice Stone, speaking for the court, held that the tax "imposes an unconstitutional burden on interstate commerce."

Ship Contracts Canceled.

The court also upheld validity of an order by Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper directing cancellation of a contract by three steamship companies operating between Gulf and Pacific Coast ports which granted concessions to some freight shippers. The purpose of the Roper order was to prevent discrimination and the court held that it was "without authority to substitute our judgment for that of the Secretary that the discrimination was unreasonable." Justice Sutherland dissented.

"Whether a discrimination in rates or services of a carrier is undue or unreasonable," the court asserted, "has always been regarded as peculiarly a question committed to the judgment of the administrative body, passed upon an appreciation of all the facts and circumstances affecting the traffic."

The argument in the gold clause case centered around the question as to whether the contract before the court called for the delivery of a commodity or the payment of money. The court first held that "the obligation was one for payment of money, and not for the delivery of gold as upon the sale of a commodity" and that "the fact is of little moment that currency is characterized as a commodity in the verbiage of the covenant as long as it is currency."

"Weasel words," asserted Justice Cardoza, "will not avail to defeat the triumph of intention when once the words are read in the setting

U. M. W. Members Drop Supplies to Men 300 Feet Underground.

Union Local Head Is One of Strikers

Injunctions Would Oust Employes From Two Detroit Plants.

By the Associated Press.

Uniontown, Pa., March 1.—Three hundred miners, employes of the Jamison Coal Company, went on a "sit-down" strike 300 feet below the earth's surface today.

Members of their families and of the local of the United Mine Workers gathered around the shaft tonight and sent food, bed clothing and coats to the strikers.

The men, members of the day shift, had been in the mine all day, but the strike did not become generally known until the night shift reported for work.

The night shift men did not join the "sit-downers," but milled about the grounds discussing the situation.

A committee from the local of the union went down the shaft tonight to discuss the strike with the workers.

In the mine, in South Union township, a mile and a half southwest of Uniontown, was John Hardy, president of the local.

John Keck, superintendent of the company, was ill at his home.

One company official, who declined to be identified, said:

"They (the strikers) wanted us to collect some fines and we had no right to do that. They also wanted us to discharge a veteran employe and we refused."

C. C. Boner, secretary-treasurer of District 4, United Mine Workers, promised a statement later.

The strikers reported they had sufficient food. The mine has only one level, at 300 feet.

"Sit-Down" Injunctions Sought.

Detroit, March 1 (AP).—Two industrial concerns whose plants are held by sit-down striking members of the United Automobile Workers of America asked for injunctions today against the strikers, terming them "former" employes.

Circuit Judge Allan Campbell signed "show-cause" orders naming 400 strikers who have occupied the Timken-Detroit Axle Co. plant since February 23, and 58 persons in possession of the Ferro Stamping Manufacturing Co. plant since February 18.

Deputies began attempts to serve the orders.

The U. A. W. A. in its tenth day of conferences with General Motors leaders seeking final settlement of issues remaining from recent strikes, obtained settlement of a dispute that closed Fisher Body and Chevrolet assembly plants at Janesville, Wis., last Friday.

The conferees have put in writing temporary agreements on all but two points of discussion—minimum hourly wages and methods of handling cases of alleged discrimination against union members.

C. E. Wilson, vice president, heading the General Motors group negotiating with U. A. W. A. leaders, said the written temporary agreements are subject to revision before they are put in final form. Union conferees hope for conclusion of the General Motors discussions tomorrow, since negotiations with Chrysler Corporation executives are scheduled to open Wednesday.

Meanwhile, hundreds of hosiery workers joined the ranks of strikers over the Nation.

Messenger boys, nurses, moving van drivers—even a group of blind

Veteran Official's Son Disappears; Revenge Hinted

Department of Justice agents and Metropolitan Police last night began an intensive search for James T. Brady, jr., 12-year-old son of the Veterans' Administration Solicitor. The lad has been missing since 9 a. m. yesterday, when he left his home at 4210 Thirty-eighth street northwest bound for school.

Aid of the Justice Department was asked after Brady had expressed the fear that his son might have met with foul play, possibly motivated by revenge.

In his capacity as solicitor, Brady often has to sign letters denying applications for veterans' compensation. He said he believed that some veteran might have kidnaped his son to "get even."

Brady told police that only last week a tramp came to his house and asked for food. While being fed in the kitchen he mentioned that he was a former service man. James, jr., was present at the time, his father said.

The missing boy is the high-ranking member of his class at St. Anne's School. He has never been known to play truant and is regarded by his teachers as exceptionally level-headed.

When he disappeared, the lad was wearing brown knickers, a brown lumberjacket, black shoes and had roller skates. He has dark brown hair and brown eyes. He had with him his weekly allowance, about $3.

World War Flier Appointed Commerce Unit Air Director

Fagg to Succeed Vidal; Reorganization Work Is Started.

Fred D. Fagg, jr., aeronautical legal expert and war-time flier, yesterday was appointed director of the Bureau of Air Commerce following the resignation of Eugene L. Vidal, who quit Sunday after four years of directing the huge aviation industry for the Government.

The announcement of Fagg's appointment by Secretary Roper heralded a thorough shake-up in the bureau, with Vidal entering private aviation, though continuing with the bureau in an informal advisory capacity, the two former assistant directors, J. Carrol Cone and Rex Martin, assigned to Europe and South America, respectively, and Maj. Rudolph W. Schroeder resigning as airline inspection chief to become the new assistant director.

The reorganization of the bureau resulted in greater centralization of authority, directly in line with the report last June of Senator Copeland (New York), whose aviation committee severely criticized the bureau for internal politics.

Last night the Senator called the new organization "a step in the right direction." He added his committee could "shed no tears" over Martin's assignment as the bureau's aeronautical adviser in South America. Martin has been severely criticized by the Senate committee. Copeland made no comment on Cone's new

Officials Study D. C. Employes' Outside Work

Policemen Holding Other Jobs May Face Charges After Investigation.

Sources of income of District employes beyond their regular salaries were being studied by officials of the city government last night preparatory to inclusion in the record of hearings on the District appropriations bill now before a House committee.

The survey of outside work being done by city workers—many of whom are paid on a scale lower than that in the Federal civil service—included members of the Police Department, where one official hinted at the possibility of repercussions in the form of Police trial board hearings.

Police regulations forbid the employment of policemen outside departmental duties, it was pointed out. If the investigation discloses any policeman connected with enterprises not relating to his work, charges may be lodged against him, an official of the department, who asked that his name be withheld, declared.

One member of the Police Department, William H. McGrath, a lawyer, already has been charged with performing duties outside the department "which provided additional compensation and hindered his duties as a policeman." He will face the Trial Board March 9.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, declared last night, however, that the McGrath case was in no way connected with the wholesale investigations of outside employment.

Collins Denies Origin.

Orders for the job probe were issued by Daniel J. Donovan, the District auditor, apparently at the behest of members of the House sub-committee on District appropriations.

Apparently the sub-committee is considering a limitation on outside activities of District employes for pay such as was voted down last year in the House after having been sponsored by former Representative Thomas L. Blanton.

Representative Ross Collins, chairman of the sub-committee, chuckled when questioned about the origin

Neutral Bill Perils Nation, Borah Charges

Declares War Would Be 'Brought to Our Doors' in Senate Talk.

By Sidney Olson.

In a five-point attack on the Pittman cash-and-carry neutrality bill, Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, asserted yesterday in the Senate that "Passage of this resolution will transfer the next great war to our doorstep."

Borah's arguments, massed around his belief that the bill would "abandon the freedom of the seas," also stressed that in the event of foreign wars this country "would automatically become the ally of the great sea powers—Japan in the Pacific and Great Britain in the Atlantic." He further argued that the American merchant marine, "will always be small if our ships retreat to port whenever there's a howl of danger somewhere."

He shouted his warning that "Great corporations will be practically in control of our interests in wartime, picking and choosing their clients among the belligerents."

Demands New Policy.

The Idaho Senator, whose address last week on foreign trade problems during the debate over the reciprocal trade agreements extension was received with respectful attention by the Senate, had a contrastingly rocky time of it yesterday, as three Democrats, Senators Key Pittman, Nevada; Homer Bone, Washington; and Lewis D. Schwellenbach, Washington, rose in consistent rebuttal of his arguments.

Nearly every assertion Borah made was instantly challenged by one of the three. Pittman, in opening consideration of the measure as the Senate convened, had delivered a lengthy address explaining the reasons for the various provisions in the measure.

Then Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, briefly lashed at the measure, urging that three sections in which the President is allowed certain discretion be stricken out.

Pittman then said, in insisting on abandonment of the traditional American freedom-of-the-seas policy, that "What's necessary to save

Anti-Union Tradition Is Broken by Huge Corporation.

Other Firms Grant Forty-Hour Week

Wide Pay Boosts Given; Stocks Soar on N. Y. Exchange.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 1.—The Nation's gigantic steel industry, in an unprecedented series of rapid-fire developments, today took tremendous steps, through pay increases and hour reductions, to settle problems that have vexed the industry for months.

Upsetting traditions of many years' standing, and designed to put an end to issues that have brought ever-increasing discord, were these outstanding actions:

The United States Steel Corporation, largest in the industry, opened negotiations with John L. Lewis' Steel Workers Organizing Committee, which has undertaken to unionize the industry.

Bethlehem Steel Co. announced adoption of the 40-hour week and an increase of 10 cents an hour in base labor rates. Adjustment of pay in the higher classifications also was promised, with some 65,000 workers sharing in the boost.

The impasse that has prevented the Navy Department from obtaining bids on steel for its new ships, because of the 40-hour week requirement in the Walsh-Healey act, thus was broken.

National Steel Corporation adopted the 40-hour week and increased its minimum pay from $4.20 a day to $5. It has 20,000 workers.

Republic Steel Corporation, Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., Inland Steel and other independents joined the procession, announcing the shorter work week and the $5 minimum pay.

Steel shares rallied on the New York Stock Exchange, United States Steel going above 115 for the first time since 1931. It went to 115½ and closed at 114¾, a gain of 3⅝ for the day.

Should the entire industry grant the wage boosts announced by the independents, approximately $100,000,000 a year would be added to the steel pay roll, sending the total above the billion-dollar-a-year mark. The American Iron & Steel Institute has placed the total paid in wages at $936,000,000 annually, an average of 73 cents an hour.

The industry employs about 550,000 workers. Inland Steel employs 13,000, Republic Steel, 7,500 and the Youngstown concern, 23,000.

Victory for Lewis.

While Lewis still maybe far from a victory in his undertaking to organize the steel industry, the opening of negotiations with him by the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation, largest subsidiary of U. S. Steel, is in itself a surprising advantage gained by the fighting head of the Committee for Industrial Organization. A 50-year stand of the corporation against dealing with "outside unions" has been swept away. The employe representation plan of dealing with its employes, followed by the corporation for many years, is now under fire before the National Labor Relations Board, which charges violation of the Wagner Labor Relations act. Violation of the right to join the union of their choice has been alleged.

Lewis, through his chief steel lieutenant, Philip Murray, sprang a surprise in presenting his request for a conference direct to the U. S. Steel unit. He had been expected to take his demands to the Iron and Steel Institute as the representative of the entire industry.

Conference Unexpected.

The sudden announcement that Benjamin F. Fairless, president of Carnegie-Illinois, and Murray, each with a corps of assistants, were actually conferring in the corporation offices at Pittsburgh, astonished observers, who had believed such a conference could be won by the C. I. O. representatives only through a strike.

The threat of a general tie-up of the steel industry this spring has been growing ominously, in the opinion of all who have studied the situation. It even has been held responsible by some Government officials for the rush of private steel orders that has kept the plants operating so nearly at capacity that the Government has been unable to get

G-Men Ready to Investigate Mystery Death Of Alexandria Youth, 15, as Kidnap-Killing

By Eugene Warner.

Sensational new evidence pointing to a kidnap-murder in the death of 15-year-old Luther Cummins, of Alexandria, was laid before the Federal Bureau of Investigation last night by The Washington Post.

The hitherto undisclosed fact that the dead boy, whose skeleton was found Saturday, had been trailed to Mount Vernon avenue by bloodhounds, in the opposite direction from the swamp where his body was found, led to the belief that the lad had been kidnaped.

This development tied in with the "mystery" car which haunted the vicinity in front of the Cummins home for a week prior to Luther's strange disappearance last July 16.

Bloodhounds were used at the time Luther disappeared, P. E. Foxworth, in charge of kidnap investigations, was told. Instead of going to the swamp, the hounds picked up Luther's scent in front of his home and almost jerked men holding their chains off their feet as the hounds raced for the highway.

The hounds trailed the boy's scent to the wide pavement and followed it for about a city block, to a point close to historic Hume Spring. There they abruptly halted. They had come to the trail's end.

It was believed that the youngster, a member of the Washington Boys' Club, was either struck by a car at that point and his body picked up, or that he was induced to enter a passing car and was spirited away.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation was to impart the new information to J. Edgar Hoover, who was out of the city, by long distance telephone.

Edna Cummins, 19, sister of the dead boy, described in detail yesterday the mystery car which had attracted curiosity of neighbors for some time. She said:

"It was a light tan or yellowish sedan. We all noticed it several times. Every time it came near the house the driver would slow down. Once we saw him point at our house. Mother couldn't understand who the driver was or what he wanted.

"The car not only slowed down in front of our house as it went by, but would go up the road and circle back, almost stopping. One afternoon it repeated several times. Once there were three men in the car.

"The driver was usually alone. Finally mother set us children to watching. She told us to run out and get the number if the car came along again. We saw it soon after and ran out to the street (the Cummins house is back about 50 yards from the highway) but as soon as the driver saw us coming he stepped

3 Men Slain, Woman Wounded By Colored Man Denied Relief

By the Associated Press.

Denver, March 1.—A colored former minister shot dead three men employes, seriously wounded a woman worker and terrified 50 relief clients today at the City Welfare Bureau.

"The Lord will take care of me," mumbled the colored man, Frank Bailey, 59, when District Attorney John A. Carroll and detectives questioned him. Carroll said Bailey explained in a statement he was disgruntled over failure "to get back on relief rolls."

The dead:

James E. Tunnell, jr., 35, acting director of the bureau.

Carlos Didio, 30, a clerk.

George Oliver Milliken, 28, bureau worker.

Mrs. Ramona C. Chambers, a case worker, was not expected to survive.

The three men and Miss Chambers were shot through the head.

Carroll said Bailey followed Tunnell into the offices when the official arrived for work, calmly drew a revolver and started shooting.

"You're the one I want," Carroll quoted the colored man as saying to Didio. Bailey fired and Didio toppled dead from his stool, struck above the left eye.

The colored man then addressed Miss Chambers, saying, "And you, too." His second shot struck Miss Chambers in the head. Milliken and Tunnell dropped next.

Fifty waiting relief clients stood by, aghast.

Carroll said Bailey fled into another building used by the bureau and fired at three women working there. A bullet grazed one of them.

The colored man walked out of the offices, located on the grounds of the Denver General Hospital, and was arrested. Carroll quoted him as saying he had planned for a month to kill Tunnell and two unidentified colored women he believed were preventing his employment.

Neutral Bill Perils Nation, Borah Charges

Declares Next War Would Be 'Brought to Our Doors' in Senate Talk.

the lives of our citizens must determine our course.

"Rather than send our citizens out on ships in wartime, to be sunk in the middle of the night without notice by enemy submarines, unmarked and mysterious, I'd tie up every ship in every port in the country.

"I'd rather pay millions in bonuses to the shipping industry than to sacrifice a few American lives."

Borah thereupon arose, and began his onslaught by pointing out that the cash-and-carry provisions "do not sacrifice any profits of the great corporations of this country. The great oil companies, the steel industry, the ship and munitions makers—all who stand to profit in wartime will be able to supply any nation that wants war materials.

"While I am thoroughly in accord with most of this bill, I believe that it automatically makes us an ally of Great Britain and Japan in any future wars."

Questioned by Pittman.

Pittman asked, "How would the Senator suggest that a bill could be drafted which would keep Japan and Great Britain from dominating the seas?"

Borah said: "Only the countries with big navies will be able to get war materials * * * The United States is a big world power, and we need not be dictated to by anyone.

"Further, this bill would transfer the war to our ports. It brings the war closer to us. These nations will not stand idly by and see their enemies supplied with materials by this Nation. They will bomb our manufacturing plants first."

Pittman said: "This bill does not change the situation. It only serves to keep our boats off the seas and save American property.

"There were no bombings nor was there any trouble with belligerent navies near our ports during the last war."

Schwellenbach told Borah the cash provisions of the present bill would actually result in an advantage to small corporations, whereas credit redounded to the advantage of large corporations.

Bone Supports Bill.

Bone took sharp issue with the freedom-of-the-seas beliefs of Borah, shouting: "The net result of the last war was an army of dead—an army of insane—pensions of incredible proportions—and debts that stretch to infinity.

"I can't bring myself to believe we should balance the cause of world peace against the rights of hucksters, that we should not fix the law so that the duPonts might lose a cargo of powder."

Borah retorted: "We found out in the last war that there was someone interested in economic conditions besides the duPonts. The farmers and small interests of the country—not hucksters—have a voice * * * The first line of our defense should be bettered economic conditions. We should be as economically powerful as possible. We shouldn't weaken ourselves. Someone is going to get the trade we abandon. As Thomas Jefferson said, a nation's first objective in war is to break down the trade of neutrals and draw that trade to itself."

With the Senate in general agreement on the measure, passage was freely predicted some time today. Senator Elbert D. ### New Deal Now Backs Court Proposal With Charges of Stagnation, Reactionary Control.

By Franklyn Waltman

With the blasting of the President's contentions that congestion of Federal court dockets justified his scheme to name six new justices to the Supreme Court, the New Deal has fallen back on two arguments in behalf of this proposal.

One is to the general effect that the Supreme Court majority is mentally stagnant—that it has given a horse and buggy interpretation to the Constitution, and that consequently the court has been a barrier to social and economic progress in this country.

The second argument, assuming the first to be true, is that the welfare of the country and the processes of democracy are served by overcoming this reactionary control of the Supreme Court as quickly as possible and that the situation is such that the country cannot wait for amendment of the Constitution to break the alleged impasse between the court and the will of the people. In this argument an unidentified emergency of some kind is intimated as forcing immediate and quick action.

Whether the Supreme Court rulings on various acts of Congress and State Legislatures constitute reactionary conclusions is in large degree a matter of viewpoint. A decision which one man would regard as reactionary, another would hail as liberal and enlightened. During the last decade the severest critics of the Supreme Court undoubtedly have found decisions which they liked very much, and likewise, the most ardent defenders of the court without doubt have found decisions they disliked and denounced.

But is it true that the Supreme Court stands as a barrier to social and economic progress in this country? It is difficult to find evidence to support such a conclusion. What law did the Supreme Court invalidate which would have prevented the economic depression which broke over the country in 1929? None comes readily to mind, unless it could be the child labor decisions or the Adkins minimum wage opinion. Both types of legislation sought to correct serious evils but no economist so far has contended that these evils were so great as to be the primary cause of the depression.

Therefore we have to look to Supreme Court actions since the depression commenced to find that it stands as a barrier to social and economic progress. The court did not interfere with the efforts made by Herbert Hoover to stem the severity of the depression. It did not place a veto on the RFC and its huge lending powers.

When Mr. Roosevelt came into power, the Supreme Court did nothing to interfere with his splendid efforts to end the banking panic. Nor has it set aside any of his monetary experiments, even though they were of dubious value in promoting recovery. Nor did it halt the President from spending first $3,300,000,000 and then $4,800,000,000 and later on smaller sums but counted nevertheless in the billions, for pump priming projects. Nor did the court say that the Federal Government could not borrow and spend to keep its citizens from starvation and suffering.

Nor has the court set aside from the reciprocal trade program to revitalize the Nation's foreign trade. It has done nothing to interfere with the New Deal control over security and exchange markets and its reorganization of the Federal Reserve System—undertakings directly designed to prevent a repetition of what happened in 1929. Nor has it yet set aside any of the Social Security program.

What has the court done? In May, 1935, it unanimously ruled invalid the NRA. When this was done, there is an abundance of evidence to show the country had become tired of the NRA, many groups of citizens were protesting against it, and there was some doubt whether Congress would have re-enacted that law in its original form. But that is beside the point. Did invalidation of the NRA halt economic progress in this country? Were the wages of workers in factories reduced thereafter? Were more workers thrown out of employment? Did industrial production decline?

Without resort to official reports and statistical tables, the average citizens from his own experience knows these things did not happen. He knows that busines canditions steadily improved from the time that NRA was invalidated until the present, as the business graphs and statistical tables all show.

For the month of May, 1935, the Federal Reserve authorities reported industrial production at a point 85 per cent of the 1923-25 average. For December they reported it at 121 per cent of that average, with 105 per cent being attained as the average for the year. Factory employment in May, 1935, was 85 per cent of the 1923-25 average; in December it was 98 per cent. Factory pay rolls in May, 1935, was 69 per cent of this average; in December it was 98 per cent.

In December, 1935, Dun and Bradstreet reported 910 commercial failures with liabilities of $15,686,000; in December, 1936, they reported 688 commercial failures with liabilities of $12,288,000. In the year 1935 the F. W. Dodge Corporation reported construction contracts awarded with a value of $1,844,500,000; for 1936 they reported the value of such contracts at $2,675,300,000.

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins last week reported that "between January, 1936, and January, 1937, total employment in these (combined manufacturing and non-manufacturing) industries showed a gain of nearly 1,300,000 workers and weekly pay rolls were approximately $51,500,000 greater.

Commissioner Isador Lubin, of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, reports that in 1935 the wholesale prices of all commodities was 80 per cent of the 1926 average; for 1936 it was 80.8 per cent; for the week ended January 23 it was 85.3 per cent.

The Federal Reserve Board reports that the average price of Government bonds in 1935 was 106; for 1935 it was 107; the 1935 average for municipal bonds was 109.4; for 1936 it was 117.8; the 1935 average for corporate bonds was 88.6; for 1936 it was 97.5 The average price of 20 issues of preferred stock in 1935 was 133.8; it was 138.9 in 1936.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau reports that in the six months ended 1934 the Treasury collected $1,845,000,000; in the same period of 1936 the Treasury collected $2,158,000,000. In 1935 new and refunding capital issues of $4,699,000,000 were floated; in 1936 the total was $6,215,000,000, with Federal agencies showing a substantial decrease.

The Commerce Department in its "Survey of Current Business" gives figures of hourly wages in 25 manufacturing industries which show that the average rate for skilled male workers has increased from 66.2 cents for the year 1935 to 71 cents in December, 1936; that the average hourly rate for unskilled male labor has increased from 49.4 cents in 1935 to 51.6 in December last and for female workers from an average of 43.4 cents an hour in 1935 to 43.6 cents in December last.

And these same figures show that the average number of hours these factory employes worked in 1934 was 34.7; in 1935, 37.2 and last year, 39.6 hours. Average weekly wages in these 25 manufacturing industries have increased from $17.71 in 1933, to $20.12 in 1934, to $22.28 in 1935, to $24.61 last year, with the average for last December at $26.62. In many industries, as Secretary Roper has pointed out, hourly wages are now higher than in the boom days of 1929.

One could go on for an hour or more citing such evidence from official Government reports—and not alone on the material or financial side, but in the way of increased educational facilities, improved health conditions, more and better homes. Surely the record does not show that this country has been retrogressing since the Supreme Court struck down the NRA.

Nor has agriculture retrogressed since the court in January last year invalidated AAA. Wholesale farm prices in December, 1935, as computed by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, were 78.3 per cent of the 1926 average; in December, 1936, they were 88.5 per cent, with advances being recorded this year.

In view of these facts how can the Administration assert that the Supreme Court has proved to be such a barrier to social and economic progress that it must be packed at once? And what is the impending emergency that makes unwise a delay of a year or so that would be required for orderly amendment of the Constitution? Or is it that these contentions have no more foundation than the argument about congestion of Federal court dockets?

Tax on Sugar, Quota Is Asked By President

Excise Levy Would Yield $100,000,000 Yearly, Roosevelt Says.

New sugar legislation, involving the quota system and an excise tax of three-fourths of a cent a pound on raw sugar was recommended yesterday by President Roosevelt in a message to Congress.

Referring to exploitation of the quota provisions of the Jones-Costigan act at the end of the year, and existence of "the public problems" which have resulted from invalidation of the processing tax on sugar and ending of benefit payments to producers, the President called for consideration of substitute legislation.

He said he was "definitely advised that such a tax would not increase the average cost of sugar to consumers.

Hundred Million Yearly.

The tax would yield $100,000,000 yearly, it was estimated in the message, from which benefit payments to the producers could be resumed.

Special consideration would be given the small producers, under the President's suggestions, the message urging that they be assured "an equitable share of the benefits offered by the program."

"In this connection," the message said, "I suggest also that you consider the advisability of providing for payments at rates for family-size farms, higher than those applicable to large operating units."

The President thus acted for the first time to provide a tax to replace the processing levies which were thrown out by the Supreme Court decision invalidating the Agricultural Adjustment Act. Government attorneys are said to have given assurance that the sugar tax would be entirely legal.

Urges Labor, Wage Standards.

Provisions on labor and wage standards should be worked into the bill, the President said in a passage in which he upheld the principle "that an industry which desires the protection afforded by a quota system, or a tariff, should be expected to guarantee that it will be a good employer."

"I recommend therefore," he said, "that the prevention of child labor, and the payment of wages of not less than minimum standards, be included among the condition for receiving a Federal payment."

Protection for consumers also was called for in a suggested provision "to prevent any possible restriction of the supply of sugar that would result in prices to consumers in excess of those reasonably necessary, together with conditional payments to producers, to maintain the domestic industry as a whole and to make the production of sugar beets and sugar cane as profitable as the production of the principal other agricultural crops."

The message urged that there be no decrease in the share of other countries in the total quotas, in order that expansion of markets for American exports might be protected.

Hawaii Fears Reduction.

In this connection, some concern was felt immediately in Hawaii, lest the quota from that "off-shore" territory be reduced as a consequence of a current drive by mainland beet sugar producers and Florida and Louisiana cane growers to obtain larger quotas. The Associated Press reported from Honolulu leaders there would press efforts to obtain for Hawaii definite final classification as part of the domestic sugar industry.

Indications that separate bills would be sought for enacting the taxes and providing benefit payments was given by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace to the Associated Press. The Supreme Court condemned the AAA legislation which linked tax and benefit payments.

The Secretary previously has said that continuation, without the processing tax, of the sugar quota system, which keeps prices here above those in other countries, gave processors in this country extra profits in which the growers did not share.

Cuban Industrialists Alarmed.

Havana, March 1 (AP).—Cuban sugar men tonight said they considered President Roosevelt's proposal of a three-fourths of a cent a pound tax on raw sugar a severe blow against this country's sugar industry.

They asserted that, in addition to levying a tax on the industry which is the foundation of the island's economic structure, it would violate the Cuban-American reciprocal trade treaty under which Cuba has regained gradually her economic equilibrium.

Roosevelt Sugar Tax Message

Text of President Roosevelt's message to Congress recommending imposition of a .75-cent per pound tax on sugar and enactment of a sugar quota system:

The expiration on December 31, 1937, of the quota provisions of the Jones-Costigan act and public resolution No. 109, of June 19, 1936, and the existence of the public problems which have arisen as a result of discontinuance of the processing tax on sugar and benefit payments to sugar-cane producers, make it desirable that the Congress consider the enactment of new legislation with respect to sugar. The Jones-Costigan act has been useful and effective and it is my belief that its principles should again be made effective.

I therefore recommend to the Congress the enactment of the sugar quota system, and its necessary complements, which will restore the operation of the principles on which the Jones-Costigan act was based. In order to accomplish this purpose adequate safeguards would be required to protect the interests of each group concerned. As a safeguard for the protection of consumers I recommend that provision be made to prevent any possible restriction of the supply of sugar that would result in prices to consumers in excess of those reasonably necessary, together with conditional payments to producers, to maintain the domestic industry as a whole and to make the production of sugar beets and sugar cane as profitable as the production of the principal other agricultural crops. In order to protect the expansion of markets for American exports, I recommend that no decrease be made in the share of other countries in the total quotas.

It is also highly desirable to continue the policy, which was inherent in the Jones-Costigan act, of effectuating the principle that an industry which desires the protection afforded by a quota system, or a tariff, should be expected to guarantee that it will be a good employer. I recommend, therefore, that the prevention of child labor, and the payment of wages of not less than minimum standards, be included among the conditions for receiving a Federal payment.

I recommend that adequate provision be made to protect the right of both new and old producers of small acreages of sugar beets and sugar cane to an equitable share of the benefits offered by the program. In this connectoin I suggest also that you consider the advisability of providing for payments at rates for family-size farms higher than those applicable to large operating units.

Quotas influence the price of sugar through the control of supply; consequently, under a quota regulation of the supply of sugar, a tax may be levied without causing any adverse effect, over a period of time, on the price paid by consumers.

I recommend to Congress the enactment of an excise tax at the rate of not less than .75-cent per pound of sugar, raw value. I am definitely advised that such a tax would not increase the average cost of sugar to consumers. An excise tax of this amount would yield approximately $100,000,000 per annum to the Treasury of the United States, which would make the total revenue from sugar more nearly commensurate with that obtained during the period 1922-1929. It is also estimated that the total income of foreign countries from the sale of sugar in the United States under the quota system would not be less than that obtained during 1935, and, like the total income of domestic sugar producers, it can be expected to increase in future years as our consumption requirements expand.

In considering the enactment of any tax the Congress has regard for its social and economic effects as well as its ability to raise revenue. The social and economic effects of an adequate excise tax on sugar are so important to the welfare of the various groups affected as to constitute a necessary complement to the quota system. For this reason I recommend that neither the quotas nor the tax should be operative alone.

of the whole transaction. So read, the end to be achieved is shown forth unmistakably as a payment, not a sale."

Thus Justice Cardozo ruled that the case came under the June, 1933, resolution abrogating gold-clause contracts and under the court's findings in the Norman versus B. & O. case.

"In the last analysis," Justice Cordozo asserted, "the case for the petitioner amounts to little more than this: That the effect of the resolution in its application to these leases is to make the value of the dollars fluctuate with variations in the weight and fineness of the monetary standard, and thus defeat the expectation of the parties that the standard would be constant and the value relatively stable."

"Such, indeed, is the effect and the covenant of the parties is to that extent abortive. But the disappointment of expectations and even the frustration of contracts may be a lawful exercise of power when expectation and contract are in conflict with the public welfare. 'Contracts may create rights of property, but when contracts deal with a subject which lies within the control of the Congress, they have a congenital infirmity. To that congenital infirmity this covenant succumbs."

Potential Torso Victims Warned

Cleveland, March 1 (AP).—Coroner S. R. Gerber warned police today that Cleveland's torso slayer may even now be making friends with his ninth victim.

The torso of the eighth victim—a woman—was found on the shore of Lake Erie less than a week ago. Police investigation was stalled today by the failure to find arms, legs and head of the body for possible identification.

The coroner, after studying the dismemberment of all eight bodies, reported today he believed all were beheaded by the same person.

New Taxation Seen if Housing Bill Is Passed

Wagner Measure Carries No Financing Plan, Says Morgenthau.

New taxes likely would be required should the Wagner housing bill be passed, it was indicated yesterday by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, who had been in conference with aides on the monetary requirements of the measure, introduced last week by Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), New York.

At the same time, the question of the extent to which the measure might be considered an Administration bill was raised again. It is known the general subject of low-cost housing still is the subject of conferences in various Administration circles.

At his press conference yesterday, Secretary Morgenthau said he and Treasury experts had been discussing the Wagner bill, adding that "long study" was required on a bill which involved $1,000,000,000 of Government securities. At a press conference last Thursday, the day following introduction of the bill, he remarked that he had known nothing of the measure's provisions prior to its introduction.

He pointed out then that the bill did not provide a method of financing the bonds called for, remarking that no provision was made for it in the President's budget for the coming fiscal year and adding that he could find no provision in the bill for new taxes.

"Will the bill mean new taxes?" he was asked yesterday.

"I refer you to the President's budget message," he replied. Asked whether he referred to that portion of the message which said that any new Government activity would mean new taxation, Morgenthau said he did.

The Wagner bill, also sponsored in the House by Representative Henry B. Steagall (Democrat), of Alabama, would create a United States Housing Authority to conduct a vast slum clearance and low-rent house building program for the next four years.

Legal Battle Opens On Chain-Store Act

Cambrigde, Md., Mar. 1 (AP).—The Federal Trades Commission and counsel for one of the Nation's largest chain-store grocery concerns locked legal horns here today in a test case of the Robinson-Patman "chain-store" act, passed at the last session of Congress.

The measure prohibits manufacturers from giving special discounts to quantity purchasers and gives the trades commission power to determine the quantity limits on which price reductions may be allowed.

The commission charges the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company with approximately 15,000 stores in the United States, violated provisions of the law by accepting discounts from the Phillips Packing Company, of Cambridge, two Phillips subsidiaries, and various other firms in Baltimore, New York and Maine.

Explorer, Recovering From Air Crash Injuries That Killed Husband, Will Go Into Belgian Congo in Search of Gorillas.

By the Associated Press.

Wichita, Kans., March 1.—Mrs. Martin Johnson is determined to "go it alone"—rejecting all proffers of companions—in backtracking the jungle trails she traveled with her famed explorer husband, who was killed in a California crash.

The reason? She wants to carry on her husband's work. And then, let her tell it, as she did today:

"I just couldn't stay over here in civilization more than six months. It's so noisy. Over in Africa it's so quiet and peaceful. You go to bed early and you get up feeling like doing a hard day's work."

Small, vivacious, Mrs. Johnson has the appearance of a girl half her 42 years. She has vitality and a buoyance, not to mention a complexion a college co-ed might envy. Her rapid recovery from injuries she suffered in the plane crash which killed Johnson amazed her physicians.

Despite that, she will have to use a wheel chair for at least a month; because of a fractured right knee, she tries to help herself around.

Mrs. Johnson hasn't made definite plans yet for her next trip other than that she is "going to the Belgian Cogno to capture a gorilla."

"Certainly I can do it," she said determinedly. "I know just how its done. We captured two once before."

When will she return to the United States to live? "Oh, some day when I grow old," she said.

Her lecture tour will keep her occupied until August.

When she starts for the Belgian Congo she wants it understood, she is taking "no one, absolutely no one" with her—that information is for the benefit of the thousands who have written her letters begging to be allowed to make a trip to Africa.

"One woman even wrote me she would divorce her husband so she would be free to go with me. Imagine."

Girl, 17, Files Suit For Annulment of 'Storm' Marriage

Suit for a marriage annulment was filed yesterday in Montgomery County Circuit Court at Rockville, Md., by Paul B. Gammie for his daughter, Doris Alice Gammie Aaron, of Takoma Park, Md.

The petition asserts that at the age of 17 in July, 1936, the girl visited with the family of Charles Aaron at the invitation of his sister. Prevented from returning home after a day and a night visit by a storm on Chesapeake Bay, she remained several days. While out riding with Aaron and James Blanche, the latter urged the couple to get married.

The girl replied that she had only known Aaron for six weeks and didn't want to marry him. Without her knowledge, the petition states, Blanche secured a marriage license for the couple. The girl was urged to marry Aaron by his sister and parents and was told that she had to get married since a license had been secured, the petition avers.

Following the marriage, July 29, 1936, she returned to her father's home and has resided there since.

Sit-Down Hinted As Club to Make Mt. Rainier Dry

A "sit-down" strike of 1,000 taxpaying "drys" if the delegation to the State Legislature does not grant Mount Rainier's request for a referendum on the liquor question was proposed last night by Town Councilman John Duever.

"This is a weapon that is being used successfully throughout the country," said Duever. "If we get 1,000 people to 'sit down' and refuse to pay taxes for about three and a half years we may get some action from the legislature."

No action was taken on Duever's suggestion. The town council is dry by a majority of 3 to 2.

of the request, denying it originated with him. He admitted, however, that the information will be received by the committee although he would not state for what purpose it would be used.

Maj. Donovan likewise would not admit that the information had been requested, but he said it will be turned over to the sub-committee.

"Why, that's nothing unusual," he said, "we gather that for the sub-committee every year."

Last year the District bill was reported to the House with a clause prohibiting any District employe from engaging in outside employment for pay if his District salary was $2,400 a year or more. The House at first passed it in the bill, but later voted it down when the conference report was made and after the Senate had raised the figure to $3,500.

Doctors, Teachers Protest.

Blanton told the House that it was aimed at preventing District judges and lawyers in the corporation counsel's office from teaching at law schools and physicians on the Health Department pay roll from engaging in private practice.

The proposal raised an immediate howl from Washington doctors and school teachers who asserted that it would stop them from even writing articles for magazines.

Information was obtained by the committee that some judges were earning $500 a year or more, in addition to their salaries, from teaching law classes.

Representative Collins yesterday made no effort to conceal his sympathy with such a limitation.

"I think it ought to apply to all District employes regardless of salary," he said.

Includes All Workers.

The survey was made to include every District employe, permanent and per diem, and the memorandum sent by Donovan to all department heads ordered them to get statements from workers and to report to the auditor last night. The entire survey, however, has not been completed.

First intimation of the subcommittee's intention came in an article carried in The Post Sunday on an order bearing the signature of Maj. Brown directing inspectors and precinct commanders to have all policemen file statements listing additional compensation.

Police statements are being submitted to Chief Clerk Howard E. Crawford. Only a few replies, he said, had been received last night from the precincts.

A number of policemen in the uniform division have been reported practicing law in their spare time. One officer instructs a college class while not on duty.

Women of Turkey May Serve in War

Ankara, Turkey, March 1 (AP).—Irrespective of sex, all Turks between the ages of 16 and 65 must be soldiers in case of war, under a bill submitted to the Great National Assembly of the Council of Ministers.

Married women with children will be shown "consideration," but physically fit girls and spinsters will be called up unconditionally. Presumably they would serve in anti-aircraft or hospital units.

Hobo's Confession Solves Argentine 'Lindbergh Case'

By the Associated Press.

Mar Del Plata, March 1.—Argentina's "Lindbergh case" was solved tonight, police said, when a dull-eyed hobo confessed kidnaping and killing Baby Eugenio Pereyra Iraolo.

Police announced Jose Gancedo had admitted the crime after five days of questioning.

A detective, garbed as a fellow hobo, or "linyero," posed as a prisoner. He obtained the confession, writing an end to one of the greatest man hunts in the history of this country.

The 2-year-old child, son of a wealthy family, disappeared from the family's vast estancia Wednesday night. His body, unclothed and with arms crossed on the breast, was found in a pigpen on the estate Saturday. There was evidence he had been strangled.

Parents of Crater Missing in South

New York, March 1 (AP).—The mysterious case of the disappearance of Supreme Court Justice Joseph Force Crater, missing since August, 1930, took on another puzzling angle today when Surrogate Court action revealed his parents could not be found either.

The action was a petition brought by the missing justice's wife, Mrs. Stella M. Crater, to settle matters of allowance and rent for her parents-at-law, whose last known address was Apopka, Fla.

The parents, Frank E. Crater, 75, and Lelia M. Crater, formerly lived in Hershey, Pa., and the elder Crater conducted a produce business in Easton, Pa.

The father retired and moved to Florida when Justice Crater promised to buy a home and care for his parents financially.

Jury-Fixing Charge Holds Ex-Policeman

Coal Operator Also Arrested in Inquiry After Third Degree Trial.

By the Associated Press.

Somerset, Pa., March 1.—State police arrested a former Somerset policeman today on charges of attempting to influence the jury which convicted Trooper Stacey Gunderman of second degree murder for killing Frank C. Monaghan.

The arrest of R. E. Buckman, now employed as a private detective, came as opposing attorneys said they expected to complete the jury tomorrow which will try State Policeman Anthony Sanute, 35, second of seven Uniontown law officers charged with beating Monaghan to death during a "third degree" last September 12.

Justice of the Peace H. S. Whipperman issued warrants against Buckman and Thomas Courtney, a Connellsville, Pa., coal operator, alleging embracery, corrupt solicitation and bribery. Following his arrest, Courtney and Buckman denied the charges.

Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti, who prosecuted Gunderman, said Courtney and Buckman had been involved in an unsuccessful attempt to bribe a court attendant and "fix" two jurors.

Sanute was Gunderman's superior the morning the State charged the 64-year-old Uniontown hotel man was beaten to death in the Fayette County detectives' room to force his confession to cutting Detective John C. Wall.

He pleaded innocent in a low voice before Supreme Court Justice George W. Maxey, presiding on a change of venue order.

Margiotti announced he would ask a first degree verdict with the death penalty for Sanute. Prospective jurors were asked if they were opposed to capital punishment.

Awaiting their turn in court to answer the State's charges they were involved in the "dark ages" slaying of Monaghan, were District Attorney James A. Reilly, Assistant District Attorney Harry W. Byrne, County Detective Wilbert Minerd, J. A. Hann, a former detective, and Night Chief of Police Charles Malik.

The Fayette County (Uniontown) grand jury indicted five others on charges of "concealing true facts" about the death.

F. B. Stevens Dies; Was Treasury Aide

Frank B. Stevens, a clerk in the savings bond division of the Treasury Department, died shortly after reporting for work yesterday in his office at 1510 H street northwest. Death was due to a heart attack, according to the attending physician.

Fellow employes reported Stevens entered the office in good spirits, but about 10 a. m. complained of feeling ill. He was taken to the emergency room in the building and Dr. Murray was summoned, but he died before the physician arrived.

Mr. Stevens, who lived at 1639 Newton street, is survived by his wife and two daughters, Mrs. Dorothy Wisocker and Miss Frances Stevens, and a nephew, Rollin Stevens. He had been employed in the Treasury Department since August 17, 1936.

Boeing Transport Fleet Begins Detroit Flights

A fleet of 200-mile-per-hour Boeing transport planes yesterday began the Washington-Detroit flights of Pennsylvania-Central Airlines, according to announcement by W. J. Austin, vice president of the airline.

The planes, completely soundproofed, have cruising speeds of 189 miles an hour and will maintain full flight on one of the two engines. The seven-ton airliners are powered by supercharged Wasp engines, providing a total of 1,500 horsepower. They will be used on the route between Washington, Pittsburgh, Akron, Cleveland and Detroit, and later will be put on the Detroit-Grand Rapids-Milwaukee flights.

Inter-Company RelationDenied By Utility Head

SEC Counsel Tries to Prove Williams Stimulated Own Stock.

By the Associated Press.

Counsel for the Securities Commission sought to prove yesterday that one company controlled by Harrison Williams, public utilities man, stipulated the stock of another he dominates.

Williams is the one-time bicycle manufacturer who ran an original investment of $2,072,000 up to holdings worth $612,000,000 in 1929.

He is being questioned in the commission's investigation to determine whether legislation is needed to regulate investment trusts.

David Schenker, commission counsel, demanded to know if the price of common stock in Williams' North American Co. had not been stimulated as the result of $131,000,000 of purchases by the North American Securities Corporation, which the magnate also controls.

"Apparently not," smiled the witness.

He said his securities company's purchases were made chiefly to "maintain an orderly market."

"It was never our idea to buy excessive amounts of stocks unless the market was inclined to go down."

Williams added that purchases were made to counteract declines influenced by stock dividends and to put his stock in line with stocks of other public utilities companies.

"Do you mean to say," Schenker demanded at one point, "that stock purchases of more than $131,000,000—approximately 18 per cent of all the North American common handled—had no effect on its market price?"

"Apparently not," the witness replied.

In response to further questions, Williams said that Cities Service and American Telephone & Telegraph had carried on somewhat similar operations—buying in the market and selling to the public.

"A. T. & T. stock during the comparable period," he asserted "showed a performance close to our stock."

Rites to Be Today For Mrs. Phillips

Funeral services for Mrs. Bessie Ellen Phillips, who died Sunday at her home, 3531 Fourteenth street northwest, will be held today at the S. H. Hines funeral parlors, Fourteenth and Harvard streets. The Rev. Russell J. Clinchy of Mt. Pleasant Congregational Church, will officiate.

Mrs. Phillips, wife of Harry C. Phillips of the H. C. Phillips Advertising Co., had been ill more than a year. Born in Randolph, Vt., she came to Washington with her family in 1910. A member of Mt. Pleasant Congregational Church, she had been actively associated with the citizens forum and other civic organizations on Columbia Heights.

Besides her husband Mrs. Phillips is survived by three children, Kathryn T. Phillips, Mrs. Hester G. Moore and Clinton Phillips; a sister Alice G. Woodward, of Washington; two brothers, Dr. Walter C. Woodward, of Seattle, Wash., and Guy Woodward, of Wolf Point, Mont., and four grandchildren.

Crop Insurance Validity Doubted

By the Associated Press.

Senator Pope (Democrat), Idaho, said last night that it is doubtful whether the present Supreme Court would uphold the Administration's proposed crop insurance law.

In a radio address, he added that the legislation is necessary to avert financial ruin of farmers stricken by natural catastrophies.

Pope has announced his support of the President's proposal to name new justices to the Supreme Court.

After outlining the bill to provide insurance to wheat farmers next year, he said:

"It is expected that within a short time insurance will be extended to a number of other commodities—perhaps corn, cotton and tobacco."

He described the proposed system as entirely self-supporting, excepting $10,000,000 annual administration costs.

Teagle Plans to Rejoin Roper's Advisory Unit

New York, March 1 (AP).—Walter C. Teagle, president of Standard Oil Co., of New Jersey, has accepted an invitation to rejoin the business advisory council, it was disclosed at the company's office today.

The council is a committee which meets with the Secretary of Commerce for discussion of business and economic problems.

Business circles interpreted Secretary of Commerce Roper's invitation to Teagle as a step to re-estalish close co-operation between business and the Administration.

Diversion of Gas Tax Assailed by Engineer

Charles M. Upham, consulting engineer of the Maryland State Roads Commission, told members of the Silver Spring Young Men's Democratic Club last night that diversion of the gasoline taxes must be stopped immediately if the State roads are to remain safe for travel.

Another speaker at the meeting, held at Jesup Blair Community House, was Wilton T. Allen, Montgomery County park commissioner. He told of the development and growth of the park system in Maryland.

Fuller Brush Man Loses Case in Supreme Court

By the Associated Press.

The Supreme Court turned thumbs down yesterday on a Fuller brush salesman's plea that he be permitted to canvass the housewives of Green River, Wyo.

J. L. Bunger, described by his attorneys as a "quiet, courteous and orderly" salesman, contended that a Green River ordinance forbidding house-to-house canvassing was invalid.

But the high court declined to review the case.

Robinson, Burke Tangle in Hot Debate Over 'Prejudice.'

down the bridge upon which we have crossed the chasm."

Representative John W. Flannagan, Virginia Democrat, said in a radio address that judicial hampering of social and economic reforms is a fact that "you can't wipe out by hollering dictator, by imputing sinister motives to the President, and wrapping the Supreme Court in a mantel of holiness."

A new radio assault was broadcast by Representative William Lemke, of North Dakota, third-party candidate in the last Presidential campaign, who declared Supreme Court judges in the last 50 years have been "more liberal and progressive" than our Presidents, and charged that "lobbying" by Administration officials is "more dangerous to our form of government than the work of "paid lobbyists."

To Call Frankfurter.

Senate opponents of the court program meanwhile made known they will ask that Prof. Felix Frankfurter, of Harvard, whose views are widely reflected in the New Deal legal staff; Judge Samuel I. Roseman, of the New York Supreme Court, who figured in Administration conferences on the plan, and Donald Richberg, former NRA chieftain, be called at Senate court hearings opening March 10. Heads of the National Grange and the farmers' union, right and left wing farm organizations, also will be asked to testify. Administration spokesmen have indicated Attorney General Homer Cummings, principal author of the court bill, will open testimony for the plan.

Senate Majority Leader Robinson yesterday repeated "propaganda" charges and read from a letter he received in an envelope bearing the return address of Theo Mahn, Alma, Nebr., but addressed from Wichita, Kans., and signed "Gerald B. Winrod."

Cites "Klan Appeal."

The message, which Robinson said "sounds like one of the old appeals from the Ku Klux Klan of years gone by," was entitled "The Crisis Hour Is Here."

"Dear Christian friend," Robinson said it read.

"You have been reading in the newspapers about Mr. Roosevelt's shocking demand that he be allowed to pack the United States Supreme Court with radicals who would serve as his personal puppets. This is the most ominous development toward the dictatorship ever to occur in the history of our country. * * * Press dispatches from both Moscow and Rome (the seats of Communism and Fascism) are praising his attempts to render the Supreme Court impotent. * * * "

"The Defenders Magazine has the largest and most select group of Protestant readers in the United States. It is therefore natural that we should express ourselves in unison during the present crisis. * * *

"Mr. Roosevelt virtually controls both the Congress and the Senate. If he succeeds in usurping the powers of the courts * * * the end of Christian Americanism is * * * in sight. * * *"

Asks "Daily Prayer."

"I plead with you to make this a subject of daily prayer. Pray for a Nation-wide awakening . . .

"Robert A. Taft, son of the former President, speaks correctly when he says 'Mr. Roosevelt's plan is an attempt to secure personal control of the entire Government.'"

The letter said six blanks were inclosed entitled "Hands Off the Supreme Court," and readers were asked to sign and forward three of them to members of Congress, and give the other three to some friend. Robinson said slips in the letter urged recipients to write to Senators George W. Norris and Burke, of Nebraska. The letter was signed "Yours in Christ."

Calls "Brother" Dishonest.

Robinson said:

"The 'brother in Christ' who wrote that article is neither honest and he is not a brother in anything worth recognizing in the country."

Robinson invited any Senator who thought the letter contained a "fair argument" to interrupt him, and Senator Burke broke in to ask if Robinson meant either Norris or himself would be "influenced by the letter." Robinson said he did not "intimate" anything.

"Does he consider the propaganda to which he has just referred any more dangerous to the free expression of opinion in this country or the ability of Senators or Representatives to make up their own minds, than the announced radio address of the Works Progress Administrator (Hopkins) tonight on the other side of the question, appealing to the thousands upon thousands of WPA workers over the country?" asked Burke.

Cites "Right to Speak."

Robinson replied he did not know what Hopkins was going to say, but he thought he had "the right to speak on the subject."

The Nebraskan said he did not mean he approved of some of the expressions used in the letter. Senator Norris suggested the letter had been sent for Robinson's information. Norris said Mahn "is a perfectly honorable, respectable citizen of Harlan County, Nebraska," and "Mr. Roosevelt had no more loyal supporter in that State than Mr. Mahn."

"Perhaps the Senator is right," said Robinson, "and if he is I owe an apology to Mr. Mahn."

Norris "Condemns" Letter.

Norris said that because he had come to Mahn's defense, he did not want anyone to think he was defending the letter.

"I condemn it as much as does the Senator," Norris said.

New talk of "compromise" on the court plan during the day centered around a proposal to enlarge the court by one or two justices, rather than six, and around various proposals for constitutional amendments. Close Senate division over the President's plan changed only slightly during the day. Opponents intimated that Senator George L. Radcliffe, Maryland Democrat, now on the "noncommittal" list, was against the six-judge enlargement, but might approve a smaller increase. Should Radcliffe commit himself against the present plan he would be the forty-fourth Senator claimed by the opposition.

Hopkins concluded his speech (printed elsewhere in this paper), by declaring "those who oppose this plan are not afraid for democracy. They are afraid of democracy."

Clark Asks "High Plane."

Senator Clark, in his speech (also printed in another column), appealed for discussion of the controversy on a "high plane," and avoidance of "vituperation, personal abuse or personal appeals." Opposing the plan, he referred to the Supreme Court as "the guardian of the bill of rights" and "the protection of the liberties of the individual and of minorities."

Representative Lemke, in his radio address warned against basing judgments either "upon false and malicious propaganda, or * * * upon statements of salaried lobbyists who are under the control and domination of the President."

"If officials of the executive departments can be let loose in hordes upon members of Congress, with threats of withdrawal of patronage, relief and work projects, then our form of Government has ceased to exist," said Lemke.

Representative Flannagan, in his speech, said "dictatorship" charges were concocted in "deperation" by opponents of the plan to "frighten the people."

"The answer the ordinary man would give to the charge," said Flannagan, "would be to laugh in your face."

Petitioners Urge Red Rider Repeal

While Senate and House conferees on the red rider repeal marked time, the Parent-Teacher and Home and School Associations of Washington yesterday sent scores of petitions to members of Congress asking for elimination rather than modification of the rider.

Repeal of the law was asked on three grounds, as follows:

"1. The Board of Education, appointed by the justices of the District Court, has given every evidence of upholding the authority vested in it.

"2. All employes of the school system are obliged to take the same oath as that of members of Congress to 'uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States.'

"3. Congressional hearings have proved that no employe of the school system has been guilty of teaching or advocating communism. Had any employe been found guilty the Board of Education, charged by law with the supervision of the courses of study in the schools, would have dismissed him immediately for violation of his oath of office."

Mrs. Guy M. Neely Will Be Buried Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Rebecca Dunnington Neely, who died Sunday at her home, 4609 Fifteenth street northwest, will be held at 11 a. m. today at her home. The Rev. Dr. John Compton Ball, of the Metropolitan Baptist Church, will officiate. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. Neeley, wife of Guy Minick Neely, treasurer of the American Building Association, in addition to her husband is survived by a son, Lieut. G. Morton Neely, U. S. N., retired; a brother, Abner Dunnington; four sisters, Blanche Dunnington, Mrs. Robert Otterback, Mrs. S. G. Nottingham and Mrs. Nelson Gapen, and two grandsons.

Nazi Students Confess Stabbing College Head

Iasi, Rumania, March 1 (AP).—Traian Bratu, rector of Iasi University, was stabbed and critically injured today. Three students arrested and charged with the crime admitted membership in the "Iron Guard," militant Nazi organization.

Bratu is a leader of the Peasants' Party. He has been an outstanding opponent of the "Iron Guard's" Fascist program. Soldiers were ordered to occupy the students' home.

R. T. Platt, 77, Funeral Is Today

Funeral services for Robert Tuttle Platt, 77, who died Saturday at his home, 1705 Euclid street, will be held at 2 p. m. today at Gawler's Funeral Chapel, 1756 Pennsylvania avenue northwest. The Rev. Paul Wilbur, of the Church of the Incarnation, will officiate.

Platt, born in Augusta, Ga., had been employed by the George Muth Co. here for 17 years. At the time of his death he was an assistant floor manager.

He is survived by his wife, Josephine G. Platt; a daughter, Miss Louise R. Platt, and a sister, Miss Annie S. Platt, of Augusta.

Mrs. E. O. Watson Dies At Virginia Home of Son

Mrs. E. Olin Watson died yesterday at the home of her son, C. Fletcher Watson, in Franklin Park, Va. She was the widow of Dr. E. Olin Watson, a Methodist clergyman and former editor of the Southern Christian Advocate, of Columbia, S. C.

Surviving Mrs. Watson are her son and three daughters, Miss Annie Watson, Miss Ruth Watson and Mrs. W. A. Von Doren, jr.

Burial will be at Leesville, S. C.

Lehman Leads Fight Against Cut in Relief

Roosevelt Supporter to Head Governors in Protest Here Saturday.

Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York, close personal friend and stanch supporter of President Roosevelt, will lead a delegation of governors to Washington Saturday to protest against the Administration policy of reducing WPA relief rolls.

The scheduled conference is an outgrowth of a meeting arranged by Gov. Lehman and held Sunday at his New York home. Following it a long telegram was sent to the President, protesting the scheduled reduction and asking a meeting to discuss suggestions for an "efficient and sound" solution of the unemployment relief problem.

Those attending included Governors Harry Horner, Illinois; Elmer Benson, Minnesota; Charles F. Hurley, Massachusetts; Robert E. Quinn, Rhode Island, and Philip F. La Follette, Wisconsin.

Denounces Cuts.

Meanwhile, in New York, the Methodist Federation for Social Service issued a manifesto denouncing the prospective WPA reduction and held the cut would be unnecessary "if the Adminsitration were willing to adequately tax the beneficiaries of the profit system."

The Methodist Federation blamed "economic royalists" for pressure on the Administration to bring about relief retrenchment, and called upon the clergy to oppose them. It said that 775,000 workers had been dropped from WPA rolls since February of 1936 and that plans were under way to drop 600,000 more by next June.

It named "balance-the-budget New Dealers, the Liberty League and the United States Chamber of Commerce" as seeking relief cuts, the Associated Press reported, the statement adding:

"The wealthy and the privileged invite from the pulpit the condemnation given by Scripture to those who see their brethen in need and show them no compassion."

Has "Church Blessing."

The federation has as its president Bishop Francis J. McConnell, of New York, while Harry F. Ward, social ethics teacher in the Union Theological Seminary of New York, is secretary. It does not necessarily speak for the Methodist Episcopal Church but an official was quoted as saying it "has the blessing" of the General Conference of the church.

Denunciation of the proposed WPA cut also was reiterated by the Workers Alliance of America in a statement here. David Lasser, the president, said there would be widespread strikes and disorders if the reduction is carried out.

$10 Tickets Popular For Victory Dinner

Tickets at $10 a throw for the Young Democratic Clubs of the District Victory Dinner Thursday night at the Willard last night were riding a "bullish" market as hundreds of Federal employes who were paid yesterday planked down the admission fee.

At the same time hotel officials indicated the demand for waiters to handle the Victory Dinner throngs at the Willard (and at the Mayflower where the senior Democrats are tossing a $100 a plate party) far exceeded the local supply.

Emergency calls were being dispatched to hotels in New York, Philadelphia, Richmond, Baltimore and even Cumberland, Md., for reinforcements of waiters and bus boys.

Coppersmith Joins Romany Ancestors In Colorful Rites

Joseph John Alvarez, 38, joined his Gypsy ancestors yesterday at a colorful funeral ceremony here.

Starting at the Sergeon funeral home, at 1011 Seventh street northwest, thence to St. Patrick's Church for mass and continuing to Mt. Olivet Cemetery for burial, the procession was made up of scores of mourning Gypsies from New York, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Maryland and the Carolinas, as well as Washington.

A Peruvian-born coppersmith who came to this country as a child, Alvarez was one of the six sons of Gregory John Alvarez, a Gypsy tribal leader. Since Friday morning his body had lain in state at Sergeon's, where his parents, widow, children and friends kept a day-and-night vigil.

A brass band played as the father sternly directed the obsequies, controlling wailing women and obstreperous children.

The family Alvarez came to Washington about two months ago. They lived in the 900 block Fifth street northwest.

"Back in 1898, and up until a few years ago, before the scum from the United States adopted Alaska as a sanctuary, one could * * * see clothing, goods of all kinds, and even watches and purses, lying on top of the owner's piles of goods—and they were as safe as if in his pocket * * *" the editorial said.

Trade Pact Authority Extended by Roosevelt

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt signed yesterday legislature extending for 3 years from next June 12, his authority to negotiate reciprocal trade agreements with foreign nations.

Under the new law, such agreements do not require Senate ratification.

The orignal act, which expires June 12, was put forward by the Administration in 1934 "as a means of assisting in restoring the American standard of living" through increased foreign trade.

G-Men Enter Alexandria's Slaying Case

New Information Spurs Plan for Inquiry; Jury to Meet Friday.

on the gas and speeded away. We couldn't get close enough to read the license number.

"We saw the car once or twice after Luther disappeared. The driver always acted the same, slowing down and peering into at our house. Then he stopped coming. We never saw the car again."

Acting Coroner William Wilkins said yesterday: "There is something bad in this case. As soon as I saw the body I knew there had been foul play. I'm unable yet to disclose what my examination showed. But you may be certain it was not a suicide."

Evidence from a score of witnesses will be taken by the grand jury Friday, with Commonwealth's Attorney Albert V. Bryan conducting the questioning. It was hinted at police headquarters that interrogation of two important witnesses will "make or break" the case. Police felt that if they can procure information of an as yet undisclosed nature, they may clear up the mystery, which has all Alexandria talking. If they fail to get the testimony they expect, they indicated the case may lapse into an unsolved mystery.

Foxworth, of the Department of Justice, has been following the case since little Robert Cummins found his dead brother's skeleton last Saturday.

"It seems impossible to me," Foxworth said yesterday, "that the body could not have lain so close to human habitations in the middle of summer without being detected. In this part of the country, where buzzards are so common, they would have found it a few hours after death and their presence would have been noticed by searchers."

Investigators had previously been told that the bloodhounds used for the original search had been unable to find the body. Relatives stated that the hounds had been used in a wide search and "hadn't found anything."

It was not until yesterday afternoon that the Cummins family described the hunt with the hounds and disclosed that the dogs had gone to the highway, where they had stopped. It had not occurred to them that the direction the dogs had taken was of any special significance.

What the coroner knows about the case will probably be told at the inquest, set for Friday. Dr. Wilkins said yesterday, in denial of reports that he had issued a certificate of accidental death: "I have issued no report on the case of any kind. The case is wide open. I'm not going to close it until we get more evidence."

At the time Luther's body was found, the coroner stated, it was his belief that the boy had been killed, possibly by a fiend. Then as yesterday he would not elaborate on his findings.

The dead boy's father Sunday expressed an opinion that Luther had been kept in Washington or Richmond, or some other city, until a considerable period after July 16. He explained that he and many others had thoroughly searched the swamp, which is rather small, and in fact had looked into the very thicket where the skeleton was discovered. "It positively was not there at the time the search was on," the father said.

Game Warden W. Harry Johnson, of Arlington, stated yesterday that he had been over the ground several times during the summer in the course of his duties and that the body was not there last summer. Mrs. Cummins and several others who searched sporadically during the seven months Luther has been missing, were certain the body was not there last summer.

Meanwhile arrangements for the funeral to be held this afternoon were completed yesterday by the dead boy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin D. Cummins. Six members of the Boys Club Band will act as pallbearers for their dead chum in burial services at Glenwood Cemetery.

War Flier Gets Commerce Unit Aviation Post

Bureau Shake-up Follows Fagg's Appointment to Succeed Vidal.

position as European aeronautical adviser.

Though Fagg said his only definite plans for the next two months were a study of the bureau's internal organization, widespread changes in personnel may result under the new regime.

Though the appointment of the 40-year-old Northwestern law professor and founder of the Air Law Institute had been frequently rumored, its announcement yesterday came as a surprise. Sunday night, several hours after Vidal had made public his resignation, Secretary Roper stated he had not yet accepted the resignation. His letter of acceptance, dated yesterday, was written only a few hours before the new personnel was announced.

Immediate effects of the new appointments did not appear on the surface of Roper's announcement. It seems probable, however, that Schroeder will play an active part in actual contacts with commercial flying, that Fagg would devote himself to important administrative technique, working closely with Col. J. Munroe Johnson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce in charge of transportation activities.

Roper's announcement stated: "Congress, through adequate appropriations for 1938 now under consideration, will enable us to plan in a larger way for carrying forward further domestic development with proper attention to the promotion of safety for life and property. . . . One of the most important features in this development is the study and aplication of the regulations as they apply to field service. Fagg has been devoting much time to this responsibility and is unusually well prepared for this phase of the work and for effectively utilizing the increased appropriation."

With Ninety-second in France.

The new director, while no longer an active flyer, is well known in legal circles for his work in founding the Air Law Institute at Northwestern University. For the last four years he has been a legal expert for the bureau, codifying its air regulations, and has spent most of the last year in Washington.

During the war he served as a second lieutenant in the Ninety-second Pursuit Squadron in France. He was graduated from Northwestern Law School in 1927. Two years later the Air Law Institute was founded, Fagg becoming managing director.

He has been a member of the Illinois Aeronautics Commission since its organization in 1931; secretary of the National Association of State Aviation Officials since 1932; member of the American section of the International Technical Committee of Aerial Legal Experts, now meeting in Berne, Switzerland, and member of the American Bar Association's committee on aeronautical law.

Is Crash Expert.

The new assistant director, thin, towering Rudolph W. Schroeder, has figured prominently as the bureau's accident inspector. He has been active in the inquiries into seven recent plane disasters which have claimed 43 lives. Four of the accidents were attributed primarily to pilots' errors.

Regarded as one of the country's ablest aeronautic officials, Schroeder is a former Army engineer and test pilot. As an Army pilot he established several world altitude records. He was early associated with the Henry Ford aviation interests, and still si an active pilot. Soft-spoken and well liked by airline executives, he has consistently advocated increased safety devices for commercial planes.

At the time of yesterday's announcement, he was in Chicago, following an investigation of the San Francisco Bay air crash that claimed 11 lives February 9.

Wife Slept in Church, Cleric Seeks Divorce

Evansville, Ind., March 1 (AP). The Rev. James P. Sandefur, 22, filed suit today for a divorce against his wife, June, 19, alleging she made faces while he preached at the Primitive Baptist Church and that she went to sleep during services.

The minister's complaint also charged his wife with taking a quantity of his property, including three pairs of pants and nine chickens.

State Welfare Head Hurt In Argument Over Bill

Indianapolis, March 1 (AP).—Wayne Coy, acting State welfare administrator, was cut about the face and eyes at the statehouse today when struck during an argument over a welfare bill pending in the General Assembly. # Music Teachers Applaud Zetlin Concert Here

Stephanie Schehatovich Plays Accompaniment for Program.

The program played Sunday at the Sulgrave Club by Emanuel Zetlin before the Washington Music Teachers Association brought applause from an audience which seemed to grasp his revealing of the musical import throughout well-chosen selections from violinistic literature.

A Washington colleague of the association, in addition to his work in Philadelphia and New York, by virtue of some nine years of local pedagogic activity Zetlin is an individual who maintains a position of distinction in both the practice and "preaching" of his art. Collaborating was Stephanie Schehatovich, pianist, whose sensitive perceptions brought to subservience or prominence the almost equal responsibilities of the music.

The polished clarity of the Mozart A major concerto was succeeded by the Chausson Poeme, which is music writing of a differnt sort, the unusual intervals of its melodic line blending with a delicate harmonic background and played with fitting tonal effects by both artists. The Richard Strauss sonata, Op. 18, goes even further in richness of content, the ardor of its conception matched by the vitality of Mr. Zetlin's technique.

The program progressed backward chronologically as to the composer of the Pugnani largo expressivo, but became contemporaneous in the expressive interpretation it received, contrasting sharpiy with the robustness of the Chopin-Kreisler mazurka and with the excitement of the two Brahms-Joachim Hungarian dances. A transcription by one of his own teachers, Leopold Auer, the Beethoven Turkish march from the "Ruins of Athens," closed the program.

Zetlin is able to turn his pedagogic faculties of analysis and criticism to his own needs by meticulous regard for technical excellence of virtuosic caliber, while drawing upon his inner resources to extract suitably and to the full the range of emotional expression in the compositions.

District Starts Drive to Curb Traffic Deaths

Jaywalkers, Light Jumpers Especial Targets in New Campaign.

Test Jaywalker Case.

Van Duzer said every effort will be made to force pedestrians to cross congested streets on proper traffic signals. If necessary, he added, police will be asked to arrest a jaywalker for purposes of a test case in Traffic Court.

Drastic enforcement of right-of-way laws will be a part of the campaign, officials said. Motorists who fail to yield the right of way to pedestrians at intersections will face arrest.

Twelve more persons have been killed in Washington traffic since the first of the year than during the same period in 1936, Van Duzer pointed out.

Ten-year-old Xonofon Chirrigas was the latest victim of traffic in Washington yesterday, raising the total for the year to 29 fatalities. He died in Garfield Hospital yesterday of a fractured skull, after lying in the hospital almost 24 hours unidentified.

Knocked Down by Car.

Police said the child was knocked down by an automobile operated by Alvin Feinsilver, 32, of 529 Lamont street northwest, when he ran into the street. Feinsilver will appear at a coroner's inquest, the date for which has not been set.

The twelfth death of the year beyond 1936's ghastly record to March 1 illustrated Van Duser's contention that pedestrians are frequently to blame for traffic fatalities. A campaign among Washington school children by the American Automobile Association to warn children about hastily running into streets has been instituted by the association.

Schools throughout the city are placarded with posters illustrating the danger to children of stepping from behind parked cars, the danger of sprinting into thoroughfares without carefully looking in both directions, and Van Duzer has said that the next step in educating children against traffic hazards must come from parents themselves.

Middle of Block Not Safest.

"The number of pedestrian accidents is increasing at an alarming rate, not only in the District of Columbia but elsewhere," he said.

"Whenever one raises the question of pedestrian regulation or control, he is generally confronted with the argument that the safest place to cross the street is in the middle of the block. The facts do not bear out this contention. Our surveys indicate that about 94 per cent of all pedestrians cross at crosswalks and that only about 6 per cent do not cross at crosswalks. Our records show that a pedestrian is 28 per cent more liable to be killed when he crosses in the middle of the block than when crossing at an intersection."

Yesterday's Injuries

Five persons sustained injuries in traffic crashes early yesterday.

Crashing into a truck at Benning road and Oklahoma avenue northeast, a passenger car was demolished and four persons were hurt. At Casualty Hospital they gave their names as Margaret Jane Carroll, 41; Margaret Salter, 20, both of 510 Roxboro place northwest; George Tucker, 27, Seat Pleasant, Md., and Edward Wall, 23, 623 South Carolina avenue southeast.

Both women received possible fractured skulls and cuts, while the men escaped with cuts and bruises.

All to receive treatment were passengers in a car driven by Jesse Salter, of the Roxboro place address. He was charged with reckless driving.

Nan Howard, 18, 814 K street northwest, was brought here to Sibley Hospital after the automobile she was riding in sideswiped a truck on the Baltimore boulevard near College Park, Md.

Miss Howard suffered severe cuts and concussion of the brain. Hyman Sotzsky, 25, 607 Florence street northeast, driver of the automobile in which Miss Howard was riding, was not injured.

Signs Come Down

Convinced their efforts to promote a snow-removal no-parking ban so far have failed, the District Commissioners yesterday ordered the signs removed from nearly 50 miles of Washington streets.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen ordered the 5,200 black and yellow signs removed because of the setback received Saturday when Police Court Judge Edward M. Curran again called the regulation "unreasonable."

Taking exception to Judge Curran's ruling, the District noted an appeal, but, it was said, the regulation will have expired by the time a decision is reached by the Court of Appeals.

Meanwhile, "no papers" were being issued in Police Court yesterday on cases brought in for the violation. Judge John P. McMahon continued indefinitely several cases that appeared before him in Traffic Court.

Strikers, Under Union Orders, Seize Two Detroit Dime Stores

Clerks, Mostly Girls, Seeking Wage and Hour Adjustments; Spread of Woolworth Labor Trouble Over U. S. Is Hinted.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, March 1.—Striking clerks, most of them girls, occupied two F. W. Woolworth five-and-ten-cent stores here tonight and a union official said there was a possibility that strikes might be called in Woolworth stores in other cities.

While company executives refused to negotiate with 100 strikers during their occupancy of the company's largest store here, clerks in a second store struck this afternoon.

The store manager said 11 of the 26 clerks employed here joined in the strike. The other 15, the manager said, went home.

Louis Koenig, financial secretary of the Waiters and Waitress Association, an American Federation of Labor union which called the strike, said all the clerks were in sympathy with it.

Demands of the girl strikers in both stores included a pay increase of 10 cents an hour, a 48-hour week and other concessions. Men on strike ask a 10-cent increase and a 54-hour week.

The second strike was called in midafternoon.

Union organizers entered the store, conferred briefly with some of the clerks, and then shouted "Strike!" "Strike!"

There was no disorder.

Koenig said officers of the union local here would confer with the national president of the association on the advisability of calling strikes elsewhere. The Woolworth Co. has 2,000 stores in the United States.

Strikers occupying the larger store took full control of the building today, refusing admission to local executives of the company. They passed the time dancing and singing, and admitted they were becoming bored with their siege, which began Saturday.

HOW ONE WOMAN TOOK OFF 21 POUNDS OF FAT

Safely—Comfortably

If you're not as popular as you'd like to be, not as active, healthy and keen in mind—you owe it to yourself to get rid of that fat—don't delay.

And here's a method you can depend on to reduce surplus fat SAFELY and SANELY—just take a half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water first thing every morning and cut down on fat meats, butter, cream and sugary sweets—before you realize it excess fat starts to disappear—keep it up every day without fail and in a few weeks you should not only note a great improvement in figure but in your health as well.

Kruschen is a super blend of 6 separate mineral salts—it's wonderful to help kidneys, liver, gall bladder and bowels function properly. Jar lasts weeks and costs but few cents.

Mrs. Amelia Long of Douglas, Ariz., writes: "I lost 21 lbs. Not only my appearance but general health improved." (Adv.)

Parley Opened With Unionists By U. S. Steel

Other Concerns Announce 40-Hour Week, End Navy Deadlock.

steel for its Navy-building program. It is by no means certain yet that a strike will not occur, but the granting of a conference by Fairless and the wave of pay increases and hour reductions may be interpreted as designed to "cut under" Lewis in his demands and leave him with only his recognition demand to bargain on.

Fairless' Policy Liberal.

Such a policy is in line with Fairless' history in the industry. Former executive vice-president of Republic Steel, whose various units he welded into the present strong organization, he was selected by U. S. Steel, "Big Steel" in the industry and on the exchange, to head its Carnegie-Illinois unit. In his relations with labor previously he has followed a much less relentless attitude than has been maintained by the huge corporation in whose service he is now engaged.

Another surprise was occasioned by Lewis and Murray seeking to represent, in the negotiations, only the members of their own union, the Amalgamated Iron, Steel and Tin Workers. In the recent automobile strike, one of Lewis' cardinal demands was that his United Automobile Workers be recognized as the sole bargaining agency in all the plants involved.

The Lewis camp yesterday was reported to have claimed it now has signed up more than 150,000 steel workers in its membership drive.

Murray Hails Victory.

Following a conference of an hour in the Pittsburgh offices, it was announced that the corporation and union officials would resume their talks Tuesday.

Murray hailed the meeting as the greatest labor victory in 40 years of steel history.

The company's only statement was a surprise announcement to employe representatives at its 27 plants, reading:

"Mr. Fairless has had a request from representatives of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee to meet with them today for the purpose of bargaining for their members under our announced policy of meeting and bargaining with any person or representatives of any of our workmen.

"Mr. Fairless is now in conference with them."

The employe representation plan has been denounced by Lewis as a company union which he has promised to exterminate.

Bethlehem Steel, announcing its wage boost and work-week reduction, made no reference or concession to the Lewis organization. It said the changes followed requests of employes' representatives and discussions between them and the union officials over several weeks.

"These new rates on the present basis of operation will increase the annual pay roll approximately $20,000,000 to $25,000,000 a year, and following a similar $10,000,000 increase in November, 1936, it provides for average hour wages substantially 25 to 30 per cent above 1929 levels," its statement said.

Navy Work Possible.

Of the adoption of the 40-hour week the company declared:

"This will permit, under present regulations, the execution of work on Government contracts under the provisions of the Walsh-Healey act."

Up to date the steel concerns have failed to bid on Government contracts because of the act. The Navy recently reported that work on six destroyers and three submarines is being delayed by lack of steel, and the view has been expressed that a general cessation of work in Navy yards generally would result before the end of March unless the deadlock were broken.

The Navy Department has asked Secretary of Labor Perkins to use her authority to grant exemption from the law to the steel industry, but all factions of labor have vigorously opposed the move. Assistant Secretary of Labor Edward F. McGrady has been devoting much of his time recently to trying to break the deadlock.

President Roosevelt has said something must be done to obtain steel for the Navy, and officials even have discussed the possibility of reopening the Government's $22,000,000 war-time armor and projectile plant at South Charleston, W. Va., and converting it into a steel plant. A bloc of House members has arranged a conference for today to discuss legislation authorizing the Government to make its own steel.

From Birmingham, Ala., tonight the Associated Press reported two employe groups, claiming to represent 15,000 of the 21,000 employes of the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co., had demanded a 40-hour week and "substantial" pay increases. The T. C. I. is another subsidiary of United States Steel, and the largest Southern steel producer.

Steel Output Nears High.

Another pay boost, in the nature of a compromise, was announced tonight by the Associated Press from Lorain, Ohio, where the National Tube Co., a United States Steel subsidiary, boosted the minimum wage 80 cents a day to $5. No mention was made of the 40-hour week. The company employs about 8,000 workers.

Meanwhile the Iron and Steel Institute reported the production schedule this week at 85.8 per cent of capacity, a gain of 3.3 points over the previous week.

This rate carried steel production near the all-time high made in May, 1929. Production of 1,123,795 gross tons was indicated, the greatest since June, 1929, when the weekly average was 1,142,880 gross tons.

Rail Unions Seek Boost.

Cleveland, March 1 (AP).—A. F Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, announced today five of the railroad botherhoods instructed their general chairmen to file demands with railroads for a 20 per cent wage increase.

Representatives of the five brotherhoods—trainmen and switchmen, engineers, firemen, enginemen and conductors—met here today, Whitney said, and reported their memberships stood 100 per cent behind the demand for higher wages.

The chairmen were instructed to file the demands by March 22, and ask that the wage increase become effective May 1.

The brotherhoods' decision to demand the 20 per cent wage increase was announced at a recent meeting in Chicago. Sixteen other brotherhoods also are seeking the 20 per cent increase.

Spokesmen for the railroad men said 1,100,000 organized railroad workers are behind the demand, and the annual wage increase would amount to approximately $360,000,000.

Franco-Reich Exchange Protested by Workers

Berlin, March 1 (AP).—Several workers were arrested at Saarbruecken today for participation in a demonstration of protest against the exchange rate they are allowed on wages earned on French soil.

Saarbruecken is in the Saar district recently restored to Germany and is close to the French border. Many workers living in the Saar have jobs in France. A recent decree fixing the rate at which they can exchange their French wages in Germany means heavy loss for them, the workers assert.

handiworkers—quit their duties, too, as labor disputes kept approximately 30,000 idle in shops, stores, factories and foundries forming a broad cross-section of American industry.

2,000 in Hosiery Strike.

The American Federation of Hosiery Workers claimed it had pulled more than 2,000 persons off their jobs and closed six mills in Berks County, Pa., in a move for union recognition. The movement culminated in four "sit-down" demonstrations, a walkout and a lockout at the six plants.

Unionists estimated more than 1,700 went on strike at six A. F. Walton shoe factories in Chelsea and the Phyllis Shoe Co. in Lowell, Mass. Five plants remained closed at Salem. Labor chieftains, demanding a 15 per cent pay rise, said about 30 New England manufacturers had agreed to the boost.

Later, the Walton management said its 1,400 striking hands had agreed to return after accepting a 10 per cent wage increase.

Sixty-five Toledo, Ohio, messenger boys, organized at the headquarters of the United Automobile Workers Union, a Committee for Industrial organization affiliate, played harmonicas while messages piled up. They sought wage and hour adjustments.

Moving vans and storage warehouses in Cleveland were paralyzed after contractural negotiations between the drivers' union and some 150 firms collapsed.

Seven Norwalk, Ohio, nurses left their posts, protesting the dismissal of a superintendent.

Approximately 100 sightless employes of the Pennsylvania Association for the Blind's factory at Pittsburgh sat down in an effort to gain higher wages.

Smith Forms Crusaders For Fight on Reds, 'Isms'

New York, March 1 (AP).—Gerald L. K. Smith announced today he had the nucleus of a committee of 1,000,000 crusaders pledged against communism or "any other ism that threatens the overthrow of the United States Government."

The man who has termed himself a successor to Senator Huey P. Long as leader of the share-the-wealth movement, said national headquarters of his new organization had been functioning for two months in a Manhattan Hotel. Smith announced last October his plans to form the organization.

Reorganization Plan Arouses U. S. Employes

Col. Stengle, President of Federation, Deplores Fear of Jobholders.

Finding cause "for considerable apprehension" in the President's reorganization plan, Col. Charles I. Stengle, president, American Federation of Government Employes, yesterday compared the plan with the Economy Act of 1932 to reach a conclusion that the interests of economy and efficiency cannot be served by "throwing thousands of employes in fear for their livelihood."

In any reorganization procedure, Civil Service employes should be assured of the maintenance of their status, and dismissals, where necessary, should be "based on a sound and equitable program based on efficiency and seniority," Stengle suggested.

"We feel particularly interested in obtaining such assurances for Civil Service employes for the reason that the newspaper accounts of the bill indicate that the non-Civil Service incumbents of jobs in the emergency agencies will retain their positions, subject to certain conditions, even though they do not pass noncompetitive examinations, although in that case, of course, they would not have Civil Service status," he said.

He felt that Congress "should guard carefully in drafting this bill to prevent any recurrence of the job panic and loss of morale that accompanied reorganization procedure a few years ago." If dismissals must be made, these should come on the basis of efficiency and seniority, Stengle suggested.

"* * * the report of the committee on hours of duty and overtime, which shows a very large amount of overtime work by Government employes, appears to indicate very strongly that more help in the Government establishment is needed, rather than less," Stengle added.

French Vessel Hits Mine Off Coast of Spain

Ship Makes Port; New Peace Hope Seen in Talk by Eden.

By the Associated Press.

London, March 1.—Floating mines crippled another foreign ship off Spain today while official British pronouncements hinted at renewal of attempts to bring Spanish peace.

The stricken ship—third to be menaced by mines in the shiplanes off Spain's east coast within five days—was the French freighter Marie Therese le Borgne.

She made port at Palamos, Spain, but shipping circles showed alarm. The place where she hit the mine was near the spot where British merchantman Llandovery Castle was damaged similarly last week. Moreover, the French transport Sebaa reported she narrowly had avoided a mine off Barcelona.

Statement by Eden.

Hope for new international efforts to find a peaceful solution of the Spanish war, now seven and a half months old, was buoyed by Foreign Minister Anthony Eden's declaration to Commons that the government had proposals for halting the war "constantly in mind."

Authoritative sources said they believed Eden was considering new mediation attempts if and when the European neutrality committee's arms-and-men embargo shuts off foreign interference in Spain.

Madrid Defense Strengthened.

Madrid, March 1 (AP).—Madrid's defenders were reported tonight to have strengthened their positions with victories on opposite sides of the capital.

In sharp, brief fighting, commanders said, government forces drove insurgent besiegers to cover in Universtiy City, on the northwest of the city, and captured a line of trenches in the Jarama Valley, to the south.

Government authorities at Valencia, temporary seat of the administration, expressed fear Italian and German warships in the international coastal patrol of Spain might attack the long stretches they have been assigned to guard.

Report Italians Landing.

At Andujar, government authorities reported Italian troops still were being landed at Cadiz and Malaga, insurgent ports, and sent to the Cordoba front.

(Under the 27-nation committee's embargo of men and arms, scheduled to be enforced starting next Saturday midnight, Italy and Germany were assigned government seaboard territory and France and Great Britain the rest of the coast.)

The only heavy fighting reported in government communiques was at Oviedo, in the northwest, where steady atacks were said to be driving besieged insurgents into an increasingly compressed area.

N. Y. Flier Slain in Spain.

New York, March 1 (AP).—Death of Ben Leider, New York "flying reporter," while fighting with the Loyalist forces in Spain February 19 was announced in Brooklyn today by Dr. Morris Leider, his brother.

Basing the announcement on "completely reliable sources" which he declined to divulge further, Dr. Leider said the aviator-journalist was killed in aerial combat near Valencia.

French Sailors Strike.

Bordeaux, France, March 1 (AP).—A thousand sailors and dock workers struck today for higher wages and shorter hours, paralyzing shipping in this western port.

Specks Of Rottenness.

Newspapers, with space to print only the extraordinary, sometimes mislead the unreflecting reader. Current reports from the labor front are a case in point. Headlines give the impression that American industry is riddled with strikes. The truth is, of course, that only a few hundred thousand workers, at most, are or have recently been involved in strikes; this is a small fraction of the 30,000,000 or more employed in industry and commerce throughout the country.

It is plain that the new strategy of the "sit-down" has added greatly to the news value of recent strikes. The extra-legality of the device, the human interest in men who lock themselves in a building for weeks, the bizarre "Trojan horse" invented to protect deputy sheriffs—all make "good copy." But in spite of the general interest in these events, the reading public remains divided as to the rights and wrongs of labor's position, particularly the attitude of the union leaders behind the larger strikes.

Under these circumstances certain news from New York City is doubly unwelcome. For these tales of corruption in the labor ranks of Manhattan and the Bronx make appraisal of union activities generally the more difficult. The Dewey investigation has brought to light evidence that racketeers dominate the city's restaurant and allied unions. Added to this, gas bombs have been set off in upper Broadway movie theaters, apparently the work of irresponsible labor leaders. Finally, a union foreman has just been murdered under circumstances that place a would-be czar of the city's building trade-unions under grave suspicion.

These incidents cannot be typical of New York's labor organizations; still less can they be used to indict the entire national labor movement. But they are specks of rottenness. And if labor is to assume that position in the Nation's councils to which it now aspires, it must first cut out these and whatever other specks exist. Until it does, and of its own accord, it cannot hope for wholehearted support of its aims by the general public.

Extending Reciprocal Trade.

Extension of the reciprocal trade agreements act for three more years is a tribute to Secretary Hull whose efforts to bring about a general lowering of trade barriers and an expansion of American foreign trade have received well-deserved acclaim. Recently this policy was unanimously approved by all the nations participating in the Buenos Aires conference.

But Secretary Hull and his aides should not, in their justified delight with the action of Congress, ignore the implications of the large opposition vote registered in the Senate. Although that body did finally approve the joint resolution by 58 to 24, it is significant that there were nine Democrats registered in the negative. Moreover, this vote was preceded by approval of the Pepper amendment to require maintenance of tariffs on farm, garden and orchard products at levels that would equalize the costs of production here and abroad.

Had this proviso been retained in the bill it would have involved such interminable delays in the negotiation of future reciprocal agreements as to make the Hull system entirely unworkable. The Tariff Commission can testify how difficult it is to determine costs of production abroad. Not without reason, then, did Senator Harrison exclaim, after the Senate had passed the Pepper amendment, that the bill had been "practically killed," and that it "might as well be withdrawn."

As it happened the Senate, by a narrow margin, later reversed itself on this issue leaving the path clear for the passage of the original and unamended resolution. But the debate revealed that a large section of American opinion, which is not in the least hostile to the reciprocal trade policy as such, does want legitimate American interests given proper protection.

It would be the counsel of wisdom for the Administration, therefore, not to regard the passage of the joint resolution by both Houses of Congress as an unrestricted mandate to negotiate reciprocal agreements without reference to the particular American groups that may deem themselves adversely affected. Extreme care must be exercised in the negotiation of such pacts and at the very least, opportunity must be given all interested groups to be heard.

When each separate duty was fixed by Congress, special interests no doubt had too much to say regarding the kind of trade policy the United States should pursue. There is now a danger of going to the opposite extreme and giving them no consideration whatever. That, too, is to be avoided.

Six Unreasonable Demands.

Every proposal to curtail work relief, however reasonable it may be, is certain to meet with opposition. The recipients of relief checks are naturally opposed to any downward adjustment of benefits. Experience indicates that even more vigorous protests can be expected from local officials whose responsibility will be increased by the gradual withdrawal of the Federal Government from this field.

The protest of six governors against the WPA's proposal to dismiss 600,000 employes by next June must be considered in the light of this attitude. By its own lavish spending program the Federal Government has relieved the States of extensive obligations. Of course, governors are eager to have those benefits continued on a generous scale. But their special pleading has very little bearing upon the merits of the issue.

It is significant that the petition to the President was signed by the governors of such States as New York, Illinois and Massachusetts. If these States are unable to care for the relatively small number of men who will be released by the WPA without being absorbed into private industry, the failure of local government to cope with problems of the twentieth century should be openly confessed. As a matter of fact, these States can support their unemployed with far less strain upon their taxpayers, present and future, than continuation of the WPA on the existing basis would entail.

If the six-point program laid down by the six governors should be followed, the WPA would probably become a permanent institution offering jobs to an army of men at enormous costs. It would give jobs to all needy employables, keep them on the rolls until they can shift into private jobs, and give them an opportunity to return to work relief whenever their private employment might be terminated. Moreover, the governors ask WPA to replace men who find private jobs by employables still on relief rolls.

Fear that the WPA might embark on just such a program has been one of the chief objections to it from the beginning. Relief jobs extended for more than a brief emergency tend to create vested rights to governmental support. But the Government cannot continue indefinitely to provide work for more than 2,000,000 persons in need. There must be curtailment, and it is entirely reasonable that this should keep pace with economic recovery.

The six governors suggest a Federal-State co-operative move to encourage the creation of more private jobs for the beneficiaries of WPA and direct relief. But this proposal is out of key with their request that all relief workers be retained on the Government pay roll until they can be shifted to private industry. The country has already witnessed the tendency of certain groups to cling to their relief jobs despite demands for farm hands and other classes of labor because of a belief that the WPA offers a greater degree of security. If the WPA should be continued in its present form, large groups of men might never again be absorbed into private enterprise.

The forthcoming conference at the White House, therefore, may be chiefly a means of educating governors who have taken a narrow view of the tremendous relief-liquidating task that now confronts the Administration.

Athletics At Johns Hopkins.

Cynics suggest that the caliber of recent Johns Hopkins teams explains the university's decision to make admissions free to its sporting events. But inspection of the institution's athletic policy reveals another explanation. For the past few years at least, this policy has pointed directly away from the goal of most collegiate programs, which is to produce a winning football team at almost any cost.

The reasoning behind such programs has been that a winning football team will bring in gate receipts sufficient to support the remainder of a sports department throughout the year. In practice this may have been successful financially but it has resulted too often in over-emphasis of spectacular contests. Small squads of men have received the utmost of attention and applause while the great majority of students sat flatly in stands with little opportunity and less inclination to participate in athletics themselves.

The directors of Johns Hopkins some time ago became dissatisfied with such conditions. It was agreed among them that football and one or two other sports should not monopolize the athletic fields. Accordingly, other sports were introduced and an intramural program established. The abolition of ticket charges is simply the logical conclusion of such a program. As a result 85 per cent of the student body at Baltimore engages in some form of athletic activity.

Probably few other colleges can offer such a record. The price for it, however, was not inconsiderable—the loss of gate receipts. That Johns Hopkins—like most other institutions, in constant doubt as to finances—nevertheless paid this price only adds luster to its name as a high principled and well-balanced educational institution.

Easing A Tension.

The press campaign against Czechoslovakia which has raged in the German press for some months has given rise to widespread speculation regarding the possibility of a Nazi thrust to the south.

It seems probable, however, that the fears of a sudden German attack on Czechoslovakia are, at the moment, grossly exaggerated. After all, such action might easily lead to a general war. It is very doubtful that Hitler wants such an outcome and it is certain that the Third Reich is by no means wholly prepared for it. If peace can survive the Spanish crisis there is no reason to suppose that the Bohemian problem will prove fatal.

But the Czechoslovak leaders are not letting themselves become the victims of inactive optimism. While that country's military defenses are being built up, and its alliances with France and Russia kept green, an effort is also being made to disarm internal opposition, particularly that emanating from the German minority. It is fully recognized at Prague that the existence in the region directly adjacent to Germany of a large, well-organized and chronically discontented German element constitutes a permanent threat to peace.

It was a warning sign when in the last general elections the pro-Nazi Sudeten party under Konrad Henlein swept all before it in the German districts and won 44 seats in the national Parliament. To be sure, by no means all Czechoslovak Germans belong to the Sudeten party, nor is that party openly in favor of the idea of the incorporation of Bohemia in the Third Reich. Henlein himself has frequently declared his loyalty to the Czechoslovak republic. But the Czechs are rightly suspicious of such professions.

At last, however, the government has begun to take cognizance of the grievances of the German minority. In a series of conferences held with some of its leaders Premier Hodza reached a basis of co-operation likely to strengthen the internal stability of the Czechoslovak state.

If Henlein and his followers agreed unreservedly to abandon their totalitarian principles and adhere to democracy, a place will be made for that party in the government. In the meantime, as a sign of good faith, Premier Hodza has agreed to open to members of the German minority an increasingly larger proportion of civil service posts. It has long been a justifiable grievance of the Germans in Czechoslovakia that while heavily taxed for the maintenance of the government they have to a large extent been excluded from governmental service. Promise is now made that this grievance will be rectified.

Should the efforts of Premier Hodza be successful the foundations of Czechoslovakia democracy will be strengthened. At a time when many European nations are employing repressive measures against dissident minorities, the action of Czechoslovakia toward the German element is as unique as it is constructive.

It permits the Nazis to point out, however, that the proposed reforms follow—and did not precede—their active interest in the problems of the Germans of Bohemia.

A True Public Servant.

The late Jacob Allen Metzger, assistant to the legal adviser of the State Department, was a man who exemplified in his career the finest traditions of Government service.

Unknown to the overwhelming majority of Americans whose interests he so faithfully served over a long period of years, he did his duty without thought of glory or hope of special reward, except the feeling of having done the tasks assigned to him to the best of his ability. He possessed that "passion for anonymity" which instead of being a rarity, as some who have found amusement in the phrase would have us believe, is a quality not infrequently encountered even in our present disjointed and haphazard Government service.

His colleagues found him a tower of strength—fearless, honest and imbued with a deep patriotic zeal. During his 30 years' connection with the State Department he was entrusted with increasingly difficult and responsible assignments which he performed with exemplary assiduity and skill.

In the last analysis, though the acclaim is given to others, it is on the Metzgers of the Government that the proper functioning of the departments depends. Selfless and anonymous, above politics and above partisanship, they constitute the truest of public servants.

Florida's Vagrants.

From the Hartford Courant.

Florida has abandoned, as ineffective and unduly expensive, its attempt to turn back transients likely to burden local relief authorities. In common with a number of other States with temperate climates, most notably California, it had posted guards at its borders to refuse entrance to impoverished refugees from the Northern winters.

Like most States, Florida still deals none too gently with transients from outside its borders who cannot support themselves. They are fortunate if they escape jail for vagrancy. Florida defends itself for its stern treatment with the statement that in the winter months it would be flooded with homeless transients if it dealt less harshly with them.

The State's probably unconstitutional attempts to stop transients without means at its borders have failed to accomplish their purpose, and its notoriously stiff treatment to outsiders who are without means has not stemmed the flood of invaders. Moreover, the widely published reports of a boom in the resorts has added to the usual number of drifters a quantity of men seeking employment but who, all too often, find that their hopes cannot be realized. Recovery in other parts of the country may have lightened the pressure in some degree, but Florida still has the problem of the winter vagrant on its hands, as it always has had.

"Traders In Prestige."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Senator Nye, head and front of the munitions probes designed to back neutrality and keeping us out of war, should have the confidence of the whole American people. But he and other United States Senators have sold the prestige of their high office for $1,000 each to indorse certain cigarettes.

How can the people trust men who, in the world's most august legislative body, sell the prestige of their title to any commercial advertisement, and especially to an advertisement of any habit-forming thing like cigarettes, whiskey, cosmetics, questionable cathartics, etc.? How can a United States Senator, knowing that it is only his elected honor that makes his testimonial valuable, sink so low as to trade it for money and cheap publicity, ranking himself with movie actors, society has-beens and the cheaper class of a lost civilization, a completely vanished aristocracy?

I think Nye and his fellow traders in the official prestige of this nation's highest legislative office should be censured by their fellows, unless indeed the entire Senate has sold its honor.

They have aroused a suspicion that, if the cash offer were large enough, they would sell anything to anybody—they would trade our military secrets with foreign spies, or sell our codes to any enemy. A man who will sell a prestige which does not belong to him, and shame the people whom it is designed to protect, is not fit to be in the United States Senate. Someone should say so, not humorously, but with blistering denunciation.

AN AMERICAN WHO IS ASHAMED TO SIGN HIS NAME TO A CONFESSION THAT SUCH SENATORS EXIST.

Two Accusations Denied.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The accusation has been made that the President wishes to "pack the Court." I do not believe this. After all, has it not been packed against him ever since he has been in office? Is it not true that the Supreme Court has declared unconstitutional most of the emergency legislation passed during the Roosevelt Administration. None can deny this. Yet during the time in which the emergency legislation did operate between the time of its enactment and the action of the Supreme Court it did succeed in pulling this country out of the worst depression in its history. The Supreme Court did not lend a hand in pulling us out of the mire into which we had fallen but did everything possible to hamper progress in saving the victims of the "hard times."

There have been those who have accused President Roosevelt of wanting to become a dictator. Such bunk! Why it is preposterous! Had he ever had such an idea in his head the time when he should have perfected such a plan would have been right after his election when the country was paralyzed with its financial affliction. The fact that he did not, and the fact that he has done everything in his power to prove that a democracy can succeed, in the face of many arguments proffered by proponents of different isms at that time and even now, should forever dissipate that theory.

Philippines' Future.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Doubtless President Quezon's conference with President Roosevelt is a significant prologue to the Philippine-American trade parley. I entertain no fear as to the favorable outcome of their discussion. President Quezon's able diplomacy and unquestioned leadership enable him to understand and take advantage of President Roosevelt's humanitarian principles and international outlook. Aided by his efficient and responsible secretaries as well as Douglas MacArthur, the Filipinos may rest assured that the two Presidents can discuss freely the possibilities of a really independent Philippines nine years hence.

Whatever the two capable leaders bring forth for public enlightenment, it behooves that galaxy of political geniuses who thunder in the dome of Capitol Hill to carry it through without jeopardizing the reciprocal free trade of the two nations. The good health, peace and economic stability of 14,000,000 liberty-loving Filipinos depend upon their wise discernment.

To them the Filipinos turn anxiously for a clear and right solution of their national liability; to them the only Christian nation in the Orient, rich with natural resources which need gradual development and rightly launched in the pattern of American democracy, directs her prayers of jointly deep understanding and continued justifiable commerce.

Living Jefferson Memorial.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I had just finished reading Claude Bowers' admirable book, "Jefferson in Power," when I turned to the paper and saw the photograph of the memorial planned for our third President. I suggest that the Bowers book be required reading for every member of the commission—and for the architects, too.

Here was a great American, the embodiment, it seems to me, of the noblest traditions of our land, a man who is as much alive today as he was at the time when the Bill of Rights was written, as powerful a voice today as he was then in defense of the rights of the people.

And yet the commission would bury him beneath the dead weight of marble columns!

Was it Secretary Ickes who suggested that the Jefferson memorial be an auditorium? Let it be an auditorium dedicated to free speech, for we need one. Yesterday's papers tell of the United Auto Workers Union's frustrated attempts to hire a hall in a New York city. We remember that last fall a candidate for President of the United States was prevented from speaking either over the radio or in an auditorium in an Indiana city.

Yes, we need a free speech auditorium, but we also need a civil liberties defense fund. So, set aside a portion of the memorial fund for that purpose. The future will have its Tom Mooneys, Scottsboro boys and Angelo Herndons. And let there be a permanent Congressional committee for the investigation of the state of civil liberties in America.

In other words, let us have a living memorial to the one whom many of us call the greatest American—Thomas Jefferson.

RUTH CRAWFORD.

Cheer For Mr. Probert.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When Mr. Charles H. Probert's letter criticizing "Forward March" appeared in The Post of February 18, I was surprised to see a discussion of the nature of poetry taking the place usually given to questions of war, labor or politics.

Yet by that surprise I was reminded how often in the struggle to live we waste the reasons for living. We tend to give first importance to what are really only the means to civilization, and pretty questionable ones.

Although the feeling for poetry is perhaps not an attribute of an advanced civilization only, but may appear in very primitive circumstances, still, in the individual, savage or educated, it is there complete or it is not there, as Mr. Probert must know. And so it was a little sad to see him tilting at so sturdy a windmill as the popular taste for doggerel.

Examine the contributions to those magazines that invite their readers to send in their "favorite poems." These are mostly of the uplift or cheer-up type. Where they find all this mass of material that they clip and treasure, how it came to be published in the first place in a world where even some of the finest poetry has once languished in want of a publisher, is a wonder to me.

Yet if the honest pleasure all these people must find in their jingles could be weighed in a balance against the pleasure poetry has given others, poetry might be outweighed in what is called human value. Fortunately, it would not be an election, and no one's taste would be imposed upon anyone else. At any rate here is a cheer for Mr. Probert; I liked his letter immensely.

Baltimore For Haircuts.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Most of us could afford a 50-cent haircut once a month or so. But is the local product worth it? The present writer is a fairly regular consumer of haircuts, and in an extended experience of over three years he has failed to find here an establishment purveying at any price a haircut which he values at even 35 cents.

In Baltimore they do this thing better, and he has lately been reduced to devoting every third Saturday afternoon to journeying to that city, in order to have the operation satisfactorily performed.

Y. B. SHEARED.

Washington, Feb. 25.

Since The Repeal Of Prohibition

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was much interested in reading in The Post a letter by Marie C. Searles in which she described the incident of an intoxicated woman being "dragged from the entrance of one of Washington's swell hotels" recently. She was justly critical of a condition which permitted the sale of intoxicants to persons already plainly under their influence. She was also very critical of the "crusading sisters for repeal of liquor laws."

It is quite evident that she is not on the firing line of the W. C. T. U. or she would be better informed as to just how much work they are really doing. She would know that they are meeting regularly and that while two or three years ago it was difficult to get an attendance of more than three or four, now the attendance ranges from 12 to 20 in just one small neighborhood.

She would also realize what tremendous influence a national Administration in favor of repeal has at such a time as this.

W. A. R.

Washington, Feb. 26.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Of course one swallow makes a summer, and one drunken woman being removed from a Washington hotel, in the opinion of Marie C. Searles, in The Post letter column, makes the whole repeal program a dismal failure.

Where were "the true high-toned workers for prohibition" during the prohibition era when women first learned to drink in speakeasies? They could not see them then, although police departments had little trouble in finding them. Respectable women did not drink in public bars before national prohibition. If they have not yet abandoned the habits they learned during the prohibition period, who is to blame for it? The drys were responsible for the law that created drinking among women, and now the "true high-toned workers in a great cause" are horribly shocked because some woman insists on exercising her right to make a public spectacle of herself.

Miss (or Mrs.) Searles says that every informed and truthful person knows that such scenes are on the increase. The fact is that every informed and truthful person who has taken the trouble to inform himself knows that such scenes are on the decrease since repeal. Complete statistical records from the State of New York show a big decrease in arrests for drunkenness of all kinds, among men, women and children. In the States of New Jersey, Michigan, Ohio, Illinois, Missouri, Indiana and numerous other States from which complete statistical records are obtainable, drunkenness has decreased from 25 to 50 per cent since repeal. In practically all States there have been sharp decreases in arrests from drunkenness and drunken driving in the second and third years of repeal.

Conditions are steadily improving notwithstanding the blind spots in the eyes of professional prohibitionists which prevent them from seeing the improvements. It takes time, of course, to clean up the nasty mess left on the public doorstep by 14 years of character-destroying prohibition.

MELISSA WEAVER.

The Post Impressionist

English Is Spoken Here.

YOU may not know him, but you ought to. He's studying at the red brick schoolhouse at Tenth and H streets—Washington's Americanization School, a part of the public school system. He's learning to read and write English.

Under his arm is his textbook—a morning newspaper. He doesn't sit at a desk. Instead, he finds himself one of a group of other newcomers to this country gathered informally in a half-circle of chairs facing a blackboard. On the blackboard are words like "airplane—sky—flying." The class is reading an article about a new 'cross-continent record. Perhaps you scanned the same headlines too over your toast and coffee.

He repeats the words slowly to get the sound of them. He asks questions. Some day soon he will be an American citizen like you and me.

Downstairs in the office of the school a young woman in talking earnestly with the teacher behind the big desk. Si, she would like to come and study. "But the bambino—I cannot leave him at home. There is no one to watch out for him. He is so very young—just learning to walk." The teacher with the nice smile who seems to have an answer for everything has an answer for that also. "You can bring him with you," she says. "You see, we have a nursery here where he can play with the other children while you go to class. Wouldn't you like that?"

The young woman is enthusiastic. "Today, then," she cries, "I begin! I bring my bambino. You look after him!"

Up in the coaching class on the second floor, another American citizen is in the making. Suppose we call him Pedro. He is 12. Before he came to this country he hadn't been sure he was going to like it here.

Now his ideas have changed. He picks up English pretty quickly. He's a bright boy. He'll be ready to enter one of the other Washington schools at the beginning of the new term.

Pedro's teacher is writing words on the blackboard. She says, "Let's think of as many words as we can that end in 'an.'" Pedro practically stops the class when he puffs out his chest and answers, "American!"

At the other end of the hall, the citizenship class, composed of those who are just about to take out their naturalization papers, is humming with activity. About 14 people sit around a long table. The question of the day can be almost anything—provided it has something to do with government. Sometimes they all talk at once. Well—who wouldn't be excited if he were going to be an American citizen for the first time?

The school has a field work department, too. One of the teachers in charge of this work makes about 50 calls a week—come rain, come shine. She says it all started in a place called Schott's alley just behind the Senate Office Building. That was 19 years ago. There were 50 four-room houses, dark and crowded, and in each family there were from 6 to 10 children. There wasn't any old shoe to put them in and that made things a little more complicated.

So this teacher who had once taught in a private school in Washington where she had had little Anne Roosevelt for a pupil—Mrs. Boettiger she is now—organized a playground group. The following summer a community house was opened.

Today the families have all moved away from Schott's alley into a better section of the city. The field work, begun there, however, is still going on in other parts of Washington.

Twenty families are called on every day; the visits last from 15 to 20 minutes. Frequently the students are busy mothers. Sometimes they are worried mothers. Someone in the family is ill or has lost his job. The teacher listens and then she helps them to solve their problems.

Col. Frederic A. Delano, uncle of President Roosevelt, heads the Americanization School Association. S. H. Hanessian, its vice president and business manager, was once a student himself at the school.

Remember that picture of George Washington that used to hang in your old classroom, back when? They have one like it down here, too. Only here—somehow—it's more than just a picture.

A lot more.

The Average Englishman

Like the American, the Englishman is a man of peace, and in Anglo-American co-operation, mental rather than practical, lies the best guarantee for the solution of economic problems and the peace of the world.

The average Englishman has his virtues—practical ability, restraint (the ultimate source of all true civilization) and tolerance. He is a passionate believer in peace, but realizes that a strong Britain is essential to the peace both in Britain and of Europe.

The Englishman has survived periods of world restlessness before now. Average Englishmen have a healthy belief in their country and however divided they may be in opinions in peace time, in times of danger lords and agricultural laborers alike invariably take a strong national line together. They combine tolerance and nationalism, and if they are slow to commit themselves—once they have done so they stick to the end.

Training The Young.

THE CARE and training of the young is almost too big a subject for the hour that I have to devote to it today, but certain broad principles may be laid down briefly.

It is very bad for boys to sell or deliver newspapers, and publishers who employ them for this purpose are exploiters of child labor. However, all authorities agree that it is just fine for immature boys to engage in amateur prize fight tournaments and get their teeth knocked out and their ears and brains scrambled in long seasons of training and competition under newspaper auspices. The starving, steaming and sweating of the young and tender physique, especially in the winter, in the process known as making the weight, tends to make little boys big and strong, and there is nothing better for the mentality of the little gladiator than thousands of punches on the head in return for a $10 bathrobe, a $5 trophy and a few newspaper clippings.

Punches on or about the eyes have a tendency to blur or destroy the vision so that the boys cannot see the morally unwholesome aspects of the world they live in, and blows on the top or base of the skull produce a hygienic type of imbecility known as fighters' dance attended by muscular twitches, drooling and foolishness.

• • • •

MR. LAWES, of Sing Sing, states that 69 per cent of the inmates of his institution have been newsboys at one time or another, but a little gladiator who got that way fighting for inexpensive trophies and newspaper circulation is almost certain never to go to Sing Sing. The mental requirements are too stiff for punch-drunk veterans of the ring. Then, too, the future is very promising because the best of the little gladiators, after they have got through punching one another around for nothing, to build newspaper circulation, are fed into the arenas of the smaller professional fight clubs and associations with the ennobling company of chislers, racketeers, piecemen and lottery promoters as preliminary boys.

The proudest alumnus of the circulation tournaments now finds himself prominent in the land in close association with one adviser who served term for murder and another who is a leader in the numbers racket, proving that, although the environment of the street is very bad for newsboys and carriers, that of the ring is entirely wholesome for little gladiators.

One of the most attractive aspects of the circulation prize fight tournaments is the strict amateurism of the little gladiators who fight without any thought of vulgar gain to sell more and more newspapers for publishers who thus are enabled to raise their advertising rates and pay bigger dividends on their stock.

• • • •

PERHAPS it should be explained that the amateurism does not extend to the business offices or the stockholders, and that the more blood the little gladiators shed in the ring, the more teeth they dribble into the water buckets between rounds, the more headaches they enjoy from wholesome, health-giving bloodclots on the brain, the better the tournament from the standpoint of the stockholders. Rarely does the sinister spectre of professional greed rear its ugly head among the little gladiators who have no authority over either the gate receipts of the prize fights or the newspaper profits which they produce.

In brief, then, it is bad for boys to deliver newspapers after school in the vicious atmosphere of the American residential neighborhoods in which they live, but good for them to drive their immature bodies through three months of intensive training and head-punching to build circulation and profits for newspaper stockholders.

Imaginary Sit-Down Strikes.

(No. 1 industry takes over the White House.)

The scene is the White House. A group of American employers, including Messrs. Ford, Swope, Young, Schwab, Sloan and Rockefeller are squatting in the Blue Room.

Mr. Ford (impatiently shifting about on his haunches)—I'm not used to this. You can't get anywhere sitting down.

Mr. Schwab—Don't kid yourself, Henry; it's the only way you can get anywhere these days.

Mr. Rockefeller—What's the idea, anyhow?

Mr. Sloan—As employers we think we have certain rights, and we are going to sit here until we get 'em.

Mr. Rockefeller—But I thought a court ruled that a sit-down strike was against the law.

Mr. Sloan—So did I, but it must have been something I ate.

• • • •

(The President enters the room with his Attorney General and seeing everybody in a squatting position assumes the visitors are employes.)

Mr. Roosevelt (beaming his approval)—Workers of America, welcome! . . . I don't know what you want now, but whatever it is you are right. It gives me great pleasure to . . .

Mr. Cummings (in his ear)—You're mistaken, Franklin. These are not employes, they are employers!

Mr. Roosevelt (freezing)—Employers sitting down! . . . This is outrageous! . . . Is this a joke?

Mr. Sloan—I never heard of your so regarding a posture of this type, Mr. President.

• • • •

Mr. Roosevelt—I order you to leave!

Mr. Ford (as the others chuckle)—That's a hot one! Imagine expecting sitter-downers to leave because of a mere order!

• • • •

Mr. Roosevelt—I give you 24 hours to vacate the premises.

Mr. Sloan—Where have I heard those words before?

• • • •

Mr. Cummings—You heard what the President said. As Attorney General, I must insist that you obey the laws of the United States.

All (anxiously)—What laws?

Mr. Cummings—I'm not sure, but we must have some!

• • • •

Miss Perkins (entering and seeing Mr. Sloan)—Ah, so you've come at last!

Mr. President—Shush! He hasn't come to a conference. This is a sit-down strike.

Miss Perkins—Oh, goody-goody! I just love sit-down strikes.

Mr. President—You won't love this one. It's by the employers.

Miss Perkins—How outrageous! What's this country coming to? Is this Russia?

• • • •

Mr. Roosevelt (to his Attorney General)—Homer, wasn't there a recent decision against sit-down strikes?

Mr. Cummings—You don't want to drag that up, do you?

Mr. Roosevelt—In this case I think it will be all right.

• • • •

Mr. Cummings—I quote you a decision by Judge Gadola, of Michigan . . .

All—He's telling us!

Mr. Roosevelt (sternly)—Have you no respect for authority?

Brazil Correspondent Contrasts Efforts Of Europe To Instill Her Culture In Latin America With Apathy Of New World.

By Paul Vanorden Shaw.

Sao Paulo.

THE TWENTY-ONE nations of America have decided that much must be done to bring about closer cultural relations amongst them. Of the 70 projects signed at the recent peace conference in Buenos Aires more than 30 came from the committee on intellectual co-operation. These projects ran through, practically, the whole gamut of human endeavor outside of pure finance, diplomacy and law. They deal with Boy and Girl Scouts and range up (or down) to exchanges of professors and students, touching on the role of women, press and radio en route. If those projects are put fully into practice America will be knit together by so tangled a web of cultural and moral ties that the peace, economic and juridical scaffolding can be torn down without endangering the structure as a whole.

That if is an enormous one. Because it is in the field of cultural rapprochement that the Europeans, and even the Japanese, are from 15 to 50 years ahead of the American nations. There are four cultural areas in the New World and these are amazingly ignorant one of the other and only in the last six or eight years have they made systematic efforts to make their own civilizations known in the other regions.

Portuguese-speaking Brazil, French-speaking Haiti, English-speaking United States and 18 Spanish-speaking countries know more about Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy and Japan than they do about each other, and this fact has a very simple explanation. Great Britain, France, Italy, Germany and Japan have deliberately and systematically seen to it that they and their civilizations were known in Latin America. In the past decades they have spent millions of dollars in this cultural realm of intangibles and today they have developed propaganda into an art so subtle and efficient that one wonders if their supremacy can ever be challenged. Russia must be added to the list, though her very special interests limit her propagandizing to certain definite objectives.

Atmosphere Unfavorable For Radio Reception.

THIS IS the morning of a hot summer day here in Sao Paulo. A glance at the thermometer shows 78 Fahrenheit in the shade and the humidity needle has swung off the dial. I understand that this is the worst possible weather for radio transmission, at least, that is the explanation given me by technicians for my inability to get the United States. And yet exactly 9 minutes ago, or 9:01, a. m. Brazilian time, I turned off my radio and sat down at my typewriter. From 8:45 a. m. to 9:01 a. m. I heard Germany broadcasting, at 1 p. m. Central European time, an evening program to the Far East and without one iota of exaggeration the reception, at this morning hour, and in this heat, was better than that from most of the local stations none of which is more than 5 miles from where I sit. On 16 meters I heard a news broadcast, on 19 a symphony, and yesterday, just at lunch time, I got a German opera!

At 6 p. m. the day before, on the 25 meter band, I got Japan, France, Italy, England and Russia. On the 31 meter band Czechoslovakia, Argentina and Cuba. And if I listened-in at the proper times I could have heard news broadcasts in Portuguese and Spanish, because almost all of these countries use directional antennae to send specialized programs to this part of the world.

But I must return to the sheer technical virtuosity of the German broadcasts. Theirs was not intended for Latin America at that time; it came in the morning and in a tropical heat, and yet her propaganda and cultural emissaries leaped all barriers and broke through to me as though Berlin were broadcasting just down the street! England and France, with broadcasts on four bands, are almost as good. Italy, generally, is excellent and Spain, in pre-revolution days, came in beautifully. Operas, symphonies, talks, soloists!

I almost forgot. I got Lowell Thomas last night and Little Orphan Annie. At least I think it was they because it sounded something like them and a check-up with three-weeks-old United States newspapers told me that they were scheduled for those times.

University of Sao Paulo Provided With Professors.

THE UNIVERSITY OF SAO PAULO recently established a liberal arts college. Believing that there were no Brazilians qualified to begin this new type of school, foreign professors were thought of. Italy immediately offered to staff the whole college with eminent professors from her own universities, to pay their traveling expenses back and forth, and their salaries while here. Sao Paulo refused so generous an offer, but there are six in the departments of mathematics, mineralogy and literature fully supported by their home government.

There are seven French professors in the same institution who, in addition to the salaries paid by the local state government, receive their French salaries, have their traveling expenses to and from France paid by the French government, as well as much of their traveling in Brazil for the purpose of propaganda. The French government also extended a credit of 1,000,000 francs to this school for the purchase of books for its new library. Brazilian students are now traveling in Italy and Germany, in part as the guests of those governments.

Last winter in the theatrical season Brazil, Uuruguay and Argentina were vouchsafed the privilege of seeing the excellent Vieux Colombier of Paris in the presentation of six plays which recently had attracted French audiences. This fine company traveled with its own scenry and put on the plays just as they would in Paris. It came under the auspices of the French government, and I understand that all deficits were taken care of by that government. A German company held forth for six weeks in this city and, under the auspices of the British consulate, the English Players put on six English and American plays. Portuguese, Spanish and Italian dramatic and musical companies are so commonplace in Latin America they have long ceased to be news.

To the best of my knowledge no American actor or theatrical company has ever played in South America. This lack has been dramatically emphasized by the recent departure to the United States of the two outstanding Brazilian players, Mme. Dulcina de Moraes and Mr. Odilon de Azevedo, who have come to believe, through the American moving picture, that the United States may have something new and vital to offer in the theatrical field. Whereas they can study the French theater in Brazil, because the French send their dramatic emissaries here, they must disband their company, interrupt their artistic careers and, because of an extremely unfavorable exchange, spend a small fortune in order to pass a few months in the United States to find out how Americans do it.

Europe and Far East Provide Free Publicity.

THE PUBLISHER of a Brazilian newspaper recently told me that every Brazilian newspaper which cared to could fill its columns with excellent free material provided by European and Asiatic governments. Great Britain maintains free schools for the teaching of English and that is one of her publicity stunts. But Great Britain has gained a lead over the United States which it will be difficult to overcome. Until four or five years ago American books, outside of the technical fields, were virtually unknown in this part of the world. Then a Brazilian began to translate many of them and they are now sold, in translation, for about 60 cents. These same books in the American editions—and in English, of course—cost here, at the present exchange, on the same basis of comparison, $7, which is a prohibitive price in any language. The British are now selling fine reprints of their best literature in the Brazilian market for 40 cents—less even than a Brazilian book printed locally.

Thus do the Europeans make themselves known in Latin America. In the schools and press, over the air and in the theater, via books and ships, the Latin Americans know much more of Europe than they do about their neighbors and about the United States. In the light of this competition the 30 projects of the committee on intellectual and cultural co-operation are few indeed. It will be a long time before American nations know as much about each other as they have learned about Europe. Of course, these European nations are interested in selling their goods to Latin America. Who isn't?

Premier Blum Faces A Dilemma.

IT IS JUST SHORT of nine months since the Popular Front took over the government in France. In that time Premier Blum has won many golden opinions for the breadth and vigor of his statesmanship. Both internally and externally, France today is stronger than it has been in years. And it is equally fair to say that at no time since its formation in 1934 has the Popular Front itself been more solidly united.

This was brought out very clearly in last week's debate in the Chamber on the government's financial policies. Despite violent opposition from the Right and Center, the government was twice given votes of confidence by ample majorities. On each occasion the Popular Front stood solidly behind Premier Blum. Indeed, it can be said that, at the moment, there is no effective alternative to the present regime in France.

• • • •

YET IT WOULD be a serious mistake to suppose that all is clear sailing for M. Blum and his colleagues. For France today is on the horns of a dilemma which time may dissolve or intensify, but which cannot be evaded.

It all depends on the extent of France's economic recovery during the next months. If the business curve continues to go up, as it has been doing, M. Blum will be in a position to skirt clear of the obstacles that loom so forbiddingly ahead. If not, France may be face to face with a new economic crisis that may shatter the present political line-up to bits and endanger both the internal and external stability of the republic.

Without a marked improvement in business, there can be no increased governmental revenues and no balanced budget. There can also be no further social reforms such as the left-wing elements in the Popular Front demand.

• • • •

IN THE DAYS of the Doumergue government and later, it was argued by M. Paul Reynaud and others who opposed deflation as a national policy, that devaluation would give French industry and commerce the necessary shot in the arm to awaken it from its torpor.

French business was then suffering from the fact that the price level within the republic was about 25 per cent higher than the world price level. Following devaluation this disadvantage was partly overcome. But only partly, for devaluation followed the action of the government in putting into effect a program of wage increases and reduction of hours of labor. The result of these reforms has been, in a measure, to destroy the benefits of the depreciated franc.

On the basis of carefully compiled statistics, L'Europe Nouvelle estimates that the costs of production in France have risen since June, 1936, by over 45 per cent. In part, no doubt, this rise is attributable to the rise in world prices for raw materials which France has to import. But in part, too, the rise is due to greater labor costs arising out of wage increases and reduced working hours with the latter, in the eyes of conservatives, the real villain of the piece.

• • • •

IT IS CLEAR that if the retail price level also rises, as it has shown a distinct tendency of doing, the benefits secured by French labor as a direct or indirect result of the Popular Front victory at the polls will be destroyed. In that case the clamor for increased wages, momentarily stilled, will be renewed. If these demands are then met, costs of production would then mount still further.

Within such a vicious spiral are the possibilities of chaos and confusion. But the government's hope is that wage increases may be absorbed through economies effected by expanding production in turn made possible by the greater purchasing power of the masses. By the same token, the government is hopeful that as business revives, governmental revenues will expand so that the present wide gap between income and outgo can be closed.

• • • •

BUT FRENCH capital today is engaged in something resembling a sit-down strike. Immediately after devaluation some of the capital that had taken flight abroad was repatriated. But this movement has since reversed itself. There has been, during recent months, a new outflow of funds from France.

This has been accelerated by the huge excess of imports over exports during recent months. Because of these developments the outlook for the franc is uncertain. And as long as the franc's future is in doubt, with further devaluation a possibility, the capital repatriation movement, so far as France is concerned, may further be postponed.

As a measure of defense the government recently ordered an increase in the rediscount rate. It has also made strong appeals to capital. But neither move has had any material effect thus far.

From the point of view of immediate necessities, this situation is particularly bad because it interferes with the government's borrowing program. Finance Minister Auriol has estimated that during 1937 the treasury will have to borrow around 28,000,000,000 francs. Some authorities insist this figure is much too conservative. But, in any event, it is clear that capital must co-operate with the government if the government's needs are to be met. But such co-operation is not yet the order of the day. As a result, the French government was compelled not long ago to borrow $200,000,000 from London.

• • • •

NONE REALIZES more clearly than does M. Blum the potential gravity of this situation. To mollify the conservative elements in France and also prevent a further unbalancing of the budget and a further increase in industrial production costs, he has shelved social reform for the time being.

The present governmental emphasis is on economy. Indeed, M. Blum took pains the other day in pleading with government workers who have been demanding higher wages to meet rising costs, to be patient. He recognized the validity of their demands but pointed out the difficulties of carrying out any such program as they have urged.

Whether this policy by the Blum government of meeting the conservative position half way will be successful remains to be seen. Thus far French capital has been hostile. But it is clear that the alternatives facing France are not between a program entirely satisfactory to the conservatives and M. Blum's liberalism but between that liberalism and the more radical program demanded by a goodly number of the government's present supporters.

Although he would probably deny the title, M. Blum is today the best friend the French conservatives have. They may wake up to that fact before it is too late. But they may not, in which case the future for France may be dark, indeed.

Modern Dramas

By William Lyon Phelps

Good Ones.

In the study of English literature in American schools and colleges no subject has become more generally popular or has developed more rapidly than the drama—Shakespearean, continental and contemporary. When I began teaching Elizebethan drama at Yale in 1894 the greatest difficulty was finding available texts for undergraduates to use. There were no anthologies of the subject, no miscellanies, and the students either had to depend entirely on the college library or borrow from one another, or spend large sums of money in the purchase of the works of separate dramatists. Those who could afford to do so bought what amounted to a small library of Elizabethan drama.

Ten years later, when I gave a course confined exclusively to contemporary plays, the difficulty was, if anything, more acute.

But since those pioneer days innumerable anthologies, miscellanies, collections of old and modern dramas have been published in cheap and available form and have proved an indispensable help to teachers and pupils.

The latest is a fat volume of over 1,100 pages, called "Representative Modern Dramas," and is edited by Prof. Charles Huntington Whitman, of Rutgers University, and is published by the Macmillan Co., New York. It is admirable in every respect, except for its depressing and unnecessary heavy weight. The introduction is good and there is a valuable bibliography, both of plays and of books on the modern drama.

Speeches of Hopkins and Clark on Court Plan

Clark's Attack.

Text of speech by Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, in opposition to President Roosevelt's court program:

I have said, and I believe, that this question transcends all partisanship. But I cannot ignore the proposition, repeatedly urged by supporters of the plan for packing the Supreme Court, that it is in pursuance of a mandate from the people, to wit, the sweeping popular and electoral majority returned for the President and the Democratic ticket in the November election. I deny any such proposition absolutely. No such mandate was received from the people, for the all-sufficient reason that no such issue was submitted to the people.

It has been conclusively proven out of the mouths of the Solicitor General and the Attorney General, as well as from the utterances of Prof. Felix Frankfurter, close adviser of the President and eminent commentator on legal matters, that the idea that age has impaired the vigor of the judges to the extent of interfering with the work of the court is fallacy, pure and simple.

That the age of the present justices on the court is not the real reason for the proposal but is, in truth, merely the basis for a temporary expedient for packing the court for a definite purpose has now been nearly universally admitted, even by the supporters of the measure.

Cites Holmes' Career.

Of the two greatest liberal jurists of modern times, Mr. Justice Holmes served with unimpaired vigor of mind until his ninetieth year and then voluntarily resigned and Mr. Justice Brandeis, now 80, is still the brightest ornament of our judicial system. On the court at the present time the oldest member is the outstanding liberal, while the youngest is perhaps the ablest spokesman for the conservative group.

With the complete explosion of the factual support set up for the proposed changes insofar as it applies to the Supreme Court this basis of argument has been largely abandoned.

My objection is not so much to the increase in the size of the Supreme Court, although I deem so large an increase inadvisable. It is because it amounts essentially to abolishing the Supreme Court of the United States as it has exsited since the foundation of the Republic and the setting up of a new tribunal in its stead with reference to a particular situation and particular litigation. The conclusion in inescapable that to increase the court at one time by the addition of two-thirds of its present membership is to pack the court for a specific purpose.

Loss of Independence.

It would mean the end of an independent judiciary in this country as we have always known it. In my judgment it would be better to have no judicial branch of the Government at all than to have a pitiful shadow of one, subservient to either the executive or the Congress or both of them combined.

Be it not forgotten that a precedent set by a good President of high ideals for good public purposes may be taken advantage of in some future time by a bad President or a mistaken President or one with ulterior motives. If the court can now be increased to nearly double its present membership with respect to a particular situation, some future reactionary President with a subservient Congress could again pack it for the subjugation of our rights.

But the question is asked, "Do you not trust the President?" (which, of course, also includes all future Presidents.) "Do you not trust the Congress?" (which of course includes all future Congresses, as well as the present).

I answer in the words of the immortal Jefferson, the author of our Bill of Rights:

"It would be a dangerous delusion if our confidence in the men of our choice should silence our fears for the safety of our rights. Confidence is everywhere the parent of despotism. Free government is founded on jealousy, not in confidence. It is jealousy, and not confidence, which prescribes limited constitutions to bind down those whom we are obliged to trust with power. Our Constitution has accordingly fixed the limits to which, and no further, our confidence will go. In questions of power, then, let no more be heard of confidence in man, but bind him down from mischief by the chains of the Constitution."

Authority Seized.

We have seen in the very present in an American Commonwealth constitutional changes sponsored by a Governor of good intentions and not misued by him, seized by a man of towering ambition and used by him to destroy every vestige of a republican form of government and establish a dictatorship more complete than that of Mussolini or Hitler—only to be ended by assassination.

It is not my purpose now to discuss the question of whether the dictatorship of Huey Long was a benevolent one or not. But the fact is outstanding that a constitutional change enacted by his predecessor, Gov. Parker, in effect authorizing the Legislature to resolve itself into a constitutional convention and adopt constitutional changes without submission to the people, was the means by which Long achieved his dictatorship. Nor is it to be disputed that his empire did not become complete until he had brought the judicial as well as the legislative and executive branches of the State under his control. And then, one of the first things he did was to jam through legislation to effectually destroy the freedom of the press guaranteed by the Constitution. This incursion against the Constitution and our liberties was thwarted by the unanimous decision of "Nine Old Men" sitting as the Supreme Court of the United States.

Our independent judiciary has always been the protection of the liberties of the individual and of minorities. Without the protection of the Constitution and the courts many of our most precious liberties would have been lost. The Supreme Court has been the guardian of the Bill of Rights.

"Triumphantly" Freed.

In our own time, we have seen an attempt made by the Department of Justice to convict the greatest liberal Senator in the country on a trumped-up charge for his work in driving from office a venal, corrupt Attorney General. He was triumphantly acquitted because the court under the Bill of Rights refused to permit him to be framed before a picked court in an alien jurisdiction.

I am very far from believing that the Supreme Court is sacrosanct or that its decisions are necessarily above criticism. I have read the criticisms of Jefferson and Jackson upon both the personnel and the decisions of the court. I have read the bitter attacks of Lincoln upon the Dred Scott decision and other policies of the court. My first memories are of an era when the court was generally criticized by liberals and by none more than by my father—for its action by a 5-to-4 decision declaring the income tax provisions of the Wilson bill unconstitutional by reason of one justice changing his mind overnight. But these matters have been corrected either by the march of time or by definite constitutional amendments.

It should never be forgotten that a very large percentage of the comparatively few cases in which the Supreme Court has declared acts of Congress or the acts of State Legislatures unconstitutional, it was in pursuance of the bill of rights, the safeguard of our personal liberties. The Supreme Court has prevented illegal searches and seizures of private papers. It has prevented authorization of criminal prosecution after a man has been compelled to testify before a grand jury. It has prevented an effort of Congress to authorize retrial in a Federal court of facts already tried and settled in behalf of the plaintiff in a State court. It has prevented the taking of property for public use without just compensation. It has prevented imprisonment at hard labor without indictment. It has prevented violation of the constitutional provision requiring the defendant in a criminal trial to be confronted by the witnesses against him. It has forbidden a statute authorizing an appeal by the Government in cases where the accused has been once in jeopardy and been found not guilty by a jury. It has declared unconstitutional a statute which attempted to make a crime out of an act which was not a crime when the act was committed and to punish the man for such an act. These are acts of the Congress declared invalid by the Supreme Court which make us pause when the question is asked as to whether or not the Congress cannot be trusted to determine what is constitutional.

The American people have ever been devoted to their Constitution. They know full well that wise men conceived it, that strong men have administered it, that brave men have fought for it, that heroes have died for it. It is my hope and fervent prayer that it will be long, long indeed before the people consent to break down the bridge upon which we have crossed the chasm by changing the fundamental spirit in which the Constitution was conceived and the principles upon which it was founded.

Hopkins' Defense.

Text of speech last night by Harry Hopkins, WPA administrator, indorsing President Roosevelt's proposals for revision of the Supreme Court:

I choose to talk on this question because I don't like to keep coming to the President and the Congress asking for another large sum of money. I'd like to see every man and woman who possibly can given the maximum chance for a private job. The Congress of the people will continue to pass the kind of laws that provide such opportunities. It has done so repeatedly. But a few of the judges of the Supreme Court have decided that such laws shall not be put into operation, and from their decision there is not appeal.

I am in this argument because I feel that the well-being and the hope of millions of people that my agency is trying to hely is definitely at stake.

Today the average man knows what the country needs. So do Congress and the President. Congress has passed laws providing for unemployment relief, drought relief, minimum wages, aid to the farmers, old-age pensions and other necessities. At the election last November the great majority approved those laws. But a bare majority of the nine judges on the Supreme Court have said all those laws were no good and could not be enforced—because the Constitution made them bad. Now, there is not a line in the Constitution that declares them bad; five or six of the nine judges of the Supreme Court merely say that the Constitution makes them bad. That's what causes those laws to be thrown overboard. The margin of differing opinion within the court is often very slight. If two or three of the nine judges had voted the other way, then the decisions would have been five to four or six to three in favor of those laws, they would have been held constitutional, and we could have had what we want and need. So two or three judges made those decisions which deprived us of laws we must have, if our lives are to be endurable.

"Plain Nonsense."

Is that democracy? Isn't it just plain nonsense to say that democracy is endangered because the President wants to put a stop to the killing of popular laws by two or three judges?

Yet there are those who say that, when the President proposes that Congress should do something to neutralize the power of those few judges, he is starting on the road to dictatorship. One ounce of horse-sense in your thinking will dispose of that absurd statement. Think of all the dictators in history—past or present. What's the first thing they try to do? To curb and stifle the legislature—the Parliament or Congress elected by the people. It is the essence of dictatorship to oppose parliaments and congresses. For those popularly-elected bodies are the chief instruments of democracy; dictatorship and a popularly-elected Congress are at opposite poles.

But the President, in his proposal, is not trying to throttle Congress. Instead, he seeks to strengthen democracy by restoring to Congress the powers of which it has been increasingly deprived these last few years by a majority of the Supreme Court.

It is the present majority of the Supreme Court who have been exercising dictatorship—a negative one, perhaps, but a dictatorship none the less. The President is trying to diminish the rigors of that negative dictatorship. There is nothing of the dictator in that.

A leading lawyer, the president of the American Bar Association, said, the other day, that the Supreme Court has always protected the common man, and that that is its function. How can anybody make such a claim? The court plainly has been upsetting laws passed for the benefit of the common man. I know that the Supreme Court last year, when it killed the AAA, struck a direct blow at what millions of ordinary farmers wanted, and that it said the Constitution would prevent the Federal Government from doing all those other things which in a period of crisis it must necessarily do. Naturally, I was particularly interested because, according to Mr. Justice Stone, who disagreed, the views of the majority of the court meant that work-relief and practically every other intelligent kind of relief for the unemployed which the Federal Government has used since 1933 would be held unconstitutional.

The Supreme Court has already killed off minimum wages and collective bargaining; and its opinions threaten all intelligent efforts to prevent the washing of the soil into the ocean (that soil from which we get our food) and the most effective methods of stopping our terrible floods.

So the lawyers and the Republicans and the Liberty League are worried about dictatorship! I have been working four years among the misery caused by their kind of democracy. Do you remember what their New York Herald-Tribune said on the morning of the November election? It didn't say: "The people have spoken, more forcefully than they ever spoke before." It said: "We still have the Constitution and the Supreme Court." They are not interested in democracy. They are afraid of it. When I was a boy I used to hear it said that the cure for the ills of democracy was more democracy. That is what President Roosevelt thinks. That's why he wants to let the people, through Congress, exercise their constitutional rights.

Question of Age.

Now about this question of age.

It's hard for me to forget that not a single one of the nine judges now on the Supreme Court has gone on that bench since the banks closed in 1933. These Justices do know what the common man has been experiencing in the last four years unless they are of a mind to find out. They have to guess at what others know. And the guessing of elderly men about the experience of other men is not likely to be very accurate. Old age has its virtues, but sensitivity to new impressions is not ordinarily one of them. Old men tend usually to restrict their interests, to live in accordance with ideas built up in their younger days, and to try to make other men conform to those out of date ideas.

We must have a court that is resilient, that is in close touch with contemporary America, that shares the hopes and fears of the rest of the country, that is not afraid of democracy. If the majority of the court is not revitalized, if it continues to abuse its powers, if it obstinately paralyzes the Federal Government, then our democracy may, one of these days, become unable to meet our serious economic problems.

"And a weak government in a crisis invites dictatorship. So you see again that it is the President who is fighting to strengthen democracy and in that way to avoid dictatorship.

Lawyers tell us that the Constitution provides for the court to act as a check on Congress and the President. But who is to check the court? Here again the Constitution provides a check, the very check which the President proposes; the power of Congress to increase the number of judges, and the power of the President and the Senate to name the new judges.

Nothing New.

That is nothing new. Even the lawyers dare not say it is unconstitutional. And it is as democratic as the Congress which must pass the bill before it becomes law, or the Senate which must approve any new judge submitted by the President.

Lawyers ask us why we don't amend the Constitution. In the first place, amendments take too long. • • • But above all, we do not seek to amend the Constitution because we can do everything the President proposes without an amendment, yet with entire legality. Those who don't like the President's plan are the ones who ought to be seeking an amendment—an amendment to deprive Congress of its present constitutional power to increase the number of judges.

There is no reason to think that justices appointed by President Roosevelt would be less honest or more subservient (than previous appointees). Don't forget they are appointed for life, and once they take their seats on the Supreme Court bench they are answerable to no one. They would have no reason to be subservient. But presumably they would, as younger men, more wisely interpret the Constitution so as to avoid a violent disruption of American life.

So the question comes down to this: Must our vital current needs be denied by a few men who in my judgment refuse to resign because they disagree with the ideas of an Administration twice indorsed by the people? Must lives and fortunes of millions of Americans depend on the very life span of those justices? Surely that is a kind of tragic gambling in which we should not and need not indulge.

No, those who oppose this plan are not afraid for democracy. They are afraid of democracy.

Perkins Indorses Textile Measure

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Perkins indorsed the Ellenbogan textile regulation bill yesterday in a letter to Representative Keller (Democrat), Illinois. The bill would establish a 35-hour work week in the industry, unsqilled labor would be paid a minimum of $18 a weeek.

Commenting on these provisions, Miss Perkins wrote that they were "desirable and in conformance with a program toward stabilization of employment conditions in industry.

"The maximum hour provision in particular should prove a valuable aid in promoting employment in industry, since it would require the use of many additional workers now unemployed."

The labor secretary suggested that employment of children under 16 years be expressedly prohibited under the measures unfair labor practice section.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Step-Mother's Antagonism Toward Independent Step-Son Saddens Father's Life; He Asks What to Do.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am in a jam and need your advice. I am a man 55 years old and have been married twice. My first wife died years ago leaving me with two small sons. When they were aged 2 and 6, respectively, I married again and my second wife cared for them as if they were her own, and I can say she was a wonderful mother to them until the eldest boy was about 17, when she and he began to get into sharp arguments on different subjects. Now he is 22 and they are very distant toward each other.

• • • •

For some time now he has held a job in another city. He soon forgets past disagreements with his stepmother and when he comes home is friendly toward her, but she reverts back to former arguments and starts another quarrel. Two of his school friends work in the same city and come home every week or so and his likes to do the same, but my wife objects, saying I should tell him to come only every six months only, or, at most, three or four times a year. She says he doesn't come to see his folks, but just to run around with trashy boys and girls and smoke and drink and exert a bad influence over his brother and half-sister, who is now in high school.

• • • •

The truth is we don't know what girls the three boys go out with here, but do know they go to community dances. He says he smokes a cigarette sometimes when with a crowd, just to be sociable, but we never have seen him smoke. We have heard that he will take a drink sometimes, but we have never seen him under the influnce of whisky nor smelled it on his breath, nor has anyone ever heard of his being drunk.

• • • •

My wife says she dislikes him more and more every time she sees him and every time he leaves after a visit home, she demands to know why I don't tell him not to come home so often. Some time ago he asked me if it would be all right for him to return for the week-end and holiday of February 22, and I said "yes." He said if it was not all right he would stay with his two friends, about a mile from our house. This hurt me very much.

• • • •

He has never liked city life, with which I can sympathize for I worked in cities as a boy and was always glad to get back to the country and finally landed the job I have now in the country. But opportunities for good jobs in the country are not what they were 30 years ago and I have urged him to hold on to the job he has. He was thinking of taking a job near home last fall which we did not approve of, as the position he holds is much better, and to keep him from doing so I agreed with my wife not to let him board at home. Now, that may have been all right. But I believe it is carrying things too far to expect him to tell my own son he can't come home, or to insist that his visits home be limited, when his friends who come home nearly week often invite him to come along.

• • • •

I will say there were times before he left home when I thought he might have given in to his stepmother more, or, when he saw she did not like this or that he had said and done, might have asked her pardon and tried to correct the offense. The fact that he didn't made her hateful toward him, but why should it continue? I sincerely believe both are at fault, and the situation has worried me sick.

• • • •

I am unable to keep my mind on my work or enjoy anything and I am afraid it may lead to something serious. My son owes me a small sum of money which he says he intends to pay back real soon, and in fact has already paid some of it. But I told him not to hurry as his salary is small, and that when he got a raise it would be time enough to pay me back. My wife gets after me for not making him pay it back, although her brother owes me several thousand dollars I lent him to pay college expenses, and while he is now practicing, he has never paid a red cent on principal or interest. Yet she never says, "Make him pay," and if I bring up the subject, thinks hard of me for doing so.

• • • •

The way I feel, life doesn't mean much. I love my wife and children and want to be with them as long as I can, but this situation has brought many thoughts that should not be in my mind. If I were financially fixed as I would like to be, I have a remedy to settle the situation, but I want to see my sweet little daughter through high school and college first. But if this situation continues to exist and worry me, as it has the past few days, I know my days are limited.

• • • •

If I were to prohibit my son from coming home except at stated intervals, and he should come down in the meantime to see his friends and have to stay at their homes, admitting that he was not allowed to come to his father's home, what would the community think of me? And can you imagine how I would feel? I would love to have your opinion and suggestions on this subject. Perhaps you may be able to solve the problem to some extent. Your sincerely,

WORRIED FATHER.

A Female Bully.

DEAR WORRIED FATHER: Your wife's attitude is inexcusable. I have no patience with her. She is a female bully, a would-be dictator in petticoats. Your eldest son is probably the only person in the family circle who has dared oppose his will to hers, and I should say off-hand that he deserves to be congratulated for having the strength, courage, determination and stubbornness to hold out against her. So long as he has never done anything worse than resist and resent her probably very tactless efforts to dominate him, he does not deserve the role of family outcast, which is what she is trying to make of him. She is using every weapon and wile at her command to punish and discredit him for daring to defy her.

• • • •

Do you know why she dislikes him more and more every time she sees him? Why she claims he "exerts a bad influence over his brother and half-sister?" She fears him because of his independent spirit. She knows that she has met her match. She is afraid his independence may be contagious; that it may transmit to other members of the household the same courage to declare their right to live their lives somewhat after their own choosing. He acts like a free human being, the remainder of you, probably, like a bunch of sheep.

• • • •

I find nothing particularly culpable in his refusal to bend his will to hers, nor in his refusal to apologize for adopting ways of thinking and acting that are different from her ways—so long as his are decent, honorable, self-respecting ways. He seems, at least, to be free of spite, which is more than can be said for your wife. As the older and presumably the wiser and more tolerant party to those old quarrels, she should be the first to bury the hatchet, mend the breach and strive for harmony and unity in the household and family circle. In refusing to meet his friendly overtures half-way, she is proving herself the worst offender by long odds.

• • • •

There is only one solution to this problem and that is for you to put your foot down wrathfully and firmly, once and for all, on your wife's petty persecution of your son. Assert yourself as a force to be reckoned with in your own home. Tell her your son is welcome there so long as you live, whenever and as often as he chooses to come. Tell her if she carries her nagging any further you are prepared to make an open scandal of the matter by soliciting the opinions of neighbors and friends. If you are a church member, or your wife belongs to church, talk the matter over with the minister and solicit his support. Don't be afraid of what the neighbors may think. They probably already know you are a cruelly henpecked man. And show this article to your wife with my compliments.

Exercise, Diet Reduce Figure Of Movie Star

Steam Baths Also Help to Keep Beverly Roberts' Slim Physique.

By Carolyn Abbott.

NOW everybody is talking about the new figure of Beverly Roberts, motion picture star. This slim build is much different from her old figure, which was "slightly on the heavy side."

When Miss Roberts first came to Hollywood she had the same peach-blow skin she has today, the same sparkling smile and the same softly curling blonde hair, but most decidedly not the same figure. Too many inches around the hips and waist kept Beverly from being Orry-Kelly's favorite model. But take a look at her now and feast your eyes on a streamline figure that isn't excelled by any in Hollywood.

Miss Roberts gives the credit for her trim figure to a combination of exercise, steam baths and diet.

Here is the magic diet:

Breakfast.

One glass of hot water with the juice of one-half a lemon. Stewed fruit—usually figs or prunes—sweetened with honey. Two pieces of toast—whole wheat and very little butter. Coffee or tea with a minimum of cream and sugar.

Luncheon.

A bowl of hot, clear soup without crackers. Broiled fish with a generous helping of spinach, green beans or stewed tomatoes. One slice of rye or whole wheat bread. A dessert of prune whip.

Dinner.

Oyster or fruit cocktail. One slice of roast beef or a small steak. Two cooked vegetables—but not starchy ones. A green salad with French dressing. Stewed fruit or gelatine dessert.

CHILD CHATS

Night Owl Proclivities of Children Caused by Parents' Weak Will.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

SOME mothers of little babies are up several times nearly every night attending to the children.

Many young parents start out on the assumption that normal babies are night owls. They expect trouble and they get it. When they put the baby down for the night they fully expect to see him again before morning, and the baby knows it.

Little children are extremely susceptible to suggestion. Being unable to talk or even understand speech, they seem to have an extra sense by which they read their parents' minds. Perhaps the mother does not express finality when she tucks the baby in. She does not feel it, and the baby senses her indecision.

Of course the explanation lies in the weak wills of the parents. They tiptoe into the nursery to see if the baby is all right every time he turns over or murmurs in his sleep. Some mothers have been known to wake the baby up to be sure he is still breathing. If he cries out and demands to be picked up, neither parent can bear to thwart him and listen to his cries. He is taken up and comforted, perhaps even taken into mother's bed.

A well child should never disturb anyone during the hours appointed for his sleep. If he does, he has either been put to bed carelessly or spoiled. His covering should be so arranged that he cannot get out from under. The bed should be well made, so that he feels comfortable. His bedtime routine should always be the same, and should take place at the same time every night. He should have enough fresh air but not too much. He should never be disturbed, and even if he cries out, should be left alone as soon as his parents have made sure that he is comfortable.

Spring in a Tailored Mood

This chic feminized tailored coat by Creed, made of cheviot, is among the smartest in the spring collections. Though tailored, it possesses details which distinguish it from the severely classic version, as the small revers, double-breasted closing, huge patch pockets, belt of self-material, inverted tucks from under the arms to the hemline, and the fitted silhouette. The black straw sailor with the unusual grouping of field flowers also combines tailored lines and femininity. This hat and coat could top either a tailored suit or silk frock.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Food Industry Helps Our Health.

In the face of such terrific examples as the winter floods this year, which completely stopped the activities of the civilization of a large part of the Ohio River Valley, the thought is inevitable that we are very much at the mercy of nature in her rampant moods. A great city sitting on the bank of a river looks impregnable, and then within a few hours the gentle looking river itself puts it entirely out of business. In one respect, however, man has almost completely conquered his environment—in respect to his food supply.

Fresh Despite Flood.

On the very day that the flood was at it worst, a cold winter day, I was invited to sit down to a delicious plate of all fresh vegetables—not a single pea, or bean, or stalk of asparagus had been planted, grown or matured for four months within a radius of at least 500 miles of the place where I was sitting, and yet here they were by the grace of science, industry and transportation and the modern methods of food preservation.

I was at the canners' convention. Here, in condition to be preserved for months, to be transported any place on the earth, were a variety of things beyond what I ever had suspected—little lambs' tongues, sliced chicken, all sorts of sea food, beef. And in the way of prepared meats—chicken a la king, hamburger steak, sausages, of course, of all kinds; chili con carne, tamales, evaporated milk, tripe, potato salad. Soups, desserts, vegetables, salads, fruits, delicacies, sauces of every kind and variety.

Development Came Gradually.

This development has sneaked up on us so gradually that we do not realize how revolutionary it is. It fits in exactly with the trailer and the automobile, because anybody whose culinary experience includes the ability to boil water can select a group of these things, and in about five minutes prepare a meal far better than the ordinary housewife of 25 years ago could dream of making, with better quality of food and better preparation.

One little gadget interested me. Instead of depending on the taste of the chef or rough measurement of salt in a spoon, they have tablets of salt, from 5 to 50 grains in size, which go into cans of different kinds, according to a predetermined measurement. The open cans swirl along on a platform, and a machine drops exactly the proper amount of salt at the rate of 75 or 75,000 a second—I forget which.

I am not yet prepared to advocate canned meals all the year around. They still should be supplemented with fresh fruit and vegetables and milk, for in spite of all the talk I hear about vacuum cooking to preserve the vitamines, I was not able to find any. But adults could get along for quite a while with cans alone.

Wine Provides 'Added Touch' To Best Dishes

Expatriate Cooks Seem to Be Chief Advocates in This Country.

By Elisabeth E. Poe.

IN SEARCHING over the culinary map one is struck by the constant use of wine in many countries as the source of the final excellence in dishes associated with certain regions. The custom appears to be as old as prepared food itself.

In this country the use of wine has been followed more particularly by the kitchen dictators in Creole, Spanish-American and German cooking than among any other group. Of course, in England the use of liquids of this nature in cooking is centuries old.

The great divisions in wine cooking are into three parts—white wine recipes, red wine recipes and sweet wine ones. White wine appears to have special affinity with fish, and in America, where fish just often is "fish," with little care as to the exact species the more generous use of white wine in fish recipes would improve this part of the meal.

The Washington housewife with a household observing Lenten abstinence as to too frequent use of meat should rejoice to learn how tasteful a "sardine snack" can be made by preparing it as follows:

Sardine Snack.

One can large skinned sardines, 1 teaspoon butter, 1 teaspoon anchovy paste, ¼ cup white wine, 3 dashes white pepper, paprika, toasted fingers of bread and quartered slices of peeled lemon.

Melt the butter, add anchovy paste, stir in wine and dash with pepper. Warm sardines in this mixture, keeping them whole. Serve each on a piece of buttered toast the width of the sardine and dust with paprika; garnish with quartered lemon slices.

By the way, the increased use of paprika will be found grateful to the eye and tempting to the palate. It is a very mild condiment, indeed, and its piquancy improves the most delicate dishes, where a sharper pepper might spoil them. Of course, it may be used much more freely than its cousin, black pepper and much more lavishly than its fiery cousin—cayenne pepper.

Again in this season of penitence, when eggs form so large a part of the diet, it is pleasant to find a new way to fix them with the aid of some good red wine. Take, for instance, "egg matelote," a favorite dish with the French, and almost as widely known as their "Bouillabaise."

It is simple enough to prepare and many French cooks use this method.

Egg Matelote.

Two tablespoons butter, 1 small onion, chopped, ½ garlic clove, minced, 1 tablespoon minced celery, ½ bay leaf, 1 small bit thyme, 4 eggs, salt and pepper, 1 cup claret, 1-3 cup broth or water, 1 tablespoon flour and 1 teaspoon minced parsley.

Fry onion, garlic and celery in 1 tablespoon butter, but do not brown; add bay leaf and thyme, salt and pepper, claret and broth; simmer 15 minutes. Take out bay leaf and thyme, and thicken with flour kneaded with one tablespoon of butter. Cook 5 minutes. Pour sauce into a baking dish, break in the eggs, season, and place in oven until eggs set. Sprinkle with parsley.

One of the most notable dishes made with sweet wines is that "ragout of snapping turtle," of which a Bristol alderman a century ago wrote:

"I hate French cooks, but love their wine,
On fricassee I scorn to dine,
And bad's the best ragout;
Let me of claret have my fill,
Let me have turtle to my will
In one large, mighty stew.

All boons in one I ask of fate:
At city feasts to eat my weight,
And drink enough to swim in."

And here is the way a French cook makes this delicious and time-honored dish.

Ragout of Snapping Turtle.

One 8-pound snapping turtle, beef broth, 1 bouquet of herbs, 1 piece mace, 6 peppercorns, crushed, grated rind ½ lemon, ¾ cup sherry, salt. Drop turtle in boiling water and boil 30 minutes. Remove and cool in cold water. Remove scales, nails, outer skin, and entrails; save liver, being careful in removing gall bag, as breaking it would ruin the meat. Cut flesh into small portions. Put in saucepan with sufficient beef broth to cover; add seasonings, except sherry. Simmer slowly 3 hours, then add ½ cup sherry, remove from stove and allow to cool. Keep in ice box until ready to use. Heat in saucepan. Salt to taste, and at the moment of serving stir in the last ¼ cup sherry.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Brooks.

ALICE HUGHES.

THE METROPOLITAN OPERA, once dedicated to two-ton soprani and bloated tenor, seems to be going in for half-pint prima donnas under the dispensation of Maestro Edward Johnson. First there was Lily Pons, who frets if she weighs over 105 and less than 100, and now, from Brazil comes the tiny Bidu Sayao, who has just made her Met debut as "Manon," thrilling the pew-holders as much with her dark beauty as with her fine lyric soprano.

I thought it my duty to witness this new Met baby close too, so I called, and found her charming, with a speaking voice like a well-tuned cello.

"I come from a very wealthy family in Brazil," she told me, "but they didn't even give me moral support in my work for a musical career. They thought that marriage was all the career a Brazilian girl needed. But I persevered, started singing at 16, and finally studied under the great Jean de Reszke."

• • • •

Already the demon movie scouts are trailing the little, dark beauty from down below, but she isn't listening to their siren song—yet. She says she is far too busy whipping up her English to think of the screen.

Meanwhile, the once stuffy old Met, suddenly devoted to youth in song, has another tiny, lovely prima donna to match its darling Pons. What a sister act Pons and Sayao would make!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Sign of spring on Murray Hill—swarthy Italians are selling pussy willows on the street corners. And most incredible of all, a hurdy-gurdy was stationed right in front of the Grand Central Station, one of the busiest spots in town, grinding out "The Sidewalks of New York" . . .

• • • •

Aren't you always cheered up by the hot news of Palm Beach? It always brightens my laborious days, just to know how the folks down there are carrying on so nobly. For instance, I have been so delighted with the news of the weekly backgammon tournament, on which wagering is perfectly frantic. Somebody named Pete Barbey, jr., won the latest struggle and $400 cash. Alas, Janet Newbold Ryan Stewart and the fabulously rich Mrs. Laura Corrigan were eliminated in the early rounds, while thousands groaned. My spy down there reports that the entrants are pretty grim about these backgammon bouts. No blood has yet been spilled, but the spectators have hopes . . .

The saddest story of the new year is the final surrender of the once rich and adored William Faversham, at 69, to the pleasant Actors' Home out on Long Island. What a star he was, with his beautiful wife, Julie Opp! Many a loving wife was flustered by Faversham's good looks in the days of "The Squaw Man" and he spends his sunset days in a home for old troupers. It's drama such as he never played . . .

Our young folks have such fun! The cutest thing they've done lately is ape the late surrealist exhibition with their own showing of "Ga-Ga Art." Much of it is really funny. Elizabeth Churchill copped the blue ribbon with a cloud effect entitled "Gone With the Wind But Will Return in an Hour." Colette O'Connor took second with "Wine From These Grapes"—a synthetic bunch of grapes over a glass of water containing an aspirin tablet. But my favorite was a masterpiece called "Man With a Fur Tongue." It won nothing but applause . . . Gloria Vanderbilt, lovely as ever, was one of the judges.

The old-time fingernail buffer has burst into new popularity, since the girls have realized how much better the nails look when buffed heartily before applying the lacquer. There's a new one on the market with a ball handle—and with a new gadget which makes it simple to change the chamois. I'm hunting the town for a girl with unlacquered nails. So far no luck—except myself.

Lipstick Exports Total $545,000

Women in other lands spent $545,000 during the last year for lipsticks made in America, a survey reported in Industrial and Engineering Chemistry. The outlay was almost double that for the preceding year.

Also popular abroad, the survey discloses, were talcum powder, with exports valued at $500,000; hair preparations, $488,00; perfumes, bay rum and toilet water, $562,000; dental creams, $1,560,000, and perfume materials, $1,580,000.

Foreign purchases of American medicines gained from 8 to 20 per cent in 1936. Pills, powders, capsules and ointments accounted for $2,515,000. Proprietary medicines, particularly those classed as "tonics, blood purifiers, emulsions and appetizers," brought $1,607,000.

The Beauty of your Hair is its Color

And any color can be lovely if it is highlighted with skill. Elizabeth Arden has opened a department in her Salon to specialize on this alone. Perhaps your hair is dull, or has grown darker. Perhaps its color never really flattered you. These things can be remedied so that the world will know only that your hair is beautiful beyond comparison.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"EIGHTEEN, athletic and a college freshman—that's the young lady whose room is perplexing me right now," writes her mother. "She's brown-eyed and looks well in greens, yellows, orange and rust brown. I am willing to buy new furnishings complete for her room if they're not too expensive."

What a lot of things you can do with a room starting out with everything new, even on a budget. No wonder it's puzzling! If you have several old things that have to be used, they more or less settle the matter. This way there are ever so many different ideas to decide between.

We saw a perfectly stunning room recently in emerald green and white. White walls, emerald green spread and draperies, white and green plaid rug (really a summer rug but appropriate here), white painted furniture and crystal lamps and accessories. This room would be a very good background for athletic trappings because it isn't fussy.

But maybe you'd like something less austere. Yellow painted woodwork and doors . . . pale aquamarine walls, yellow swiss or organdy curtains and bedspread, flowered scatter rugs, very simple modern walnut furniture.

Or peach walls and woodwork, a soft blue rug, flowered chintz draperies and bedspread, colonial mahogany furniture.

Or dark brown walls with white woodwork, a matting floor, blonde maple modern furniture, beige corduroy for spread and draperies. A pair of small arm chairs in light yellow-green and a quilted puff of this same shade can provide interesting color accents.

Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for the writer's bulletin "Color Schemes for Pleasant Rooms."

Beach Garb This Year Influenced by Orient

Paris (U.P.).—All beach clothes have a definite flare this year. Even the shorts rather imitate a swing skirt and are cut widely on the bias. Some of the costumes are of Oriental inspiration with full skirts that fall in thick folds. One of the skirts, in white linen, is worn with a bright green linen jacket, short-sleeved and bare in back, and a huge floppy straw hat in lemon yellow. The front brim is turned back on the crown with this type of hat.

Only Simple Stitchery Required For This Rustic Home Panel

Pattern 5297.

By Alice Brooks.

A RUSTIC HOME in a flower garden with the old-time well giving just the right touch, proves delightful "needle-painting." It's done to the greatest part in singlestitch; a touch of French knots and lazy-daisy stitch give realism to the flowers. You needn't frame it—just line it and hang it up. In pattern 5297 you will find a transfer pattern of a wall hanging 15x20 inches; a color chart; material requirements; illustrations of all stitches used; directions for finishing wall hanging.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post, Household Arts Dept., 259 W. Fourteenth street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

Pineapple Is Served With Macaroni Papoose

Have you ever had a macaroni papoose? Take it from Bette Davis, movie actress, the dish is worth trying. It is simple to make, too. Cook a package of macaroni, broken into 4-inch lengths, until it is tender. Drain it and spread it out on thin slices of raw, smoked ham. Sprinkle with plenty of horseradish and cheese. Roll the slices and skewer or tie them together.

Place the papooses in a shallow baking dish and dampen them with a third of a cup of milk. Bake in a moderate oven for a little over a half hour. Serve hot with a side dish of crushed pineapple which is delicious sprinkled over the ham.

Turbans, Ties Match.

Marcia Ralston, movie actress, adores self-wrapped turbans, so every time she buys a length of material to tie about her head she gets enough extra material to have a tie tailored up right for her husband, Phil Harris, the orchestra leader.

Gay Designs Mark Prints for Spring

New York (AP).—Anything from pink cats to human faces and crouching tigers may peer from the surface of women's print frocks this spring.

The print designers who started the season with "Wallie" and "amour, amour" prints, and next created a scarf with all the amendments to the Federal Constitution on it, have risen to new heights in their latest patterns.

Animals from the jungle, the barnyard and the circus parade prance on new spring silks. There are masks of human faces in delicate outline, framed by flowers and feathery foliage, printed on sophisticated evening gowns.

Red and black elephants, with howdahs on their backs, disport themselves among blue, green and yellow flowers on a new afternoon dress.

Many Notables, Including Mrs. Roosevelt, Enjoy Antics of Stunt Night As Women's National Press Club Stages Its Annual Dinner at Willard

Many Parties Precede and Follow Colorful Affair at Willard; Guest List Includes Women of Diplomatic Corps and Social Set in This Section.

Alice Longworth Follows Usual Custom With Supper After Event; Mrs. Evalyn McLean Entertains at Suite in Hotel.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

The ballroom of the Willard Hotel was the scene last night of one of the gayest affairs of the winter season, the annual stunt party at which the Women's National Press Club entertained in honor of Mrs. Roosevelt and a distinguished list of guests. Like the First Lady's party for the "Gridiron Widows," it was exclusively for the ladies—and 500 attended.

Not only were they present from diplomatic, official and residential society in Washington, but also from other cities, noted women of outstanding accomplishment, who came as guests of honor.

Parties were given both before and after the dinner. Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, one of the guests of honor, who not long ago entertained the newspaper women and their guests, again entertained them last evening at the largest of the individual parties held in connection with the dinner. From 6 to 7, she received the "ladies of the press" and friends they were entertaining in a suite she had reserved at the Willard, where a bar had been set up for the occasion.

Wears Famous Jewels.

She wore the Hope diamond and hanging below it on a diamond chain, the Star of the East, a series of diamond bracelets on both arms and a simple black gown. Her young daughter, Miss Evalyn Washington McLean, who was the guest of one of the club members, was dressed in coronation blue satin and wore a close necklace of small diamonds and sapphires.

Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry, who attended the dinner as a guest of Miss Hazel Edgar, had a small group at her home beforehand, including others in the party of Miss Edgar and Mrs. Mary MacCracken Jones. They were Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy; Mrs. Caspar Whitney, of New York; Mrs. James F. Curtis, Mrs. John C. Fremont, Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, Mrs. John Philip Hill, Mrs. Leo Pasvolsky, Miss Mary Randolph, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Miss Dorothy Thompson and Mrs. William Hard.

Mrs. John Herrick and Mrs. Warren Wheaton also entertained at a cocktail party for their dinner guests and other friends, some of whom were among the guests of honor. Mme. Saito, wife of the Japanese Ambassador, arrived, accompanied by Mrs. Louis Caldwell. Mme. Saito wore a gown of black lace, with a pearl necklace, and Mrs. Caldwell a gown of ice pink satin trimmed in pleating of electric blue, the material a gift from Japan.

Others Present.

Among others there were Mrs. Morgenthau, wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, wearing a gown of burnt orange crepe; Lady Willert, who has been a guest at the White House and is now with Miss Mary Winslow, wearing a wine-colored velvet gown with fur at the hem, while Miss Winslow wore jade green chiffon, with a gold belt and gold ornament in her hair; Mme. Ertegun, wife of the Turkish Ambassador, in a gown of gray chiffon; Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, in black satin, with pearls at her neck; Mme. Troyanovsky, wife of the Soviet Ambassador, wearing a gown of blue and gold brocade, and Senator Hattie Caraway, wearing a black crepe gown with a lace cape.

Several other club members who had planned small cocktail parties changed their plans to take their guests to that at which Mrs. McLean entertained.

Mrs. Alice Longworth, as is her custom, gave a supper at her home following the stunt party. The table was set, as in former years, with a large turkey, a ham and pots of baked beans. She assembled most of the guests in her party, inviting them as she greeted them at the dinner, making it an entirely informal gathering.

Notables Present.

Other guests of honor also were seated there, including Mrs. William B. Bankhead, wife of the Speaker of the House; Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, and other Cabinet ladies; Mme. Jarnefelt, wife of the Finnish Minister, and the ladies of Congress, as well as the special out-of-town guests.

Mme. Sze, wife of the Chinese Ambassador, was gowned in a white brocaded velvet robe, with which she wore jade ornaments, and Mme. Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador, wore a Maggy Rouff model of black lace with a velvet bodice forming a halter neck buttoned at the back.

Capital Society to Attend Wedding Of Miss Story and Mr. Roosevelt

Members of Washington society will be present at the wedding today at 4 o'clock in Philadelphia of Miss Vera Felicity Story, daughter of Mrs. Julian Story, of that city, to Mr. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt, jr., son of Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt, of Washington, and the late Mr. Roosevelt. The ceremony will take place in St. Luke's Church, the Rev. Thomas L. Harris officiating.

Miss Story will have as her matron of honor her sister, Mrs. Edward Ewer, and the bridesmaids will be Miss Elizabeth Reeves, Miss Martha Hopkins and Miss Eleanor Roosevelt, sister of the bridegroom. The bride's nieces, Miss Emelyn Ewer and Miss Elaine Ewer, will be flower girls.

Mr. William Morrow Roosevelt will be best man, and the ushers will be Mr. Louis H. Van Dusen, Mr. Samuel K. Reeves, jr., Mr. James B. Kerr, jr., Mr. Henry Boas Maguire, Mr. George Strawbridge, Mr. Perry Benson, Mr. Theodore Frelingheysen, Mr. Pennington Whitehead and Mr. John Whitney.

After the ceremony there will be a reception at the home of the bride's mother, 332 South Thirteenth street.

Admiral Pettingill and Wife Give Last 'At Home' of Season

The Commandant of the Washington Navy Yard and Mrs. George Pettingill's "at home" at their quarters yesterday was their last of the season.

Friends came in from 5 to 7 p. m. and were received by Rear Admiral and Mrs. Pettingill in rooms colorful with a mixture of spring flowers, tulips and daffodils predominating.

Assisting in pouring were Mrs. George F. Hussey, wife of Commander Hussey; Mrs. Royal E. Ingersoll, wife of Capt. Ingersoll; Mrs. Stanford C. Hooper, wife of Capt. Hooper; Mrs. Francis T. Evans, wife of Col. Evans, and Mrs. Lyman S. Perry, wife of Lieut. Comdr. Perry, aide to the commandant.

Mrs. Arthur D. Wright Entertains At Luncheon for Mrs. James Bose

Mrs. Arthur Davis Wright had as her honor guest, Mrs. James Redfield Bose, of New York, at a luncheon yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel.

Her other guests were Mme. Saito, wife of the Japanese Ambassador; Mrs. Randolph Dickins, Mrs. Franklin Kenworthy, Mrs. Charles Williamson, Mrs. Henry Albers, Mrs. Ethel Rodgers, Mrs. Edwin Starling, Mrs. Strickland Gillilan, Mrs. J. G. Christopher, Mrs. Benjamin Smith, Mrs. Stewart Walker, Mrs. Absalom Waller, Mrs. Arthur McArthur and Miss Mary Morris Wright.

Governor of Virgin Islands, Wife To Attend Preview of Paintings Here

The Governor of the Virgin Islands and Mrs. Cramer will be guests of honor at a preview of paintings of the Virgin Islands to be given on Thursday from 4:30 to 6:30 at Studio House.

Included in the exhibit will be the works of several Washington residents who went to the islands last summer to paint for the Treasury project of the Public Works Administration. They are Mr. Robert Franklin Gates, assistant director of Studio House; Mr. Mitchell Jameson, Mr. Avery Johnson and Mr. Townsend Mitchell. Mr. Prentiss Taylor, who has also visited the islands, will be included in the exhibitors.

Mrs. William Allston Graham entertained at a small luncheon yesterday in the Pall Mall Room of the Raleigh Hotel in honor of Mrs. Benjamin Fuller, wife of the former commandant of the Marine Corps. Other guests included Mrs. Hugh Matthews and Mrs. Atcheson Hassan.

Practice Songs for Show

Program Features Big News Events Expected to Happen; Sit-Down Strike at White House Is One of the Evening's Highlights.

Former King Edward and Mrs. Simpson Are Satirized in 'Sweethearts' Quarrel;' Newsboys Cry Their 'Extras' as Events Develop.

Newspaperwomen of Washington "scooped the world" last night when, turned into prophets and actresses, they presented to an audience of distinguished women, including Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, a dramatization of the ten biggest news stories of 1937—none of which has happened yet.

The occasion was the dinner and party of the Women's National Press Club at the Willard Hotel.

The First Lady had the last word after the lights had dimmed on the ladies of the press, and commented briefly, but to the point, on the startling news that had been revealed.

Under the direction of Martha Strayer, news events started happening thick and fast soon after a mistress of ceremonies announced the preview of what could be expected in 1937. A newsboy stormed through the audience and across the stage, shrieking, "Extra! Extra! Great sit-down strike!"

White House "Closed."

Curtains swung back to reveal the door of the White House, with pickets carrying signs reading, "This Shop Closed," "Sit-down Strike." A woman who wanted Mrs. Roosevelt's "pet" homestead project, approached the door and banged loudly. After an agonizing but futile effort to get a response, the woman from Reedsville staggered back in horror, crying, "Mrs. Roosevelt IS on a sit-down strike!"

A gentle Junior Leaguer, a delegate of the Society of Critics of Mrs. Roosevelt, and even Secretary of Labor Perkins appeared upon the scene and failed to remedy the situation. Mrs. Roosevelt sat on.

Presently then the newsboy shouted the next extra—"All about the Lovers' Quarrel!"

The scene was a bedroom, after the marriage of Wally and Windsor. A royal crown atop the post of a shabby iron bed. An ermine robe covered the foot of the bed. Its occupants talked long and loudly along lines that sounded something like a post-mortem on bridge, with arguments about whether the "king finesse" or the "queen finesse' was what lost the game. The lady declared it was all the result of letting "Stanley Baldwin take that last trick."

Down to Last Truffle.

The famous sweethearts, it seemed, were down to their last truffle and can of caviar.

Meanwhile, the strike went on. Proof of this was shown by picket signs demanding "No More Inaugural Teas," "Down With Newspaper Columns," "Union Hours for First Ladies."

Again a shout from the newsboy announced an extra. This time the newspaper women were exposing a great racket—that old hoax that "You meet such interesting people." The Social Sec-ree-tree promised to make the social climber one of "those interesting people." The Cabinet lady declared:

"I'm good to my servants—and in all my whirls,
I'm even nice to the newspaper
girls
As well as the interesting people."

The diplomatic wife asserted:

"For love uv my coun-tree, I take great pains
To please doze vool-gar Americains—
But parties joost for zee foreign corps—
Zose are zee ones I saimply
Adore
'Cause I meet sooch ainteresting pee-pul!"

As the curtain went down on this scene, the newsboy shouted the latest returns on the strike. "Mrs. Roosevelt won't negotiate! Rejects peace move!" On the heels of this, however, came another extra. "Read Hattie Caraway's Diary."

The scene for this was a newsroom, and a reporter rushed in with "the scoop of the century" She had found Mrs. Caraway's diary.

Again the newsboy shouted reports from the strike front. Counter-pickets were menacing the White House. But that news was as nothing compared to the "big fashion flash of the year." "Surrealist hats" were then displayed to the audience from the shop of the originator. Among the first shoppers was Alice Roosevelt Longworth, who promptly purchased a bonnet from Mme. Surrealist.

Others who had suitable hats concocted for them were Cornelia Otis Skinner and Representative Caroline O'Day.

The quiet shopping expedition was broken up, however, by hot news from the labor front. Pickets and counter-pickets fought at the White House door; a Pinkerton labor spy was found listening at the keyhole.

As the warfare subsided, the newsboys screamed the decision of the Supreme Court on the President's court reform plan. The justices appeared, attired in black robes and gave a six-to-three decision—a long judicial "Boo-oo!"

Even this surfeit of big stories could not restrain the gasps of the newsboy who shouted: "The revolution is here Read all about it, ladies" The curtain then went up on Mrs. Vanderbilt's home on Fifth avenue. The revolutionists were there, replete with earnestness, beards, red flags and torches to fire the Vanderbilt mansion. Everything was ready for a revolution, which for first one reason and then another never could get under way. Finally Mrs. Vanderbilt arrived, carrying a large box and voicing many apologies for being late for the revolution. Immediately following this scene, the revolution came—in dance rhythm.

Another shout from the newsboy. An extra was out on "President's message to Congress All about the great society reorganization!" To the tune of a regular Congressional harangue, punctuated with pithy perorations from earnest Representatives, countless suggestions were made as to what should be done about it. During the entire debate, a quiet Representative attempted without success to get the floor. Finally, he did—just in time move that "the President's message be laid on a silver salver. My wife says she likes society the way it is!"

News of strike-breakers at the White House closed down this scene. Then another "story" broke. It was "the 1937 March on Moscow!"

Mrs. Joseph E. Davies, wife of the new Ambassador to Soviet Russia, was represented leading a safari across the Russian steppes.

Then came the biggest story of all. "Strike breakers at the White House!" screamed the newsboy. The curtain swung back to reveal two women at the White House door. The one clad in a Girl Scout costume looked very much like Mrs. Herbert Hoover, while the other, profusely adorned with sunflowers, was obviously Mrs. Alfred M. Landon. Upon this scene the curtain was drawn, as the mistress of ceremonies announced that the great sit-down strike was broken so that Mrs. Roosevelt could make her speech at the Women's National Press Club stunt party. Miss Mary Hornaday, president of the club, then introduced her to close the program. The First Lady's remarks were "off the record."

First Lady Not Seeking High Office

Doubts Woman Will Be President for Some Time to Come.

Mrs. Roosevelt Reorganizes Menus for Breakfasts at White House.

A woman President of the United States? Well, not for a long time. While there are plenty of women capable of holding such a high office, there is none who could obtain the backing that would enable a woman President to be of real service.

That, anyway, is the opinion of Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt, who, at her press conference yesterday, spiked the rumor going around to the effect that Postmaster General Farley has started a campaign to make her President of the United States when her husband's term expires in 1941. "The report," she said, "is ridiculous."

In answer to a report of Mrs. Robert Low Bacon's accusation that she was "stirring up class hatred again," Mrs. Roosevelt declared there should be no question of class in a country like the United States, and that so far as she remembered, she never had used the word or implied it. Mrs. Bacon, wife of Representative Bacon, of New York, and vice chairman of the New York State Republican committee, made the statement recently in an article condemning the President's Supreme Court proposal. She referred to a published quotation from a remark by Mrs. Roosevelt at a press conference in which she was quoted as saying that "only those who fear material losses and who write on embossed stationery" oppose her husband.

Changes Menus.

A breakfast and luncheon reorganization is taking place at the White House, Mrs. Roosevelt said. The crisis came when, through some oversight (a chef in the kitchen having failed to check with another), the President was served with the same kind of salt fish four days in succession. He is fond of salt fish, but he likes a variety.

There was a twinkle in the First Lady's eyes as she discussed the matter of menus. She had just submitted 20 different ones for luncheon, she said, and had received some helpful suggestions on breakfasts from Lady Willert, who was a recent guest at the White House. The President had stuffed crab for luncheon yesterday.

Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of the President, who was here over the week-end, and had expected to attend the party of the newspaper women last night, instead returned to New York on receiving word of the death of Dr. Wilber H. Dailey, personal dentist to the family for 25 years.

She joined Mrs. Roosevelt at the press conference yesterday morning and, as she entered, was greeted by her daughter-in-law with a cheery: "Oh, come in Mummy." The elder Mrs. Roosevelt wore a gown of violet velvet, becoming with her white hair.

The First Lady, in answer to a question as to whether it had been her custom to smoke after luncheon and dinner since coming to the White House, explained she had made it a rule to do so when she first came in order to put her guests at ease, but now that it was generally known the ladies were expected to smoke if they wished, she herself seldom did.

She announced at the beginning of her press conference, it would be "snappy," as she was preparing to drive to Annapolis to be the guest of Mrs. David Foote Sellers, wife of Rear Admiral Sellers, superintendent of the Naval Academy, at luncheon and later to speak before the Naval Academy Women's Club.

She returned for the stunt party of the newspaper women last night and today has gone to New York for the junior party at Todhunter School.

Tomorrow she will be guest of honor at the luncheon of the League of Women Voters of the District; will receive at two teas at the White House in the afternoon and attend the Cabinet dinner for the President in the evening.

Trinity Girls Hold 7 Benefit Parties

Thursday Gatherings Raise Carroll House Funds.

Seven benefit card parties will be held on Thursday, the proceeds to go to the Carroll House of Studies for Boys.

The parties are to be at the homes of seven Washington girls who are students at Trinity College and practically the entire student body of the college will be guests at one or another of the gatherings. Hostesses will be Miss Grace Mary Colflower, who is also general chairman of arrangements; Miss Edith Sullivan, Miss Mildred McDonald, Miss Florence Caspar, Miss Ellen de Bettencourt, Miss Katharine Friant and Miss Eileen Walsh.

The Carroll House of Studies was established and is supervised by Dr. Edward Roth, who is a member of the faculty at Trinity and at Catholic University. The House provides a home and an industrial school for a number of boys who would otherwise be thrown on their own resources without high school or industrial training.

Trinity College girls have taken an active interest in the project, and earlier in the year spent much time making curtains, painting woodwork and otherwise making the house attractive.

Dressy, Colorful Spring Frocks Previewed at Hecht's Show

'The Girl in Beige' Illustrates Trend Away From Mannish Modes; Suits Are Popular; Coronation Influence Noted.

The Hecht Co. staged a colorful fashion show last night in the Young Washingtonian Shop. It was attended by the large family organization of Hecht's. Being not only a clever presentation of the spring mode but a smart stimulant as well, it seemed to have caught the general mood of optimism for a bigger and brighter style-consciousness this spring.

The program related color, line and trends cleverly. Entitled "The Girl in Beige," the exhibit displayed many creamy and gray beiges. There were numerous suits, both classic and tailored. Everywhere was a softer and more feminine feeling than in last spring's more mannish modes. Worsted and lustratones and some men's flannels were evident.

Navy, always a friend, was here, there and everywhere, both in tailluers and in boxy jigger coats. One heather shag was of the three-piece variety—combining three colors, thistle, navy and gray.

As suits are so definitely the biggest event in the spring parade, this showing stresses every variation, from the classically casual to the regal fur-trimmed dress-up suits. Blond fox and wolf, and, naturally enough, silver foxes, were in evidence on both tunic-suited ensembles and on fine beige coats.

There were not only "bread and butter" dresses, classic knits and redingotes, but some of the daintiest afternoon and evening frocks seen for several seasons.

The coronation influence was reflected in the deep, purply violets, Windsor blues, rose quartzes and the ever-regal blacks and whites.

Embroidery, lace of all types, heavy fur trimmings and flaring guardsmen's capes all are influenced by the coronation. Even evening wraps take on a man's opera cape appearance.

There were mammoth single daisies or two-flower sprays in each lapel for suits, paisley turbans, and youthful flower toques for dressy frocks and suits. And lots of color was evident in shoes, bags and gloves.

THE MERRY WHIRL

No, our eyes did not mislead us—it was Mrs. Roosevelt with her young son, John, and his schoolmate, Nathaniel Clark, who were briskly cantering down the bridle path along the Potomac late the other afternoon.

Talk about the postman taking a walk on his day off—that original chap has nothing on the White House aides, those gallant young men of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps who furnish a certain amount of glamour with their uniforms, medals and gold braid at the Presidential parties. After a busy official season with receptions and dinners at 1600 Pennsylvania avenue taking place just about every other evening, they still have not had too much partying—that is—apparently not, because they are planning one of their own.

Horace Smith, who has a habit of starting things, first advanced the idea of an aide party and now Henry Hederman and "Snuffy" Lynn are in charge of arrangements for the dinner dance which will take place a week from Wednesday; March 10, to be exact, at the Army and Navy Country Club.

Now, after a season of rigidly observed seating arrangements at dinners, we are wondering how it will be handled this time and by whom. At least the State Department will not have to be called in.

The very next time anyone (we don't care who) starts belittling the British sense of humor, we shall turn completely unsympathetic and very deaf ears on the talker. Britishers really have the lion's share of (no pun intended) this precious gift, when you come right down to it.

The other day we were talking to Capt. A. L. P. Mark-Wardlaw, of the Royal Navy, about his young son and his name. We had inquired about the little kid's first name and the captain, said, "Oh, it is Mark."

Then when we continued to be utterly blank he hastened to add, "The whole thing is Mark Mark-Wardlaw—we call his Mark Squared."

Now, for a rumor—a certain young woman, well known about these parts, musical, attractive and whose initials could very easily stand for District of Columbia, has said yes to a chap who is setting sail on the high seas this very day to return to his duty in the tropics. He will be back again within a few months and from what we hear, the wedding bells will chime out in November.

A brightly colored card from Los Angeles brings us the tidings that Anne Barrett and her grandmother, Mrs. Baldwin Spilman have safely reached California and are having the time of their lives. They have "done" Hollywood and at the time of writing are about to take off for a fling around Santa Barbara, and thence up to San Francisco, the city of bridges and gates.

Miss Gladys Harrison Honor Guest at Dinner

Miss Gladys A. Harrison, attorney associated with the Social Security Board in Minneapolis, who is visiting Miss Margaret M. Wells at 3304 N street, was the guest of a group of her friends and former associates at a dinner party at the Shoreham Hotel last evening.

The guests included Mrs. Harris Baldwin, Mrs. H. H. Jacobs, Mrs. Arnetta G. Zillmer, Mrs. Herbert O'Hare, Mrs. Agnes Meyer, Dr. Estella Ford Warner, Miss Elizabeth Christman, Miss Betty Webb Miss Mary Anderson, Miss Ann Larrabee, Miss Constance Roach, Miss Caroline Ware, Miss Katherine Frederic, Miss Florence Kirlin, Miss Ida Klaus, Miss Belle Sherwin, Miss Edith Rockwood, Miss Charlotte Chatfield, Miss Mary Switzer, Miss Annabel Matthews and Miss Tracy Copp.

The Attorney General and Mrs. Homer C. Cummings will return to Washington in time for the dinner to be given by the Cabinet members tomorrow evening in honor of President Roosevelt. They have been in Palm Beach and Puerto Rico.

Constitution Gown Opens Style Show

Mrs. Garland Ferguson, Jr., in 1904 Gown, Leads Models.

Mrs. Hurja Announces for Women's Democratic Club Affair.

By Helen Abbey.

The Women's National Democratic Club has a flair for drama.

First to descend the stairs for its fashion show yesterday afternoon at the clubhouse was Mrs. Garland Ferguson, jr., in the guise of "Miss Constitution." Her gown was a model of 1904 and from the Merry Widow hat swept a long white plume. The dress once was owned by the mother of Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark, Mrs. Wilbur Marsh. Mrs. Clark, who wore a plum-colored ensemble, directed this annual fashion show.

From there the years were bridged and the show continued with only advance spring fashions from the studio of Mrs. Inka Kabelar, who is the wife of Judge John W. Price and a member of the club.

Introduced by Mrs. Hurja.

Mrs. Emil Hurja, dressed in a long black net gown trimmed with bunches of red flowers caught on the full skirt, introduced the models and commented on the varied styles, including the dowager ruffles on the gown of "Miss Constitution."

Mrs. Henry Schweinhart was the next to pivot before the large gathering, and was followed by Mrs. George Allen, wife of the District Commissioner. Mrs. William A. Morgan, another of the models, wore a cream lace dress and changeable taffeta wrap. Mrs. Arthur Mullen, wife of the former national committeeman from Nebraska, was much applauded by the audience, as were Miss Fontaine Flannery, Miss Achsah Dorsey, Miss Virginia Catlette, Miss Katherine Friant and Mrs. George T. Becker, the latter wearing a silver blue satin evening dress.

In the audience were Mrs. Cordell Hull, dressed in black and wearing a tricorn hat of black; Mrs. Henry Wallace, in black and white; Mrs. Daniel Roper, in green, and Mrs. Jesse Jones, in a blue gown. Seated nearby was Mrs. Wilbur Hubbard, the new president of the club. She was in black with three gardenias at her shoulder.

Mrs. Robinson in Black.

Also seen were Mrs. Joseph T. Robinson, wife of Senator Robinson, who was in black; Mrs. William B. Bankhead, in a black dress and hat, with a gray fox scarf about her shoulders; Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, Mrs. Cabot Stevens, Mrs. Myra Shepard, in gold trimmed with black buttons.

Mrs. Martin Dies, wife of the Senator from Texas, in beige contrasted with coral; Mrs. Monroe Johnson, in blue with gold jewelry; Mrs. Max Gordon in a black suit trimmed with fox; Mrs. Clinton Tribby, in black with green accents on her black hat, and Mrs. William Mark Conrad, in black and white, and carrying a fox fur.

Several in the audience commented on the prevalence of black and white during the winter season, in contrast to the colorful spring styles. The three clubrooms crowded with guests, however, denoted the coming season, for bright daffodils and other spring flowers had been placed about.

Many Luncheon Parties.

Before the show many were entertained at luncheon at the club. Mrs. Wallace was a member of the party entertained by Mrs. Hurja, whose other guests were Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, Mrs. Royal McKenna, Mrs. William Jennings Price, Mrs. John St. Clair Brookes, Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor, Miss Mary Howry, Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, Mrs. George Maryo, Senora Mariano Arcaya, Mrs. Sidney Taliaferro, Mrs. Garland Ferguson, jr., and Mrs. Thomas Anthony Wadden.

Mrs. Roper was a guest at the party of Mrs. J. Craig Peacock, who also entertained Mrs. Fred Roper, Mrs. Edward B. Meigs, former president of the club, and Mrs. Harllee Branch.

Mrs. Clark entertained a group of friends and her mother, Mrs. Marsh.

Others who entertained at luncheon were Mrs. Charles Brand, Mrs. R. H. Brasel, Mrs. Bryant, Mrs. Edward C. Eicher, Mrs. William Fort, Mrs. Samuel Herrick, Mrs. Hubbard, Mrs. Edward V. Izac, Mrs. Jones, Mrs. Keating, Mrs. Riley Moore, Mrs. Peacock, Mrs. Barrett Prettyman, Mrs. Albert Relyea, Mrs. Morris Sheppard, who had a table for the Texas delegation, Mrs. Tighe and Mrs. Wilson.

On the committee for arrangements were Mrs. J. Fred Essary and Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson. On the reservations committee were Mrs. Charles Andrews, Mrs. Edward Eiker and Mrs. Peacock.

Chevy Chase Clubwomen Hold Discussion of Foreign Colonies

Musicale Tea Also Held for Members at Home of Mrs. Anthony.

Yesterday was an important day for the members of the Women's Club of Chevy Chase. In the morning the international relations section met at the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church. A very interesting program on "Colonies: Do They Pay?" was arranged by Mrs. Joseph T. Maguire. Discussions on various countries were led by Mrs. Frank E. Maloy, "Spain and Portugal;" Mrs. James H. Desandorf, "Holland;" Mrs. Douglas Griesemer, "Great Britain;" Mrs. Benjamin H. Bennett, "France;" Mrs. Victor Whitlock, "Belgium;" Mrs. St. Clair Thomas, "Germany;" Mrs. Louis S. Murphy, "Italy," and Mrs. Edward L. Smead, "Japan."

Most of the members attended a musicale tea at the home of Mrs. E. Anthony. The musicale was under the direction of Mrs. Roland Whitehurst. The program included songs by Charles Haycraft and songs by a sextet composed of Mrs. William Collins, Mrs. James H. Underwood, Mrs. Hugh L. Murrell, Mrs. J. Robert Bryant, jr., Mrs. Ben S. Fisher and Mrs. Carl Stuhler. An original composition, "Fantasie," was read by Mrs. Dawson Olmsted. One of the features of the entertainment was the dancing of the minuet by Mrs. Holland Huntington, Mrs. C. M. Jansky, jr., Mrs. George Graham and Mrs. Harold Dotterer. Mrs. J. L. Oliver was hostess at the tea.

The members of the International Outlook Section of the Twentieth Century Club met at the Y. W. C. A. yesterday afternoon. "International Problems of Contemporary France" were discussed by Dr. Leonid I. Strakhovsky, professor of Modern European History at the School of Foreign Service, Georgetown University. Mrs. Wade Hampton concluded her study of American Indian experiments in socialism in Paraguay.

The Gordon Junior High School Boys' Glee Club, under the direction of Mary Minge Wilkins, sang yesterday afternoon following the tea at the American Association of University Women clubhouse. Miss Sarah R. Letch was hostess, assisted by Mrs. A. B. Gunnarson, Dr. Fredericka Alexander, Mrs. Alton R. Hodgkins, and Miss Mildred Frazer. Miss Amy W. Merriam, Miss Elsie Lohmann, Miss Mary P. Smith, Mrs. J. F. Edward, Mrs. B. J. Powell and Mrs. E. D. Campbell presided at the tea tables.

Another even at the A. A. U. W. was the meeting of the international relations study group last night. Mrs. G. M. Mathes, Mrs. George Hyman and Mrs. T. C. Thee discussed "Neutrality." Mrs. D. C. Harrison and Mrs. D. V. Sandifer were in charge of the program.

"Woman's Place Under the New Economic Order Is What?" Six distinguished men and women will give their viewpoints at a dinner panel tomorrow evening at 7 o'clock at the A. A. U. W. clubhouse. The discussion will be led by Miss Dorothy Kenyon, noted lawyer and commissioner of license, New York. Others to appear on the panel with her are Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming; Representative Emanuel Celler, of New York; Raymond Clapper, Miss Ann Youngman and Miss Marie L. Obenauer. The dinner is held under the sponsorship of the club's committee on economic and legal status of women, of which Miss Bertha Nienburg is chairman.

Mrs. T. H. B. McKnight will entertain at luncheon on Friday for the members of the executive committee of the American Horticulture Society. The society will hold morning and afternoon lecture sessions featuring Mrs. Wheeler Peckham, of New York, at the Washington Club, March 19.

Mrs. Theodore Coe will entertain at luncheon in honor of Mrs. Peckham at the Westchester, March 17.

The weekly luncheon of the P. E. O. will be held tomorrow at 12:30 in the dining room of Woodward & Lothrop.

J. M. Stoddard, Jr., Weds Mrs. Bristol

Couple Married at Home of the Bride's Mother, Mrs. Potter.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Marvin Stoddard, jr., who were married Saturday afternoon at 5 o'clock, have left for a brief motor trip and on their return will reside at 4607 Van Ness street. They will be at home after April 1.

Mrs. Stoddard is the former Mrs. Elizabeth Potter Bristol, daughter of Mrs. William Hubley Potter, of Bermuda and Washington. The ceremony took place in the apartment of the bride's mother at Stoneleigh Court in the presence of immediate relatives, the Rev. Charles Berry Austin officiating. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. William Hubley, jr., of Paoli, Pa., and was attended by her sister-in-law, Mrs. William Hubley Potter, jr. Mr. Stoddard's best man was his brother-in-law, Mr. Horace Harrison Smith, an officer in the American Foreign Service now on special assignment at Harvard University.

Tea Will Honor Mrs. Roosevelt

Congressional Club Plans Large Function for March 30.

A tea honoring Mrs. Roosevelt will be the first of the large official functions given this season by the Congressional Club. It will be held March 30 at the clubhouse, and will be followed later in the spring by parties honoring Mrs. Garner, wife of the Vice President, and Mrs. William B. Bankhead, wife of the Speaker of the House.

The dates for large club affairs were decided yesterday morning by members of the board and the president, Mrs. Daniel C. Reed, who later will name committee chairmen to have charge of the arrangements. The tea for Mrs. Garner is to be held April 14, and that in honor of Mrs. Bankhead, April 29.

Several bridge parties and dances already have been given at the club this season, and the Friday afternoon teas have drawn members and their guests each week.

THE WASHINGTON SCENE

By the Poe Sisters.

Washingtonians who attended the marriage in Baltimore on Saturday of the popular Berta Mitlacher, of Vienna, Austria, to Baron Jean du Boisberranger, secretary of the French legation at Bogota, Colombia, brought the welcome news that before sailing for the baron's South American post they will be in Washington for a brief stay.

The bride was a picturesque figure in white satin, made on simple lines. The wedding was in the quaint old Baltimore Cathedral, where she was given in marriage by Mr. John Eager Howard, and her only attendant was her intimate friend, Miss Katherine Weld, of Baltimore, who, in a frock of peach-colored georgette, served as her maid of honor.

Following the wedding, a breakfast was given for the bridal pair and their friends by Mrs. James W. Tyson, aunt of Miss Weld.

After a short visit in Washington, Mr. and Mrs. John Alden Carpenter, of Chicago, are off to Europe. Mrs. Carpenter's aunt, Mrs. Kingsley Porter, has a lovely ancient castle in Ireland, where they often used to visit.

The castle has a tragic history for Mrs. Porter, for her husband, the late Dr. Porter, professor of archeology of Harvard, was lost at sea off that shore. Mrs. Kingsley Porter now lives in Cambridge, Mass.

Word comes in a letter from Tokio that the Japanese people are much pleased with the gift of the Garden Club of America presented by Mrs. Joseph C. Grew, wife of the United States Ambassador to Japan, of 4,650 American trees.

This is a "thank you" present, as it were, for the gift of Japanese cherry trees to Washington some years ago through Mrs. William Howard Taft while her husband was President of the United States.

It was most appropriate that dogwood, with its lovely flowers, was sent from Washington for planting along the streets of Tokyo. The Garden Club's gift was also in acknowledgement of courtesies extended to its members during a tour of Japan in 1934, in which a number of Washington women belonging to the club participated.

Md. Official Denies Plot to Discredit Garey

Commissioner Jones Prepares Statement for Senate Investigators.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., March 1.—Harry C. Jones, State employment commissioner, disavowed tonight implication in "any so-called 'conspiracy' to discredit" Maj. Enoch B. Garey, as superintendent of the Maryland State Police.

Commissioner Jones, in a statement he prepared for the Senate sub-committee investigating the State Police Department, said he was "proud" to have Gov. Harry W. Nice, J. Purdon Wright, counsel of the Public Service Commission, and William H. Blakeman, State budget director, as "my personal friends."

"To couple my name with any of these high-toned gentlemen, in connection with the word 'conspiracy,' might be a joke," he stated, "if it were applied to any State official other than a civil service administrator, whose integrity in the administration of his office must be beyond suspicion.

"Even a suggestion to the contrary in my case is a libelous and slanderous perversion of fact, and will be so regarded. I may have a poor sense of humor, but that is the way I feel about it, and the way I shall consider it."

He asserted "most emphatically" that "I have never, at any time, discussed State police matters pending before me with the Governor, Mr. Wright or onyone else, or taken any part whatsoever in any so-called 'conspiracy' to discredit Maj. Garey."

Commissioner Jones said he had read press reports of Maj. Garey's "claim that his difficulties have been due to outside influences, in which category he has seen fit to include my name."

"Politics has never played any part with me," the employment commissioner asserted, "and I challenge anyone, here and now, who may remotely intimate that political consideration ever has, or ever can, influence any of my official acts."

U. S. Senator Reynolds says: "Luckies are considerate of my throat"

"Two Southern traditions are oratory—and good tobacco. Lucky Strike shows me how to indulge in both. For this light smoke not only pleases my taste but leaves my throat in condition. Last fall in North Carolina—when I made over 100 speeches—I visited the Lucky Strike factory. I believe I discovered, in the Lucky Strike "Toasting" process, the secret of what makes this cigarette so considerate of my throat. I have been more than ever an advocate of a light smoke since seeing the extra care and expense devoted to making Luckies easy on the throat."

Robt. R. Reynolds

HON. ROB'T R. REYNOLDS
U.S. SENATOR FROM NORTH CAROLINA

In a recent independent survey, an overwhelming majority of lawyers, doctors, lecturers, scientists, etc., who said they smoked cigarettes, expressed their personal preference for a light smoke.

Senator Reynolds' statement verifies the wisdom of this preference and so do leading artists of radio, stage, screen and opera, whose voices are their fortunes, and who choose Luckies, a light smoke. You, too, can have the throat protection of Luckies—a light smoke, free of certain harsh irritants removed by the exclusive process "It's Toasted". Luckies are gentle on your throat.

Do The Muscles In Your Legs Ache?

Dr. M. W. Locke Shoes

Aching muscles are caused, in many cases by ordinary shoes giving an improper balance to your body. This action results in the weight of the body centering on the wrong part of your feet. Dr. Locke shoes, through the medium of a patented support in the arch, called the "cookie," places the foot in its natural position. This exclusive feature holds the body in its proper balance and, in many instances, eliminates muscle aches. 11.50

Presenting the newest patterns for spring in the nationally famous Manhattan Shirts. The "Ladd," photographed above, is particularly smart. A club stripe superimposed over a neat checked design. Both shades blend into a harmonizing pattern. We predict this will be one of the most popular Manhattan shirts for spring wear. It can be worn equally well with either a plaid, striped, checked or plain shade suit. This distinctive British pattern comes in Regimental blue, Cambridge brown, London tan and Highland green. $2

The Federal Diary

Rez. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

No one wants to get funny about the three thumbs-down the A. F. G. E. District Department has recorded on Lucien Koch's attempt to be seated as a delegate—but, in all conscience, it does appear that three strikes means out.

Three times now Koch has gone to bat and three times the department has outcurved him . . . The last recorded vote was 87 to 37 against seating him . . . The determination of his adherents was no greater than the determination of the opponents, but the opponents have consistently had the most votes and have demonstrated in personally shouted "noes" that the former director of the Commonwealth College, Mena, Ark., isn't wanted.

Leaders of Labor Lodge, No. 12, which proposed Koch as a delegate, said "Don't quote me" when asked if the fight to seat Koch would be renewed . . . Consequently, we claim no way of knowing whether future meetings of the District Department will resound with "We want Koch" and "We don't want Koch."

The one immediately evident thing—in which Koch may at least take comfort—is that no man of the decade has had a group of more consistently loyal friends, and we shouldn't be surprised at all to hear soon of an organization for the seating of Koch.

Those of you who have wondered why Col. Charles I. Stengle, A. F. G. E.'s president, doesn't "get in the headlines more," now have an answer directly from the colonel. He answered, briefly, but with spirit, at the District Department meeting Friday night.

"I'm after results, and damn the notoriety," he said.

The Speaker . . .

Thomas Eliot, general counsel, Social Security Board, discussed "Social Security" last night at the Massachusetts Democratic Club's monthly meeting, so now let's discuss Eliot, high points of whose biography have been sent us by an Eliot admirer:

In 1907 he was born in Cambridge, hard by Boston, where the Cabots speak only to Lowells and the Lowells speak only to God, or vice versa . . . Educated, Cambridge schools; graduate, Harvard College and Harvard Law School . . . In 1924 he was a reporter on the Boston Globe . . . Practiced law in Buffalo . . . Came to Washington July, 1933, to become associated with the Solicitor's Office, Department of Labor; served as liaison officer between the department and the National Labor Board . . . Later became assistant solicitor of the department . . . During last Congress he served as technical adviser to the House Ways and Means Committee and the Senate Finance Committee . . . On October 16, 1935, he began the duties of general counsel to the Security Board.

Good-By

Dr. George W. Pope, principal veterinarian, Bureau of Animal Industry, Agricultural Department, has been retired after 41 years of service . . . Dr. Pope is world-renowned in his field . . . He intends now to devote the remainder of his life to a study of classical literature, a life-long ambition for him . . . Born in Madison, Wis., he was graduated from Chicago Veterinary College, 1889.

You don't have to carry your Social Security account card around with you all the time. The board has made this clear in a special bulletin, lest, perhaps, some employes burden their pockets with the cards, laboring under constant fear of losing them. The bulletin, it was stated, resulted from inquiries about whether the cards should be constantly in the pocket. The care of the cards is gone into at some length: "Although the account number cards are printed on 100 per cent rag paper, they could be damaged by frequent handling . . . the board suggests that employes who move from one place of employment to another should keep their cards in an envelope or some other case for the purpose of protection."

Personnel Goings-On

Well, I'll Tell You . . . . . By Bob Burns

I think one reason why this country has advanced so fast is because we travel so much that it don't take long for new ideas to seep in to the "out of the way" places. For instance, we never would've had painless dentistry down home if it hadn't been for that city man that use'ta come down there on business. We didn't have nothin' but an old-fashioned dentist down home—old Doc Hocks—and one day he asked this city man, he says, "Don't you never have no teeth pulled?" and the city man says "Yes, but I always have my work done while I'm in the city where I can get a painless dentist."

That started Doc Hocks to thinkin' and finally one day, he went to the city man and he says, "Well, you can come up anytime now and git your teeth pulled because I can make it painless."

Not long after that, the city man went up to Doc Hocks' office and he says, "Well, I'll have to have a tooth pulled, but," he says, "if you hurt me, I ain't gonna pay you. Doc says, "Jest sit right down there in that chair and show me which tooth it is. I'll guarantee that you won't feel a thing."

The man sat down in the chair, opened his mouth and pointed to the tooth that was hurtin' him. Doc picked up his forceps and hollered, "All right, Joe," and in walked a great big man with a big club. Doc turned to him and says, "All right, Joe, stun him!"

Citizens' Group Urges Repeal Of Red Rider

Forest Hills Body Opposed to Horse Racing Bill for District.

Absolute repeal of the Red Rider was demanded by the Forest Hills Citizens Association, in session at the Ben W. Murch School last night. The vote on the matter was unanimous.

The association also went on record as opposing the race track bill and any form of legalized gambling in the District.

Mrs. Wilbur LaRoe, chairman of the school committee, reported that work on the new wing of the Alice Deal Junior High School was two weeks behind schedule. The annex was to have been ready for occupancy in September.

A resolution then was introduced by Mrs. LaRoe to appropriate money for books for the library of the Woodrow Wilson High School. The sum of $20 was set aside for this purpose.

The action of the Commissioners in calling attention to the crisis in the rapidly mounting District traffic toll for 1937 was commended and indorsed by the association.

Michigan Park Ass'n

Immediate action on building a viaduct over the Bates road railroad crossing, where a train-automobile crash a week ago cost two lives, was demanded of the Commissioners last night by the Michigan Park Citizens Association.

In a letter to the Commissioners the citizens also asked that the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad be required to station a watchman on continuous duty at the crossing, and to install safety gates until the viaduct is completed. As a further measure, the group suggested that visibility at the crossing be improved by grading a hill on the northeast corner.

The association asked that street lights be installed in alleys in the Michigan Park section, especially in the area between Varnum and Taylor streets northeast. Four housebreakings or attempted housebreakings have been reported here in the last week.

At the annual election, held last night, John Hurley was re-elected president of the association. Other officers are John de Marco, first vice president; Sarah Moriarity, second vice president; Franklin Adams, treasurer; Hezzie Boteler, financial secretary. Emmett Carr, J. R. Parkhill and Willlliam Tobin were elected to the executive committee. C. W. Carhart was chosen as a delegate to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Brookland CitizensAss'n

The Brookland Citizens' Association last night indorsed Col. W. L. Peak as superintendent of District penal institutions, to succeed Capt. M. M. Barnard upon the latter's retirement.

A resolution urging no increase in real estate taxes was adopted by the group. An inheritance tax, a 1-cent gasoline tax, or an increase in the tax on receipts from the public utilities were recommended as ways of raising additional money.

A. E. Scheer, of the Northeast conference addressed the association. He said the new fire house on Rhode Island avenue was largely due to the efforts of the association, and added that a celebration would be held sometime early in April.

Two new members—John J. Pillock and G. L. Barber—were admitted.

500 Pepco Employes Celebrate Wage Rise

Celebrating a recently granted wage increase of 10 per cent, more than 500 members of the Potomac Electric Company's Employes' Association gathered at the Pepco auditorium last night for a three-hour entertainment program.

The wage increase was granted a short time ago to per diem workers in the company. This group includes linemen, cable-splicers and other outside employes.

18 Veterans Aid Sick Not Able to Pay for Professionals.

Washington's only charity blood donors' organization—a committee representing Grande Voiture 174 of the Forty-and-Eight—yesterday brought its total of transfusion cases to 30 when one of its members, W. H. Hargrave, gave a pint of his blood for a woman suffering from a serious infection.

Started last October 15 as another branch of the charitable work carried on by the Forty-and-Eight, long famed as the fun society of the American Legion, the blood donors' committee has aided sick persons unable to afford the services of professional donors. Patients at Children's Hospital have especially benefited from the war veterans' plan.

The committee, which has 18 members, is headed by John McCabe. When a hospital finds itself in need of a donor, a doctor calls McCabe who has a list of committee members classified according to type of blood. All have been tested. All members are ready for instant service when called upon.

O. M. Schriver, Olympic rifle champion in 1920 and a prominent Forty-and-Eight member, has undergone four transfusions in the last ten weeks. All went to help prolong the life of a 6-year-old Childrens' Hospital patient suffering from osteomyelitis, an infectious bone disease.

The members of the committee which met yesterday at the Children's hospital are Bernard A. Madigan, Albert P. Popkins, Martin Goerl, C. R. Rafferty, Francis J. Leonard, Robert J. Chaillet, W. H. Hargrave, Fred Money, Richard A. O'Brien, C. F. McCarthy, R. H. Hetzer, William T. Slattery, Francis F. Miller, W. L. Griffith, W. B. Allen, O. M. Schriver and Edgar Baker.

Officer Lassoes Dog on 'Sit-Down' Before Md. Home

Stepping out of character yesterday to play the role of dog catcher, Sergt. Ralph Brown, of the Prince Georges County police, bagged a Chesapeake Bay retriever on the front porch of Dr. Raymond A. Pearson, of Hyattsville, former president of the University of Maryland.

Dr. Pearson, who is now special assistant to the Resettlement administrator, called the police when the dog refused to allow any one to leave the house.

A trifle mistrustful of the dog's intentions, Sergt. Brown bought a 6-foot piece of hollow iron pipe and ran a length of rope through it. By tying one end of the rope to an elbow on one end of the pipe, he formed a noose. Tossing the rope over the animal's head, he tightened it around the neck and held the dog at bay with the pipe.

Prince Georges Leaders Assail Nice's Tax Plan

Chamber Wants Gas Levy Revenue Spent Only on Highways.

The Prince Georges County Chamber of Commerce last night condemned Gov. Nice's budget recommendation that gas tax funds be diverted to other purposes and called for a constitutional amendment preventing use of such revenue in the future for anything but road improvements.

A petition, addressed to the Governor and members of the General Assembly, was indorsed by the chamber and circulated for individual signatures.

Frank L. Young, of Chevy Chase, Md., member of the State roads commission's highway planning survey, described the present condition of State roads as "lamentable and dangerous."

Diversion Blamed.

He attributed this situation to the diversion of gasoline tax receipts to meet relief needs and other expenses of government.

H. Clay Whiteford, of Hyattsville, was appointed to confer with postal authorities in an effort to convert the Hyattsville postoffice into a central distributing office.

It was pointd out that mail takes longer to be delivered between neighboring towns in Prince Georges County than it takes to reach New York City. There is no central distributing postoffice between Washington and Baltimore.

Sanitary Building Vote.

The Chamber voted to seek legislation establishing the proposed $100,000 Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission building in Hyattsville on the site of the present structure.

The bill for the appropriation is pending in the Legislature but no site has been selected.

The committee appointed to push this legislation included Paul Kea and J. Rimmer, of University Park, and Sam H. Harvey, of College Park.

Capital Offered Help of Sleuth, Now 7 Years Old

"I am 7 years old and would like to know if I can be a junior detective."

This is the opening statement in a letter received by Police Chief Ernest W. Brown yesterday from Karyl Young, of Wollaston, Mass.

Karyl continued the letter with:

"If I could have a badge and if you would send me a picture of some criminal in Wollaston, I could find out where he was and tell the police or could keep children from getting hurt."

Maj. Brown promptly answered the boy's letter, sending his regrets and suggested that Karyl work hard in school so that some day he might become a policeman.

Friends Ask Relief Boost For District

Chairman Collins Hints Increase in Grant Is Unlikely.

Pleas from a delegation of the Friends Meeting for a larger appropriation for unemployment relief in Washington apparently failed to persuade the House subcommittee on District appropriations to increase the Budget Bureau recommendation of $1,465,000 yesterday.

The sub-committee spent most of the afternoon listening to social welfare workers describe the need of Washington unemployed, but Chairman Collins subsequently indicated he is not convinced that any additional money beyond the budget estimate should be provided.

While the sub-committee was listening to the social welfare workers, Mrs. Roosevelt commented at her press conference on the condition of unemployed in Washington.

"A very serious situation," was the way she expressed it when asked her opinion of the local relief problem.

"I hope Congress will do something to take care of it in the next year's budget," she continued. "It seems to me that in the past Congress has been disposed to look at the District rather as an academic responsibility than as a practical one."

Continue Today.

The sub-committee will continue consideration of public welfare estimates this afternoon.

Collins plans to complete departmental hearings this week and to bring the District bill on the House floor March 15. The interview with J. L. Jacobs, director of the fiscal relations study, was postponed until next Monday because of the illness of members of Jacobs' staff.

Mrs. Morris C. Betts headed the delegation from the Friends Meeting yesterday. She cited case instances of the need of Washington families for relief. The most distressing cases, she said, are those of families in which one or more members are employable but unable to obtain work except occasional WPA jobs.

One man discovered by the Friends has a wife and seven children but earns only $48 a month from the WPA. His rent is $20 a month.

"One of the Community Chest organizations tells us," she said, "that the minimum amount of money it takes to buy a bare existence food supply for a family of nine persons per week is $8.50.

"Nine persons—$8.50 per week! Let anyone of us try to feed nine persons for a week on $8.50 and see what that means."

Mortality High.

Mrs. Betts called attention to the mortality record of an area bounded by S street and Florida avenue on the north, North Capitol street on the east, the Mall on the south, and Fourteenth street and Vermont avenue on the west. Although it contains but 12 per cent of the District population, she said, 29 per cent of the city's deaths occur there.

Vincent Nicholson cited figures to support his contention that Washington spends proportionately less for relief of its unemployed than either Buffalo or Milwaukee.

Miss Margaret Scattergood told the committee "there are several thousand who are in dire need" in the District, and that "for them no relief funds exist." She cited the inability of the Public Assistance Division to give aid to employables, no matter how serious their plight.

"This shortage of relief means that families are being evicted from their homes and going without food," she said. "A visit to the marshal's office a few days ago showed that about 25 families each week are being thrown out of their homes by the District officers.

District Residents.

"The majority of these families are white, and most of them have lived in the District for three years or more. The main cause of eviction is unemployment."

During the winter of 1936-37, she said, the District has been short of the necessary funds for relief by $100,000 a month. She asked $400,000 to cover this need for the four months until June.

She asked $2,500,000 for emergency relief in the regular 1938 budget.

Colleagues, Patients Honor Dr. Taylor at Testimonial Fete

Newly Elected Head of Sibley Hospital Is Honor Guest at Dinner Given Here; Outlines Aims of Institution.

Rising to their feet at a testimonial dinner last night, 500 of his colleagues, friends and former patients, gave cheering tribute to Dr. Lewis Harvie Taylor, newly elected president of Sibley Memorial Hospital. The dinner, attended by people prominent in medical circles here and many out-of-town guests, was held in the grand ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel.

Replying to speeches made in his tribute, Dr. Taylor, saying the hospital had "grown because it was founded on correct principles," declared it was his ambition "to continue in every way to improve the hospital and widen its field of service."

Because of the loyalty of the staff and his friends, he said, "I know that ambition will be attained."

The hospital at present, said Dr. Taylor, has much valuable data. It is one of his "dreams and hopes that the hospital will soon be able to publish a quarterly medical bulletin, carrying to the profession the information which we possess."

Many Notables Present.

In closing he thanked H. D. Miser, chairman, and the local board of directors of the hospital for the courtesies he received from them during his acting presidency following the death last August, of Dr. Charles Cole, late hospital president.

Among the distinguished guests present were: Mrs. F. C. Reynolds, of the local board; Mrs. S. A. Mooers, president of the Women's Guild of the hospital; Dr. Thomas Parran, Surgeon General of the United States Public Health Service; Dr. William M. Sprig, president of the District Medical Society, and Dr. Walter A. Bloedorn, acting dean of the George Washington University Medical School.

Others included Dr. W. Wayne Babcock, professor of surgery in Temple University; Dr. A. C. Christie, chairman of the board of trustees of American University, who delivered the first speech of tribute; Paul Cromelin, Grand Master of Masons in the District and member of the board of hospital; Dr. Joseph F. Elward, secretary to medical council of the hospital, and Dr. Paul Stirling Putzki, president of the hospital council.

Receives Resolutions.

As part of the program, Dr. Oscar B. Hunter, chairman of the executive committee of the hospital, presented Dr. Taylor with a set of resolutions adopted by the Medical Council, Clinical Division and Nurses Alumnae Association of the hospital.

The resolutions contained congratulations on his election, wishes for his success, and a pledge of support and co-operation.

Dr. Willlam A. White, head of St. Elizabeths Hospital, who was scheduled to present the resolutions to Dr. Taylor, was taken ill with a chill and fever, and against his wish was forced by his physician to leave the banquet hall.

In their speeches of tribute, Dr. Arthur C. Christie, Hugh D. Miser, and Mrs. W. H. C. Goode, president of the Woman's Home Missionary Society, the hospital's parent organization, all praised the selection of Dr. Taylor and wished him every success.

Hastie's Selection Termed 'Blunder'

By the Associated Press.

Senator King (Democrat), Utah, told the Senate Territories Committee yesterday he believed the nomination of William H. Hastie, colored, to be Federal judge for the Virgin Islands, was a "blunder."

King, chairman of a judiciary sub-committee considering the nomination, said protests had been received from the islands, the population of which is largely colored. Hastie, an Interior Department attorney, was the first of his race to be named to the Federal bench.

Gov. Lawrence W. Cramer, whose nomination also is awaiting Senate confirmation, denied to the committee he had interfered with the island court. That charge and others made earlier by former Federal Judge Albert C. Levitt, Cramer said, were false.

House Passes D. C. Juvenile Court Change

Measure Goes to Senate; Adjournment Halts Other Measures.

By James D. Secrest.

Without debate the House today passed the District juvenile court bill as the only local measure called up on a special District day and then adjourned on account of the death of Representative Stubbs, of California.

The bill, which was discussed on February 8 by Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, was read hurriedly for amendment after House leaders had agreed to give Chairman Mary T. Norton a little of time promised her before adjourning.

It was the second successive time that the death of a member of the House had interferred with local legislation in the House. On the previous District day the House adjourned out of respect for the memory of Representative Buchanan, of Texas.

Seven Bills go Over.

Seven other District bills on the House calendar consequently go over until next Monday, a regular District day.

The juvenile court measure, sponsored by the District branch of the League of Women Voters, now goes to the Senate, where it will be considered by the Senate District Committee.

Fashioned after the standard juvenile court act, which was drafted by a committee of the National Probation Association, the Norton bill is largely the work of Mrs. Jesse C. Adkins, wife of the associate justice of the U. S. district court.

Fundamentally, it seeks to change the character of the District juvenile court from a criminal tribunal to a court of chancery.

The jurisdictional age is raised from 17 to 18 years of age by the bill, but provision is made that the Juvenile Court may transfer to the United States District Court cases in which children over 16 years of age are involved in serious offenses.

Jurisdiction Broad.

Jurisdiction of the court under the measure is broad, as the act is made to apply to any person under 18 who has violated any law, habitually is beyond control of his parents or is truant from school, who is abandoned by parent or guardian, or "who associates with vagrants, vicious, or immoral persons."

The court, having found that a child comes within the provisions of the act, it may:

1. Place the child on probation or under supervision in his own home or in the custody of a relative or other fit persons.
2. Commit the child to the Board of Public Welfare, the National Training School for Boys or the National Training School for Girls, or to "a qualified suitable private institution."
3. Make such further disposition as it may deem best for the interests of the child.

The bill specifically protects the child from having a criminal record by stating that he shall not suffer the loss of any civil liberties as in usual criminal convictions and that no evidence offered in Juvenile Court may be used against the child in any other court.

New Guild Play At National Is A Laughing Hit

'Storm Over Patsy' Wins Favor of Enthusiastic First-Night House.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"STORM OVER PATSY." The Theater Guild, Inc., presents the comedy in three acts by Bruno Frank, adapted from the German by James Bridie. Production under the supervision of Theresa Helburn, Lawrence Langner and Philip Moeller. Directed by Philip Moeller. Settings designed by Aline Bernstein. Reviewed Monday night at the National Theater.

Court Spectators: Florence Keady, Frances Kidner, Elizabeth A. Jones, Seymour Gross and Daniel Rutstein.

The extraordinary influence that may be wielded by a shaggy mongrel dog upon the career of the provost of the small Scottish town of Baikie, who entertains aspirations to a seat in parliament, and the important part he can play in the romance between the wife of that egotistical politician and a young newspaper reporter who injects himself innocently into an originally innocent domestic situation, is hilariously expounded in "Storm Over Patsy," the new Theater Guild production that was presented for the first time on the stage of the National Theater last night.

The comedy was originally written for the German stage by Bruno Frank and was adapted to the English-speaking theater with rare skill and deft humor by James Bridie. One suspects that Mr. Bridie transferred the action of the play to Scotland the more fully to encompass the comic potentialities of the types he knew best. Mr. Bridie is a Scotchman. However this may be, he has contrived a three-act diversion that follows a cumulative course of humorous effect, fortified by bravely comic lines, causing stage "bsiness" and an all-around flavor of sprightly fun that last night's audience found extremely agreeable and enlivening.

Designed for Fun.

"Storm Over Patsy" is in no sense an important play. It deals with none of the profundities of life and pretends to no greater function than to afford an evening of bright, witty and entirely wholesome entertainment. This function it performs exceedingly well. It is played, furthermore, by a cast ideally selected to do ample and brittle justice to the divergent roles to which they have been assigned.

Mrs. Honoria Flanagan is made the victim of obnoxious official attention by reason of her ownership of the nondescript dog, Patsy. A cub reporter on The Observer is assigned to interview William Thompson, provost of Baikie, who has been picking on Mrs. Flanagan's dog, and, arriving too early for the appointment, meets that eminent wardsman's charming wife. Something springs up between them. This young Mr. Burton, catching the drift of the wind, writes a scathing attack on Patsy's persecutor, declaring in cold print that if the provost can not be decent to a mongrel pup he can not reasonably be expected to serve in parliament with any appreciable benefit to his human constituents.

Case Reaches Court.

The matter finally gets to court to provide one of the most amusing third acts that any recent comedy has been able to boast. This last act, at present, is a bit long drawn out and, at times, a little attenuated, but it is so ebulliently and spontaneously played that it comes out right side up and scores the greatest measure of laughter recorded during two hours and a half that are thickly studded with provocative bits of dialogue and episodes that are as rousing as they are farcical in their comic content.

The comedy is particularly notable for the introduction to Washington audiences of a young leading man by the name of Roger Livesey, who possesses a charm of manner, a fluency of speech and an innate sense of "theater" that stamp him as an actor of illimitable resource and exceptional appeal. Mr. Livesey, however, is not the only member of the cast who turns in a superfine performance. The same may be said—as was to have been wholly expected—of Sara Algood, in the role of Mrs. Flanagan, owner of the canine, raison d'etre of the play, and Claudia Morgan, who assumes the role of Victoria Thompson with finesse and charm. Ian McLean creates no less favorable an impression as the bungling politician, Thompson, who loses both his political career and his wife by his blundering efforts to make an important issue of a small pooch.

There are still others who acquit themselves with more than ordinary credit. In the droll and laconic role of the sheriff substitute, Leo G. Carroll contributes one of the most effective bits of comedy seen in many a season in the third-act courtroom scene, and Louis Hector and John Hoysrad achieve rather more than minor successes as opposing counsel. Valerie Cossart and Brenda Forbes do their full share in rounding out one of the most capable ensembles the Guild has brougght to the Capital in any of its comedies, barring, perhaps, those in which Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne have appeared. Joseph Pierlot is a suitably perturbed Joseph McKellar, important in the action and all of the supporting players assist in the preservation of the comedy's uniform excellence. Patsy, played by himself and appearing only in the last act, is a well-mannered canine that voiced a vigorous protest last evening when Mr. Livesey accidentally stepped on his foot.

Is Excellently Directed.

Philip Moeller's direction, as always, is spirited and entirely in keeping with the spirit and pace of Mr. Birdie's lively charade. Aline Bernstein has devised settings appropriate to the scenes which they represent with unobtrusive harmony of design and color.

Theresa Helburn, one of the Guild's producing groups responsible for the staging of "Storm Over Patsy," was a member of last night's audience, which accorded the comedy rousing applause at the end of every act, as it richly deserved.

This is an item that no lover of fun should miss.

Nelson B. Bell About The Show Shops

All of the 'Red' Agitation Proves to Have Been On Behalf of Capitol's New Master of Ceremonies

'Red' Skelton, Described as a Versatile and Engaging Young Man, Will Make His Local Debut on F Street Stage This Friday; 'The Good Earth,' in Film Form, Is Booked for the National; Washington Civic Theater Comes Into a Windfall; News and Gossip of Current Goings-On in the Playhouses.

SO now it comes out.

I mean that the purpose of all this "Red" propaganda that has been tossed around by that incorrigible Loew publicist, Master Ray Bell—no relation—finally is disclosed. It was planned, it seems, to promote an insatiable lust for word of who or what "Red" is. So we hasten to say that "Red" is a who and not a what.

BELL.

All of the hullabaloo, according to yesterday's disclosures, has related to one "Red" Skelton, a gifted young man who is coming to the stage of Loew's Capitol Theater in the capacity of master of ceremonies on Friday of this week.

"Red" Skelton, if we are to believe the advance ballyhoo, is a young man of 23 years, tall, handsome and talented, who puts on a whole show of his own between each two acts on the vaudeville bill of the theater in which he is appearing. Whether or not he sings, I haven't been able to learn, but from what has been revealed I am of the opinion that he is a young fellow of infinite jest who works more or less—with modifications, of course—along the lines of the rotund and facile Mr. Johnny Perkins.

To quote from the unrelated Mr. Bell's description of this young man, "'Red' has an infectious smile, one that's with him constantly. The ladies love him. The men say he's very regular. He has been brought back by popular demand to every theater in which he has been booked. 'Red' Skelton is clever, witty, dynamic and decidedly different."

So now you know. That is, you know as much as we do.

"The Good Earth," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's expansive picturization of the novel by Pearl Buck, has been booked as a "road show" attraction at the National Theater the week of Sunday, April 4. This subject has been acclaimed with unexampled enthusiasm by all who have seen it in preview or upon public exhibition in the few cities in which it has been shown—if any. The principal roles are played by Paul Muni and Luise Rainer, in the parts created in the Theater Guild's original stage version of the story by Earl Larimore—closely followed by Claude Rains—and Mme. Alla Nazimova. The picture has been something like three years in the making and is executed on the grandiose scale typical of the productions sponsored by the late Irving Thalberg.

A special schedule will be in force at the Rialto Theater today to accommodate the premiere Washington presentation of "Cloistered," heralded as one of the most unusual motion pictures ever filmed, revealing, as it does, the intimate activities inside the walls of a cloistered nunnery. It was made possible by a special dispensation from the Vatican.

The "Cloistered" premiere will be celebrated at 8:30 p. m. Prior to that time the regular double program, consisting of "The Amateur Gentleman," starring Douglas Fairbanks, jr., and the Marx Brothers in a revival of "Duck Soup," will be shown up to the dinner hour. The last presentation of "Duck Soup" will begin at 5:43 p. m.; the last projection of "The Amateur Gentleman" at 3:45. At the conclusion of these showings, the theater will be closed until the "Cloistered" inaugural at 8:30.

A distinguished audience is expected to be present at the single screening of "Cloistered" that will be presented tonight. The special performance is for the benefit of the student loan scholarship fund of the National Catholic School of Service, who are sponsoring the showing. Reserved seats are priced at $1.50, admission tickets at $1 and 75 cents. They are now on sale at the box office.

Beginning with the regular showings Wednesday, the usual scale of house prices will prevail.

Manager Hardie Meakin, of RKO-Keith's, is much elated by word received yesterday that David L. Loew's production of "When's Your Birthday?" starring Joe E. Brown, has been booked into the Radio City Music Hall in New York, thus establishing it as a Grade A picture. This film will follow "We're on the Jury" on Fifteenth street.

In the supporting cast are such prime favorites as Marian Marsh, Fred Keating, Edgar Kennedy, Minor Watson, former member of the National Theater Players; Maude Eburne and Frank Jenks.

The route captains and carrier boys of The Washington Post feel a deep debt of gratitude to Mr. Meakin for his recent courtesy in entertaining them en masse at his popular opera house. The lads had the time of their lives and are still talking about it.

At a meeting held in the clubrooms of the Variety Club in the Willard Hotel last Sunday night, there was organized what promises to be a national Burlesque Critics' Association. The aim of the organization is to promote Nation-wide membership, with Washington as the parent chapter, and to promote the best interests of the burlesque stage in strict co-operation, on a friendly basis, with the producers of that form of theatrical entertainment. A definite program will be adopted at a second week scheduled for tomorrow night.

Officers elected at the first meeting were Arthur R. Jones, of the Washington Herald, president; my associate, W. A. Whitney, of The Washington Post, vice president, and Chris Mathisen, of the Washington Star, secretary-president.

The burlesque boys seem to be one up on the drama desks in the matter of organization.

It was a pleasure to be able to steer the Washington Civic Theater onto what amounted to a windfall in the matter of stage scenery and properties.

Max Gordon and the Loew organization were desirous of finding a comfortable home for the "Pride and Prejudice" production, which closed at the National Theater on last Saturday night. A little telephoning resulted in the acquisition of the $19,000 Jo Mielziner sets for the play by the Civic Theater at the mere cost of transportation from the National to Wardman Park.

You will be seeing it piecemeal in future productions and probably Maybe this paragraph will solve your puzzle.

Anxious Query Note.

Where is that snowstorm that was booked for Sunday night? Must have closed in Altoona!

Here Is That Mysterious "Red"

It finally is divulged by the Loew executives in Washington that the "Red" who has been so widely celebrated in a "blind" teaser campaign that has involved the distribution of red cedar chests, red rulers, toy pistols and a Rand-McNally atlas to the drama desks, is "Red" Skelton, whose smiling likeness appears above. Mr. Skelton, it seems, is a dynamic and versatile young master of ceremonies who will take up his duties on the stage of Loew's Capitol Theater with the inauguration of the new bill on Friday of this week. He is 23, tall and handsome.

In Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD, March 1.

Were I advising a visiting fireman where to glimpse the movie lites, the first suggestion would be to make a round of the studio cafes at lunch hour. He would see more stars, hear more gossip, catch more actors in costumes and makeup, and expose himself to more movie atmosphere than he could get from 50 miles of boulevard promenading and 10 premieres. With excellent food in the bargain.

MAE WEST.

Rarely a day in any studio cafe that from 10 to 30 million-dollar customers do not appear. Yet the carpenters eat there, too, and all are served as they come. You may stand in line with a luscious blonde in diaphanous evening gown, then be seated opposite a dapper, hite-thatched gentleman in formal morning clothes. And just as you are about to ladle your soup, a head waitress may parade by with a troop of matched tres jolies, just by way of giving you frog eyes.

At the end of lunch hour (an hour which you undoubtedly would stamp as one of the high spots of a Hollywood visit you will receive the greatest surprise of all. A small-figured check for your food. Studios run their cafes on the nonprofit plan (one company operates at a loss of $1,000 a week) because good food is imperative to health and good humor, which in turn are imperative to picture-making.

Horrible thought; Suppose, after years of hoping and praying, Simone Simon should fall in love with a guy named Simon! Which brings to mind Jack Oakie's crack: "Simone Simon must have been named by Gertrude Stein."

When boulevardiers see one of Hollywood's best known dentists leap into a taxi in front of his office building and shout, "The Fox lot, and step on it!" they know Shirley Temple has lost another tooth. Months ago, on special order, this dentist made impressions of all the Temple ivories. In the meantime, he has built up a complete set of caps; he could draw all of Miss Temple's baby teeth this afternoon and replace them within an hour.

So when Mama Temple hears a warning "burrrr" in Shirley's dialogue, a hurry-up call goes to the dentist. Upon arrival he pulls the loose tooth (you would be surprised how bravely the child submits), snaps a cap into its place—and the show goes on. With production time estimated at $10,000 a day, this specialist earns his high fee many times over.

A fan magazine writer, plying Mae West for an interview, asked: "What do you think of college men?" (It might be more enlightening to know what college men think of Mae!) The buxom blonde sizzled right back: "I think of them allways—and don't forget to put two "l's" in that word!"

Senate Bloc Fights New Departments

By the Associated Press.

A non-partisan bloc, headed by Senate Republican Leader McNary (Republican), Oregon, organized yesterday to fight the creation of two new executive departments under the President's reorganization program.

Senator Byrd (Democrat), Virginia, chairman of the original Senate reorganization committee, and Senator Townsend (Republican), Delaware, joined McNary to form the spearhead of the group.

Their first move will be a demand for open hearings when a joint Congressional committee resumes study this week of the President's proposal for revamping and consolidating more than 100 executive agencies.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

Safe-Guarding a Slam.

One of the marks of an expert is to distinguish a so-called "swing hand" when it comes along, and to treat it with the utmost respect. It is no secret that a few crucial hands usually swing the pendulum from victory to defeat in any given session of rubber Bridge, or in any team-of-four match.

The hand shown below was played by my husband, Ely Culbertson, in the final round of the team-of-four contest of the Atlantic National Tournament in New York. His super-cautious play resulted in a very nice profit and contributed to the eventual victory our team enjoyed.

South, dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

| South | West | North | East |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ◇ | Pass | 1 ♠ | Pass |
| 3 ♣ | Pass | 3 ♠ | Pass |
| 4 ♣ | Pass | 4 ◇ | Pass |
| 5 ♠ | Pass | 6 ♠ | Dbl. |
| 7 ◇ | Pass | Pass | Dbl. |
| Redbl. | Pass | Pass | Pass |

North's jump preference bid from four clubs to five diamonds may elicit wonder, but it was chosen very deliberately by Mr. Culbertson's partner of the moment—Richard L. Frey. South had shown a very big hand by his jump from one spade to three clubs, and North was thereby able to attach great importance to his Queen of clubs and even to the Jack of diamonds. The five spade bid was an asking bid to locate first round spade control.

Obviously, the grand slam would have been a laydown had the club suit broken, but Mr. Culbertson saw a chance for victory even if he should run into a bad club break, which East's repeated doubles indicated might happen.

West opened a spade, and the Queen won the first trick. The Ace and another diamond to the Jack were played, and a low spade ruffed with a high diamond. This was completely safe, since the trump suit had already been revealed to break no worse than 4-1. Every trump was now played out, dummy discarding three hearts. Then a low club was led to dummy's Queen.

East, meanwhile, had run into insurmountable discarding difficulties: in order to preserve his club stopper, he had had to let go his spade stopper, and now dummy's spades were solid, affording discards for South's three small clubs. A club discard by East would have resulted in the solidification of the club suit.

Without Mr. Culbertson's precaution in playing for a squeeze as well as reserving his chances for a club break, the grand slam would have finished in the limbo of lost hands.

Movie Leaders Honor Memory Of Will Rogers

Through Will Hays Turns Over Hospital, Wards and Tract to Commission.

The memory of one of the most loved figures in the international world of entertainment was honored last week-end by the last formality in connection with a $1,000,000 gift presented through the motion picture industry—the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital.

It expressed the affection of the screen and the public toward one of the world's greatest stars, the late Will Rogers.

Concretely the gift is a fully equipped medical sanitorium at Saranac Lake, N. Y., and it was presented by Will H. Hays, representing the industry and its allied arts, to Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the board, Reconstruction Finance Corporation, in his capacity as treasurer of the Will Rogers Memorial Commission.

The presentation was attended by a group of executives representing every important organization in the film world.

Shortly after the passing of Will Rogers, a group of his friends formed an organization to perpetuate his memory. John N. Garner, Vice President of the United States; Fred Stone, Owen D. Young, Amon G. Carter, Rex Beach and Jesse H. Jones head the Will Rogers Memorial Commission, which includes Capt. Eddi V. Rickenbacker, James G. Blaine, Patrick J. Hurley, F. Trubee Davison, Col. Joseph M. Hartfield and hundreds of other celebrated figures in all walks of life. Executives of the movies co-operating with this group, decided that a hospital bearing Will Rogers' name, would be ideal as their contribution.

Title to the sanitorium and its property at Saranac Lake, N. Y., which is credited with being one of the finest institutions of its kind in the United States, was finally transferred in a brief ceremony at the Fox Movietone Studios. The institution was then officially christened the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital.

The original cost of building and equipping the sanitorium was considerably in excess of $1,000,000. It cares for the needy of the stage and screen. Dr. Karl Fischel, graduate of the University of Vienna, world famous specialist, heads the medical staff.

Miami Beach, March 1.

SAM HARRIS, who is at his home in Palm Beach, has been notified that Margaret Sullavan's baby will be named Ferman—combining the names of the authors of "Stage Door," Ferber and Kaufman . . . Miss Sullavan already has changed her stage wardrobe completely and the producer still is frantic in his search for a replacement . . . A play, entitled "Kinangozi," concerning life in Africa, is being offered to Broadway managers. The author is H. R. H. Prince Wilhelm of Sweden.

• • • •

DAVE WILENTZ met Jim Farley and admired the light hue of his sunburn. "Tell me," Wilentz asked, "how long have you been here in Miami Beach?" . . . "Four months," Farley replied, "come May 20!" . . . Just before Mrs. Jack Dempsey was operated upon for appendicitis Song Writer Sammy Fain went to St. Francis Hospital and serenaded her with "I've Got You Under My Skin" . . . Lou Holtz still takes three-hour sunbaths every morning. He looked at himself admiringly and confessed: "I look like a very rich Brazilian—who just went broke!"

VICTOR GOFF, the pulp-magazine publisher, is here now discussing the success of his Spicy Stories magazine. "It used to sell for 10 cents," he explained, "and we had the field to ourselves. But along came the others and we had to make a change, so we raised the price to a quarter and I told my editor to uplift our type of stories. Before that all our stories began with: 'Hop-along Joe stood in the center of the room holding the smoking gun.' At his feet was the bloody body of Dago Lew.' So we made a change for the better. Now all our stories begin with: 'Hop-along Joe stood in the center of the room holding the smoking gun. At his feet was the bloody body of Elinor Vanderwater!'"

FROM BROADWAY—comes the report that Jack Kirkland, author of "Tobacco Road," had a dinner date last week at the home of Attorney Harry Oshrin. Kirkland met a young lady, decided not to keep the appointment and took her instead to the Tavern . . . When Jack failed to appear Oshrin phoned the Tavern to ascertain the playwright's whereabouts—and was told that Kirkland was there. Oshrin asked for Toots Shor, the proprietor, and instructed him not to serve Kirkland. Shor obliged and Kirkland's protests were unavailing . . . He could get no food served him and accepted the alternative—keeping his appointment with Oshrin.

THREE INVETERATE Fifty-second streeters were riding to the racetrack with Ted Husing and began discussing a Broadwayite. Their descriptives were most censorable. "Hey, you fellas, none of that," Husing told them—patting the inner pocket of his coat. "Moderate your language. I got my girl's picture in my pocket" . . . The arrangements committee for the Palm Beach Benefit Show was compiling a list of entertainers and a columnist's name was mentioned. "But what can he do?" someone asked . . . "He's a natural-born mimic," was the answer. "Just give Sheila Sullivan a typewriter and he'll do the damndest imitation of Walter Winchell you've ever seen!"

A LOCAL HAM was boasting to Georgie Jessel yesterday of how much money he's making. "Do you know, Georgie," he stated, "last year I paid the Government and State in income taxes alone $137,000. That's a lotta dough to have to shell out" . . . "It sure is," Jessel returned. "Sometimes it takes me almost three weeks to earn that much" . . . A Miami bookie, who has been stationed at the same spot for the last 20 years, now is distributing business cards here in which he describes himself alluringly as "(They Always Beat Me) Max!"

PRACTICAL jokers among the song writers here sent telegrams to all the song publishers. The wires read: "I am now playing at the dog track in Miami Beach, so please rush down all your dog songs—Paul Whiteman" . . . Bobby LeBranche, who has had four weeks' work during the last three years, had his fortune told at the Roney yesterday. The gypsy told the socialite: "Whatever you're doing now—you're a success!" . . . Georgie Price decided to quit smoking cigarettes. For 29 days he refrained from smoking a single butt. Price then went to the studio to fulfill his contract to make a recording . . . opened his mouth—and couldn't sing a note!

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., March 1.—Jack Salveson, the playboy of the Nats, who has been having a high old time giving his colleagues the hotfoot and the electric buzzer and dousing them with water from a phony cigarette pack, met his nemesis today.

The camp was up in arms against the big pitcher and his cute tricks.

POVICH.

Few had escaped his nonsense and Manager Bucky Harris became the ringleader in the plot to get even with Salveson.

On a pretext, Harris borrowed the pitchers' water-squirting apparatus which was concealed in a cigarette package that also contained a few cigarettes back to Salveson. Harris introduced them with a sly wink at Salveson.

• • • •

"Glad to know you Kuhel; have a cigarette?" and Salveson smilingly extended the pack as Kuhel reached for the smoke. Unsuspecting. Salveson squeezed the water bulb and to his amazement the stream of water splashed full into his own face while Kuhel, fingering the package, calmly produced a genuine cigarette from it and proceeded to light up.

• • • •

'Hey, What's This?'

"Hey, what's going on here?" sputtered Salveson, mopping from his face the watery load he had intended for Kuhel. Then he realized that Harris had played him false, had bent the water tube so that it would boomerang into his own face.

• • • •

"Where did you get that cigarette, Kuhel? Those things in that pack are tin."

"Cigarette: Oh, yes," said Kuhel. "Well, I really can't tell you. You see, we're under oath not to explain. But here's my card."

Salveson took the little white card that Kuhel handed him, and the wonder left his face as he read: "Joe Kuhel, American Society of Magicians. Public or private performances by appointment." And it's a fact. Kuhel is an accredited member of the society.

Here's Mr. Hogan!

Promptly at noon the Nats terminated their opening practice today, but the excuse might have been wet grounds. The perspiration that poured off the rubber-shirt brigade which has as its No. 1 perspiror Mr. Shanty Hogan of the South Boston Hogans, all but transformed the diamond into a bog.

Mr. Hogan who came into the major leagues at 220 pounds and has been spending most of his time in a rubber shirt ever since, is positively sylph-like now in comparison to the blockhouse figure presented when he joined the Nats last summer. He locomotes without that duck waddle and really you never saw him looking so well.

Mr. Hogan is very serious about it all down here. The jolly fat man of 1936 who realized then that he was taken on chiefly as a circus attraction by the Nats, is hep to the fact that the gates to the No. 1 catching job on the Washington club are open and beckoning him.

'All My Fault!'

"It was my own fault that I zoomed up to 270 pounds last summer," related Hogan. "I was sore at baseball when the Brayes let me go in August of 1935 despite the fact that I was the only .300 hitter on the team and Wally Berger, the next best hitter, was batting .260 something. I wouldn't take a job in the minor leagues and laid off."

• • • •

"I didn't catch another ball game until May 20, 1936, when I joined Albany. Sure, I was too big and too fat, but I had to earn a living. Didn't have any spring trainihg last year and my weight went up. But getting this break with Washington is a stroke of luck.

• • • •

"I caught all but ten games for a stretch of five seasons for John McGraw and the Giants and I can catch in this league. I'm only 31 and with this club needing a catcher, I may be the best thing that ever happened to the Senators." Okay, Shanty, at least you're the biggest thing that ever happened to the Senators.

• • • •

In Short . . .

Harry Kelley, rookie pitcher, who was to have joined the Orlando-bound party of Nats at Richmond on Saturday, is still among the missing . . . The esteem in which young Kelley is held by the Nats' bosses is indicated by the fact that they are not even taking the trouble to inquire his whereabouts . . . An attitude that is probably induced by Kelley's record with Albany where he won 3 games and lost 11 . . . If there is any mystery about Kelley at all, it is the mystery of how he happened to get a chance in the big leagues with a record like that . . . Jake Early, the rookie catcher from Kings Mountain, N. C., was baptized Jake Early . . . Mrs. Tom Yawkey, wife of the owner of the Boston Red Sox, is a loyal fan . . . She coyly admitted to Mr. Joe Cronin that miniature Red Sox are embroidered on her underwear . . . Mrs. Joe Kuhel, one of the several brides at the Nats' camp, is anticipating a blessed event during the 1937 season.

Hopkins' Changes Praised, Assailed

Baltimore, March 1 (AP).—Reactions to Johns Hopkins University's new athletic policy varied in Maryland and nearby sections today from approval to skepticism.

Hopkins announced yesterday that, beginning in October, it will charge no admissions to intercollegiate sports events.

Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of Maryland, was skeptical; Brig. Gen. Amos W. W. Woodcock, president of St. John's College, Annapolis, termed the policy "ideal." Dr. Byrd said the program had been deemed impractical by larger universities, whose intercollegiate setups are too expensive to operate under such conditions.

WPA Victor As Tourney Play Opens

Treasury, Flying Eagles Score; A. A. U. Event Gets Under Way.

Boys Clubs Advance in Lighter Classes; Seven Games Played.

With Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen giving an expert toss upward of a shiny, new basketball after a flowing introduction by Announcer Jimmy Lake, The Post's 1937 District A. A. U. basketball championship opened last night in the Heurich gymnasium.

The powerful District WPA five then gave the event a smashing inaugural game by topping Congress Heights A. C., 53 to 26. Keeping Eagles, who flew to a 33-27 conquest of the Navy Yard Marines and the Treasury Department which eliminated the Falls Church (Va.) A. C., 55-30.

The WPA crew failed to get off to an impressive start in the early moments, but quickly remedied the situation, particularly in the second half in which it outscored the Heightsmen, 35 to 13. Red Scheible, of Eastern High fame, was sinking baskets with regularity, seven in all, to lead the scoring with 14 points.

Congress Heights got off to a 7-2 lead in the first few minutes of play, but Scheible led a rally which transformed the score to an 11-7 lead in favor of WPA. The Heightsmen came back to lead, 13-12, but so did WPA and it galloped to a 22-13 lead at half-time. The second half saw the Works Progress boys indulge in a bit of scoring practice.

Marines Troublesome.

The Flying Eagles also had some trouble with the Marines in the early going. The first half ended with the count 11 to 11, but Augie Terneak, former Tech High School captain; Jimmy Halloran, former Gonzaga star, and O'Connell combined in a scoring drive which saw them stack up a six-point lead and hold it to the finish.

Falls Church was no match for Treasury, particularly in the last half. In the early going the Virginias took a slight lead, but the Financiers cut it down to 14 to 13, and widened it to 22 to 13 by half-time, the same score as marked the WPA game at the intermission.

Babe Batten and Joe Olsen, of Treasury, set a couple of individual scoring marks for other teams to shoot at, the former piling in 21 points and Olsen scoring 22. A small contingent of Virginians saw the Falls Church defeat after a delegation from the Marine Barracks had seen the Flying Eagles halt the Leathernecks.

Harry Cooper Wins In Florida Tourney

Chicago Professional Defeats Horton Smith and Guldahl in Play-Off; Methodical Play Wins Him $700 First Prize Money.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 1.—"Lighthorse" Harry Cooper, veteran Chicago professional and leading money winner of the winter campaign, today won the St. Petersburg Open Golf tournament in a three-man playoff.

Cooper defeated Horton Smith and Ralph Guldahl, two other Chicago pros, in an 18-hole playoff at the Pasadena Golf Club after the three had tied at the end of the 72-hole tournament Friday with cards of 284, four under par.

Cooper's 72, even par, bested Smith by two strokes and Guldahl by four in the playoff.

Cooper won the $700 first money, Smith taking $450 for second place and Guldahl $350 for third place.

Playing steady, methodical golf, Cooper led from the first hole. He started off with five straight fours and took a one-stroke lead over Smith, holding this until the twelfth hole, when Smith pulled even by holing a 10-foot putt for a birdie 3.

Cooper regained the lead at the thirteenth with a par 4. He took a two-stroke advantage at the short fourteenth, laying his tee shot within four feet of the cup and holing his putt for a deuce.

Smith made a belated attempt to overhaul him on the long fifteenth, where he chipped up within two feet of the cup from off the edge of the green and holed his putt for a birdie 4. His chances failed, however, at the 233-yard seventeenth where he missed the green, chipped eight feet past the cup and missed his putt.

Cooper was on the green from the tee and down in two putts to hold his two-stroke advantage. Both Cooper and Smith took par 5s on the home hole.

Guldahl was never a factor. He lost a stroke on an unplayable lie on the first hole and started with a 6, two over par. After going over par on the fourth, fifth and sixth holes he dropped back and never threatened thereafter.

Dunne, Leonard's Protege, Boxes Straiges to Defeat

By Bill McCormick.

A red-headed Irish replica of the great Benny Leonard, in the person of Eddie Dunne, rose up to hand clever Joey Straiges his first defeat in 34 fights in the eight-round feature bout at Turner's Arena last night.

Dunne, who was discovered and developed by Leonard himself, did practically everything just as the Leonard of old would have done it, except aply those cruel knockout punches with which the one-time ruler of the lightweight division mowed down his opposition.

"Dunne is just beginning to learn offensive boxing," Leonard said. "The first thing a fighter should learn is to protect himself, and pile up points. Dunne has learned that. Now he will learn to toss shock punches when the gets the proper openings. When he learns that, Leonard can teach him no more."

From the opening bell Dunne was the master of his cool, fast, dangerous little opponent. Almost the first move the Leonard protege made was a double feint, which brought down Straiges' guard and enabled Eddie to ram home a telling blow to the face.

A sizzling jab, stinging left hook and vicious right swing also were prominent in Dunne's repertoire. Eddie wasn't much of an infighter, but then neither was Leonard.

Dunne devoted the early rounds to outpointing Straiges. Later he started to punch better, and from then on the result was not in doubt. By the fourth round straiges' right eye was partially closed and a mouse was beginning to appear under the left peeper of Dunne. Straiges went to his corner dripping blood from his mouth after the fifth, but other than that neither of the clever little fighters was banged up.

A crowd of 1,700 contributed $1,953 at the box office. All seemed satisfied they had seen a good fighter beaten by a potentially great fighter.

Max Roesch, Dallas heavyweight, battered his way to a unanimous decision over Murray Kanner, former District amateur heavyweight champion, in a six-round semifinal.

Roesch banged Murray with practically everything but the ring posts, cutting his left eye early in the fight, but he was unable to deposit the lanky former North Carolina University star on the canvas.

Bobby Dechter and Joe Green, a brace of local lightweights, went to a sizzling draw in a six-round preliminary. Both boys discarded science at the opening bell and spent the entire six rounds in toe-to-toe slugging.

Doug Swetnam, Washington featherweight, won a unanimous decision from Baltimore's Joe Raspi in another six-round preliminary.

Don Lash Defeats Becalli at Newark

Newark, N. J., March 1.—Don Lash, mighty little foot racer from Indiana, outsprinted Luigi Becalli, of Italy, tonight to win the mile and a half feature of the annual Seton Hall College track carnival. The time was 6 minutes 47.9 seconds, 10 seconds behind the record for the odd distance.

The Hoosier ace beat the foreign threat by a scant six feet after a stirring last-lap battle. Another invader, Miklas Szabo, of Hungary, was third, about 20 yards behind, and Joe McCluskey, of the New York A. C. was fourth.

Nats Launch 'School' in Florida

150 Players Report to Griffith, Seeking Jobs at Club's Farms.

Would-Be Stars Given Course Free; Milan Is Faculty Member.

Orlando, Fla., March 1.—Canny Clark Griffith, viewing with alarm the growing monopoly of large chain-store baseball firms on youthful talent, today launched a new enterprise of his own.

At nearby Sanford, training site of the Washington-owned Chattanooga Club, 175 youths went into training under the supervision of Joe Engel, general manager of the Washington farm system.

Griffith is inaugurating a new departure with the Nats' training school at Orlando. In contrast to other baseball training schools which in recent years have dotted the South and which charge tuition fees ranging from $50 to $100 per student, Griffith has opened his school to all would-be ball players gratis.

Nearly 400 applications for entrance to the Sanford school were received by Engel, but 175 represented the capacity of accommodations. Arrangements have been made to board the young ball players for $8 per week, which is the only expense to the youths.

Clyde Milan, Chattanooga manager, and one of the prize outfielders of his era when he was playing with Washington, is the chief member of the faculty at Sanford. He will be assisted by Engel, who will tutor the pitchers; Outfielder Freddie Sington, who will be on the staff until he reports to the Nats, and by Griffith and Bucky Harris, who will make regular trips to the camp.

Cognizant of the fact that it is a long chance that the school will produce big league material in one season, Griffith hopes to reap from the Sanford crop enough prospects to staff a team for Sanford in the Florida League, which franchise is owned by the Nats.

Out of the Sanford contingent Griffith also hopes to groom the likeliest players for promotion to the Nats' other farms at Trenton, Charlotte, Salisbury, Md.; Panama City, Fla, and Chattanooga.

Mangin Upset In U. S. Indoor Net Play

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 1.—Ray Palmer, jr., of New York City, turned in a sensational 6—3, 9—7 upset victory over Gregory S. Mangin, the defending champion, in the second round of the national men's indoor tennis singles championship at the Seventh Regiment Armory today.

Mangin, winner of the title four times in the past five years, followed Arthur Hendrix, of Lakeland, Fla., into defeat.

Hendrix lost, 8—6, 7—5, to Morris Adelsberg, New York.

Otherwise, the seeded players, headed by Frankie Parker, of Spring Lake, N. J., the Nation's second ranking player, had little trouble. Parker easily disposed of Joseph Fishbach, 16-year-old met-

Ultimatum Sounds 'Parting of Ways' For Pitcher, Nats

Owner Changes Tactics, Brings Quarrel With Star to 'Showdown;' Rookies Get 'Lost' in Stranded Bus Near Camp.

By Shirley Povich,
A Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., March 1.—A fine of $100 faces Buck Newsom unless he reports to the Washington training camp before Sunday, Owner Clark Griffith announced today.

The big pitcher, a salary holdout, is maintaining a strange silence at his Hartsville, S. C., home.

Newsom, who was paid $11,000 last year, is demanding an increase. Griffith has offered him a $10,000 salary.

Manager Buck Harris, eager for a glimpse of his 1937 rookie crop in uniform, fretted and fumed on Tinker Field for an hour and a half today while his eyes roved over a scene that presented only veterans whose talents he knew, perhaps too well.

Owner Clark Griffith, too, awaited the unveiling of the rookie talent which represented investments totaling $50,000, but on this, the big day for the recruits, they were strangely missing. Practice had been called for 10 a. m., but at that hour only a dozen veterans who had proceeded to the field in their own cars were in uniform.

Mentally resolving severe and immediate punishment for the bushers who were late for the drill, Harris envisioned the rookies blithely glued to the hotel slot machines, where he had left them last night, but after an hour of practice, his wonder gave way to anxiety.

Back to the hotel, two miles away, he dispatched couriers with orders to rout the rookies out and ten minutes later the messengers returned with news.

A quarter mile down the road, the bus containing the rookies had broken down, as Florida buses will; and the recruits were seemingly willing to let it go at that without appreciating the fact that it was only a five-minute walk to the field.

Hustled into uniforms, the rookie crop took to the field and Harris watched eagerly for the tell-tale evidence of "action" or lack of it.

This word "action" is all-descriptive of a ball player's chances to make good, as Harris uses it. If a rookie has no "action," a certain rhythm in his movements, Harris views his as a hopeless case, tabs him for release.

Harris' chief interest centered on his two young catching prospects, lean, lithe Jake Early and stocky Hal Lee. Both met an approving eye as far as "action" was concerned but Harris is reserving opinion until they are tested in exhibition games.

Surprisingly small appeared Jim Wasdell, the $20,000 rookie first baseman who originally was slated to train with Chattanooga, but was called to the Nats' camp here so that Harris might view the youth who looms as a replacement in the event Joe Kuhel slumps or is traded.

Wasdell, a light-haired, compactly built lad of 20, who comes to the Nats with the reputation of being a fancy fielder and solid hitter, will be the smallest first baseman in the league if he makes good.

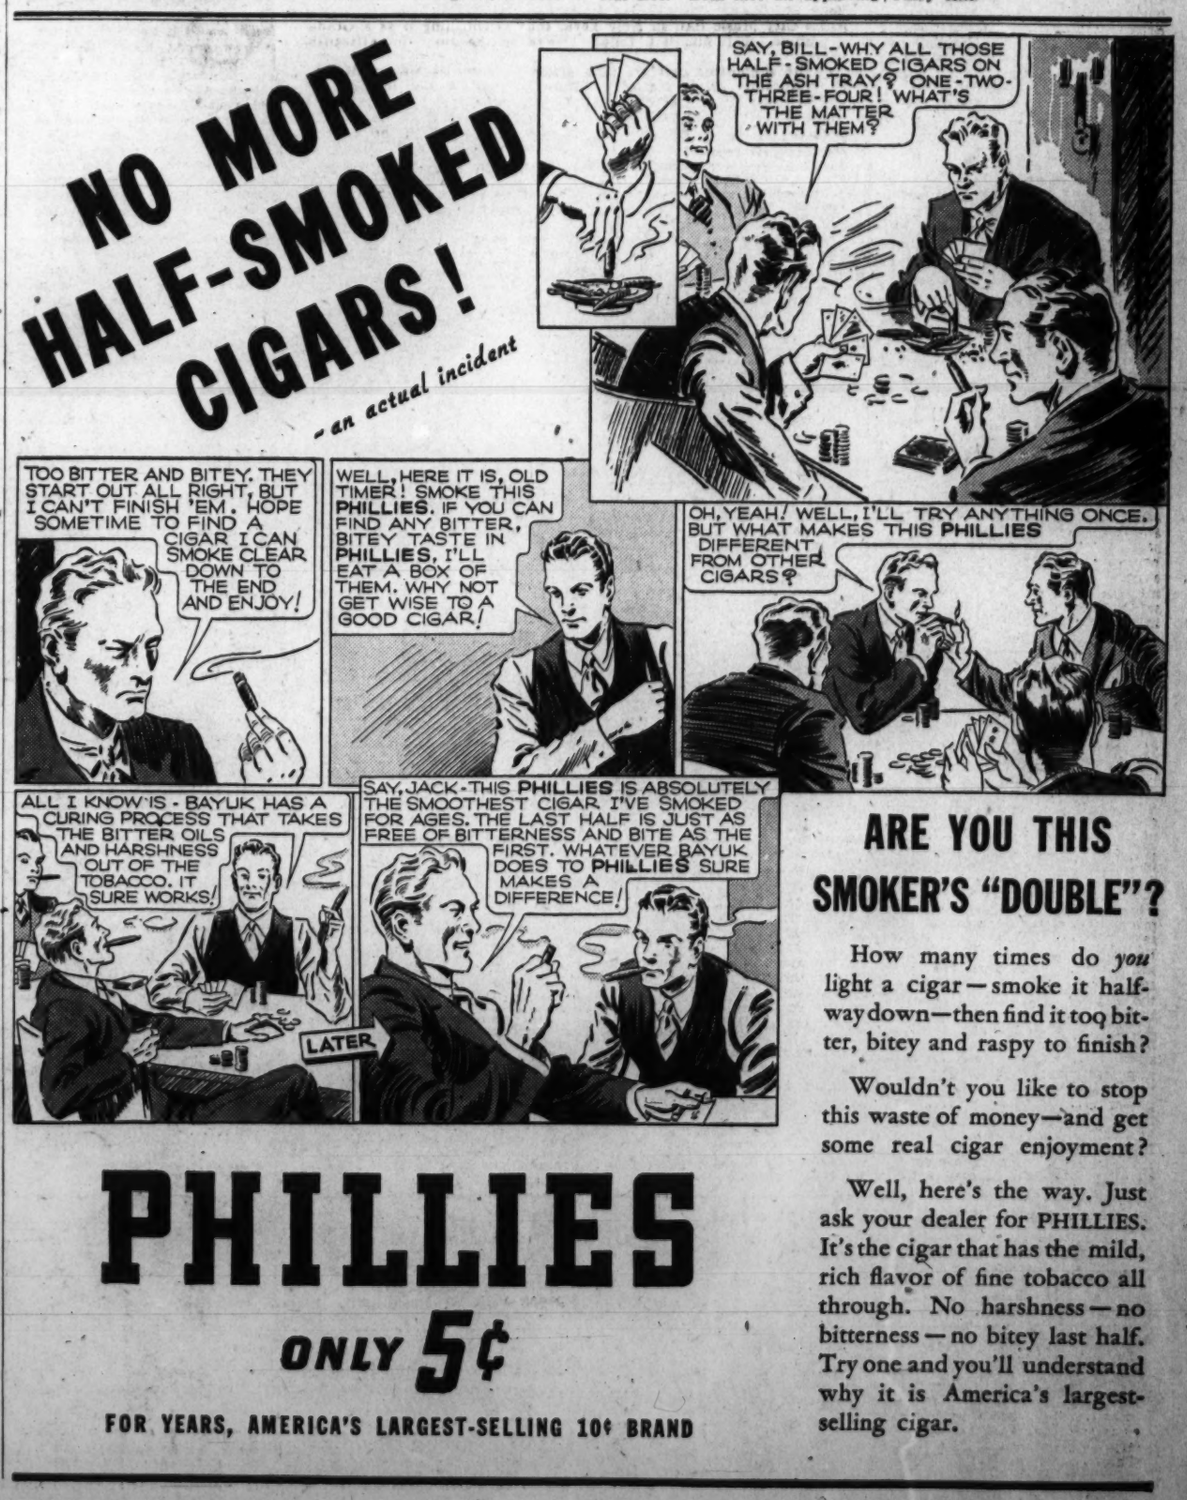
Romping around gayly despite his rubber shirt, big Shanty Hogan presented a far different picture than the slow-moving cumbersome catcher of last season. With steam emanating from his garments in the morning chill, Hogan ridded himself of 7 pounds during the workout, then took two full turns around the half-mile track.

Behind shatter-proof spectacles, Jack Salveson, the big pitcher from the Coast League, displayed a bit of fancy fielding on bunted balls, which was the extent to which the pitcher worked today. Pete Appleton, Joe Cascarella, Jimmy DeShong, Monte Weaver and Ed Linke comprised the contingent of regular pitchers.

Pompoon, Court Scandal Are Named for Derby

Louisville, Ky., March 1 (AP).—Pompoon, Brooklyn and Reaping Reward are among the leading 3-year-olds named for the 1937 Kentucky Derby on May 8, Col. M. J. Winn announced tonight.

Other nominations announced by the president of Churchill Downs were Townsend B. Martin's Court Scandal and William du Pont, jr.'s Fairy Hill.



NO MORE HALF-SMOKED CIGARS!

Genie Palatine, at $9.30, Romps to Victory in Hialeah Mile

Sturdy Filly Outclasses Her Field

Chance Ray, Stablemate of Winner, Second; Track Muddy.

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., March 1.—Genie Palatine, sturdy 4-year-old filly owned by the amazingly successful Chicago patroness of the turf, Mrs. Emil Denemark, added another feature race triumph to the remarkable list of her owner in the Marianna Purse of one mile here today. The steadily campaigned daughter of Genie—Sun Palatine scored by three lengths, while Chance Ray, also in the familiar yellow and blue silks, finished second to make it another Denemark monopoly. W. J. Sprow's Indian Head was beaten five lengths for the place.

The Denemark entry paid $9.30 straight, $8.10 place and $5.50 show, although only six horses and five interests were in the field. This because Mrs. J. D. Hertz' Our Reigh, alleged "good thing" and 6-to-5 favorite, ran out of the money. The latter, supposedly at home in the heavy going that prevailed following Sunday's rain, was slow to begin and never could reach contention. The time for the eight furlongs 1:39 2-5.

Chance Ray and another horse, Sir Quest, were privately purchased by Mrs. Denemark from Mrs. W. Plunket Stewart Saturday morning.

Chance Ray, along with Our Reigh and Top Dog, which did not appear able to extend himself in the mud, are eligible for the Widener Challenge Cup next Saturday.

Genie Palatine, with Kurtsinger up, and Chance Bay, ridden by Bobby Merritt, were in the thick of the battle all the way. They put Liberal away early and had the issue between them through the final three furlongs, with Genie drawing clear and again showing that she thrives on racing.

Hunch and form players alike collected in the first race. Their selection was Marshy, and the filly, running over a track that could well be described as marshy following Sunday's rain, breezed along in front for the entire three furlongs, winning by three lengths in 0:34 3-5. She returned $6.80 in defeating 13 other maiden juveniles. Chanceful was second almost from the start and had a length to spare over the neglected Heraldic. The latter was awarded third money after a photo had been examined and paid $43.20 for $2 show tickets.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SAIDONA, $9.30, $4.60, $4.00; MY GOODNESS, $3.60, $3.20; NANCY MAE, $5.60.

SAIDONA, showing surprising liking for the going, slipped through on the inside entering the stretch and won going away. MY GOODNESS came around the field in the stretch and was next best. NANCY MAE was well up and finished fast. OPOCA set the pace, but stopped badly at the end. SPOTLESS trailed far back all the way. LINLACE had speed for half a mile.

$2.00 DAILY DOUBLE—FIRST AND SECOND RACES—PAID $109.10.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—REAL JAM, $22.40, $10.80, $6.80; NIGHT RAVEN, $8.30, $6.20; SWEET GUINEA, $6.90.

REAL JAM, displaying mud-running quality, moved up gradually around the turn, came to the outside, was bumped in the stretch by NIGHT RAVEN, but gamely overcame interference and won going away. NIGHT RAVEN, well up all the way, made a game effort. SWEET GUINEA trailed far back for 5 furlongs, then came with a rush. VOLDEAR ran a good race. HUNTERDON ran below his true form. LIVE ONE did not like the going. IPSO FACTO tired from setting the pace.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward, nonwinners of two races since February 1. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:30. Off at 3:34. Winner, Miss A. Doris' br. h. (6), by Morvich—Sand Dust. Trained by H. L. Campbell. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:13 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RIDGE MOR, $15.00, $7.80, $4.70; BLACK RIVER, $6.50, $4.30; JUDGE LEER, $4.00.

RIDGE MOR was a bit slow to get into his stride, was taken to the outside in the stretch under a hard drive, closed gamely and won going away. BLACK RIVER raced BRIGHT HAVEN into defeat in the first 3 furlongs, then drew out, but tired suddenly. JUDGE LEER saved ground all the way and finished fast. WISE DUKE broke slow and trailed far back, came to the inside and closed some ground. CHIMNEY TOP could not get to the front and stopped. BRIGHT HAVEN ran well for half a mile.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. The Punta Gardo. Purse, $1,100. For 3-year-old fillies. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:01. Off at 4:03½. Winner, Calumet Farm's dk b. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FOUR ELEVEN, $5.20, $3.40, $2.30; TIME ME, $6.60, $2.90; MAGIC CIRCLE, $2.80.

FOUR ELEVEN got away fast, but was eased back off the early pace. She was taken around the field in the stretch and won going away. TIME ME slipped through on the inside in the stretch and was taken up abruptly at the end. MAGIC CIRCLE opened a wide gap early, went wide entering the stretch and was a thoroughly tired horse at the finish. LIGHT MOMENT followed the pace for a half mile and then tired. PHLOX was outrun.

SIXTH RACE—One mile (chute). The Marianna. Purse, $1,200. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 4:32. Off at 4:33½. Winner, Mrs. E. Denemark's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GENIE PALATINE, $9.30, $8.10, $5.50; CHANCE RAY, $8.10, $5.50; INDIAN HEAD, $4.80.

GENIE PALATINE, at home in the going, moved up gamely in the last half mile, was taken out to the firm going in the middle of the track, assumed the lead at the furlong pole and won nicely in hand. CHANCE RAY raced LIBERAL into defeat, took a lead at the 3-furlong pole and was next best. INDIAN HEAD closed ground steadily and ran a good race. LIBERAL tired badly in the last half mile. OUR REIGH ran a very poor race. He never was a factor. TOP DOG did not like the going.

SEVENTH RACE—One and a half miles (chute). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward, nonwinners of two races in 1937. Start good from Australian barrier. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:00. Off at 5:01. Winner, H. F. Carr's ch. m. (6), by Prince of Bourbon—Loved One. Trained by C. H. Trotter. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LAST ROMANCE, $9.20, $3.80, $2.70; STEALTH, $4.80, $2.90; TOP HIGH, $2.40.

LAST ROMANCE, showing startling form reversal, moved up fast turning out of the backstretch, assumed the lead and stood a long drive gamely. STEALTH, on the inside for the entire trip, closed very fast. TOP HIGH made a determined bid in the last half mile, but was not good enough. MADDENING had no mishap. THISWAY had speed for a mile, then tired.

EIGHTH RACE—Mile and a furlong. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward, nonwinners since January 12. Start good. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 5:31. Off at 5:32½. Winner, C. E. †Pulled up.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—COUNT ME, $5.90, $2.90, $2.80; KINDRED SPIRIT, $3.60, $3.10; KEEP OUT, $3.70.

COUNT ME was much best. He took the lead when ready and just galloped along. KINDRED SPIRIT moved up fast in the stretch and was next best. KEEP OUT was shut off turning out of the backstretch, recovered and closed gamely. TRICKLING had no mishap. BLESSED EVENT pulled up.

At the Post . . .

Dear Al: Selections at Hialeah Park.

The horsemen at this track have a lot of respect for the ability of Roman Soldier, Elwood Sachenmaier's ace. Making his first start of the year, the horse that cleaned up the stakes in Maryland last fall will be opposed by only two horses—Couleedam and Two Bob. Of course, the "black train" will be trying to find his racing legs in preparation for the $50,000 added Widener Handicap on Saturday. Roman Soldier, which finished second in the Kentucky Derby, is one of those horses which need little work before a big race. He has been drilling well and may be the one to beat in the Widener. Jackie Westrope will do the riding. Lester Balaski, who made a hurried trip to Santa Anita to pilot Mr. Bones, will be astride Count Arthur on Saturday. Eddie Arcaro is due to pilot Whopper. Charlie Kurtsinger will have the leg up on Finance. Lee Hardy rides Azucar. Eddie Litzenberger and Maeriel will be teamed. Earl Porter guides Floradora, while Sammy Renick, as usual, boots Bow and Arrow. Due to the scratching of Brevity, the capable Wayne Wright is without a mount at this writing but is likely to be engaged before post time. Stout, Steffen and Anderson are other riders who expect to take a shot at the big money. BILL.

First race—Drift Along seems the best suited of these maiden juvenile fillies. She drew Steffen, the ace 2-year-old rider. Miss Dolly Kay has been getting education and may be ready for a serious effort. Playful Jest for the third money.

Second race—Blakeen breaks from the rail in this sprint and may make every post a winning one. Toni has plenty of speed and looms as the one to beat. Maid of Arches wants a longer route but has some class and is a possible surprise.

Third race—Aunt Flor, despite the 119-pound assignment, appears to be the solid horse in this sprint. She will have Westrope in the saddle and I expect no mistakes. Amqui gets in with light weight and is dangerous. Little Dinah should be no worse than third.

Fourth race—Idle Midget marches postward for this test with 102 pounds in the person of Apprentice H. LeBlanc. On recent races, I'm forced to string along with this fellow. Daytonian is fairly honest. Golden Thought will be hard to crowd out of the money.

Fifth race—Roman Soldier is the natural choice in this three-horse race. He is prepping for Saturday's Widener and probably will not be abused. However, he has worked well and seems capable of carrying the heavy weight. Couleedam and Two Bob to finish in the order listed.

Sixth race—Par and Proph probably will battle it out for the chief award in this field. Both are fit and ready. Mary Elise is a possible upset winner due to the feather weight.

Seventh race—Midshipman likes the turf course and seems to have found the proper company. Penrill is a tops now and should be a keen factor. Mariato has been tipped often.

Eighth race—Oddesa Boy burned up a wad of dough recently. He is better than rated and has been seeking the right spot. This may be the day of days. The Queen is the figure horse. Grey Shot for the show.

Best bet—Roman Soldier.

C. U. Five Host to Long Island

Cards Bowed In First of Clashes

Schmarr Due to Play Tonight Despite Injury to His Back.

THE LINE-UPS.

| Catholic U. | Position. | Long Island. |
|---|---|---|
| 9 Schmarr | L.F. | Kramer 23 |
| 8 Ambrose | R.F. | Norton 18 |
| 5 Brown | Center | Hillhouse 21 |
| 7 Carroll | L.G. | Merson 24 |
| 10 Pagano | R.G. | Bender 20 |

One of the East's best collegiate basketball teams will exhibit its wares here tonight when Long Island University's quintet invades Brookland for a return game with Catholic University, starting at 8:30 o'clock. It will be the first of two games here for the Blackbirds, who meet George Washington tomorrow night.

On a basis of past performances Catholic has no license to be in the same gym with its guest, but the brusque and businesslike boys working for Mr. "Fod" Cotton have displayed utter contempt for form time and time again, beating any number of teams they weren't supposed to. Then again, when the Cards are seeking revenge, such as they are tonight, Long Island having won the first game, 51-36, they manage to put a little more pressure on the ball. Their games with Geneva and La Salle were striking examples of their amazing comeback power.

Schmarr on Ailing List.

The team will be seriously handicapped by injuries, however, for Hermie Schmarr, high scorer in the city race, and Sam Pagano, a guard, are on the ailing list. Schmarr, who netted 22 points against Clair Bee's busy boys in the first game, is suffering with a back injury while Pagano, hobbling around on a bad ankle, probably will not be able to play.

Four Long Island stars who played prominent roles in elevating their school into the national basketball spotlight will end their college careers in these two games. Jules Bender, leading scorer in the East during the past three years and one of the leading exponents of the game, will be the team's greatest loss. Ben Kramer, one of the best floormen in the game; Leo Merson, co-captain, and Kenneth Norton, a utility man, complete the quartet of departing stars.

Long Island is bringing a flock of sophomore talent here for trials, an indication that Bee does not consider the District teams serious competition. If all goes well he will use the rookies, but if it goes as Catholic and George Washington anticipate we may see Mr. Bee himself out there in uniform.

A preliminary game between St. John's, recently crowned Catholic prep school champion, and Catholic University's frosh will inaugurate the twin bill at 7 o'clock. Admission for the two games is 40 cents.

St. John's College Abandons Baseball

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., March 1.—Valentine Lentz, director of athletics at St. John's College, announced today that a decision had been reached to abandon baseball for the coming season. Lack of material was given as the reason by Lentz, who said that the game might be resumed in the future. After a lapse of several years, St. John's has maintained a nine for the past two seasons. St. John's will devote its spring activities to lacrosse and tennis.

The action of Johns Hopkins was thoroughly approved, however, by Gen. Amos W. W. Woodcock, president of St. John's, who said that it was an ideal condition for athletics.

G. W. Freshmen Take 14th Straight, 46-25

George Washington's freshman basketball team won its fourteenth victory in 15 starts last night, whipping Washington-Lee High, of Ballston, Va., 46-25, on the G. W. court. The yearlings, who will defend their District A. A. U. championship starting Thursday night in The Post tournament, took a 27-3 lead in the first period.

George Garber, New York City all-high star, led thescoring witn 11 points for the Freshmen. The cubs meet Silver Spring Merchants at 9 p. m. Thursday in the Heurich gymnasium in their tournament debut.

Md. Heavily Represented In Meet

Maryland will have 21 track athletes in 13 events of the Maryland-Fifth Regiment games in the latter's spacious and attractive armory in Baltimore Saturday night.

In all there will be 30 finals, with the Governor's mile, the Oriole 600, the 2-mile relay, a relay in which Georgetown will figure and another in which Duke, Navy, North Carolina and Maryland are slated to run, as the feature.

Coleman Headley will carry Maryland's hopes into the Governor's mile, for which Gov. Nice has given the trophy, and if he is fit has a grand chance to beat Graham Gammon, of North Carolina; Glenn Funk, former Nebraska captain, and Vincent Braun, of Georgetown, and the others who will race in the event.

Bill Eay, Jim Elliott, Penn A. C., and Bob St. John, of Virginia; Ed Scofield, of Navy, and other aces will step in the Oriole 600.

Joe Lumpkin, of Richmond U., who set a record of 9:30.4 in the Southern Conference last week; Joe McCluskey, Olympic team member; Joe Fox, of Yale, and Bill Agee, of Baltimore, are among the 2-milers who will make this event a big attraction.

Howard U. Wins.

Baer to Sail; Will Ignore Garden

N. Y. Group May Make Test Case of Former Heavy Champion.

By the Associated Press

New York, March 1.—Max Baer probably will answer Madison Square Garden's threat of legal action if he doesn't fight Bob Pastor March 19 by walking up the gangplank Wednesday and sailing to London for two fights and around $50,000.

That's the way the Baer-Garden dispute shaped up today, using however, only outward sings as a gauge on what's going on inside, and that seemed to be plenty.

John Reed Kilpatrick, president of Madison Square Garden Corporation, stated emphatically the Garden intends to "go the limit" to force Baer and his manager, Ancil Hoffman, to live up to their part of the contract to fight the man who stayed 10 rounds with Joe Louis.

It may be the Garden is glad for the opportunity to test the validity of its contract, using the outcome perhaps as a barometer of what to expect when the Eighth avenue corporation goes to the courts to halt Jim Braddock from meeting Louis in Chicago.

Diffence of Opinion.

For virtually the same reason Baer's manager contends he and his heaveyweight aren't under contract to the Garden, Kilpatrick claims they are. Chronologically speaking, here's the way it goes:

Some weeks ago Hoffman signed a contract for Baer to fight Pastor March 19 in the Garden, but specified the bout must have the New York State Athletic Commission's official approval by February 10. The commission, on that date, refused to okay the fight. Hoffman claims that let's him out.

Today, however, Kilpatrick charged, the February 10 incident was a boomerang. On the contract form signed by Hoffman and Baer appear the words: "It is understood and agreed all parties to this contract hold licenses," said Kilpatrick.

"By signing it they represented themselves as being licensed and because they weren't we could not get the commission's approval on February 10," said Kilpatrick. "But you see how quickly the bout was approved after the commission granted Baer and Hoffman licenses last Friday!

"I guess Ancil overlooked that angle."

Lewis to Face Ring Body on Monday

The District Boxing Commission, National Boxing Association and all parties concerned will consider the case of Light-heavyweight Champion John Henry Lewis at a special meeting here next Monday morning.

Lewis is under suspension by the N. B. A. for failure to go through with a bout here against Tiger Roy Williams last summer. The suspension has kept him from accepting offered bouts in Michigan and Nebraska.

Present at the meeting will be members of the District Commission, Executive Secretary Edward B. Foster, of the N. B. A.; Lewis, his manager, Gus Greenlee; their attorney; Promoter Earl McDonald and Matchmaker Walter Young, who contracts for the champion's services.

Junior Golden Gloves Tourney in Inaugural

The opening bouts of the Junior Golden Glove tournament were held at the Police Boys' Club No. 5, last night. For pairings of tonight's fights, entrants should call the Washington Boys' Club.

50-pound class—Lou Spinelli (M. P. B. C.), won decision from John Mallon (G. B. C.); Junior Rodill (G. B. C.), won decision from Earl Jackson (W. B. C.).

70-pound class—A. Bassin (Merrick), won decision from William Burgess (M. P. B. C.); H. Roberts (Merrick), won decision from Lou King (G. B. C.).

80-pound class—Joe Gannon (Merrick), won on forfeit from D. Chaney (N. E. B. C.); Paul Cooklev (M. P. B. C.), won decision from Bill Elliott (W. B. C.).

Steele, Pirrone In Philly Battle

Philadelphia, March 1 (AP).—Freddie Steele, of Tacoma, Wash., making his first start since he defended his middleweight title against Babe Risko in New York, will meet Paul Pirrone, of Cleveland, in a ten-round non-title go at Convention Hall tomorrow night.

Steele is favored to win, although Pirrone, in his last fight in Philadelphia, got up from an eight-count to knock out Frankie Caris. It will be Steele's first appearance in a Philadelphia ring.

In the semifinal Butch Rogers, San Diego (Calif.) heavyweight, encounters Eddie Houghton, of Philadelphia, in an eight-round bout.

Navy Gridmen Report For Spring Practice

Annapolis, Md., March 1 (AP).—Members of the Naval Academy football squal reported to Lieut. Harry J. (Hank) Hardwick, new head coach, today to start a short period of spring practice.

Hardwick put the squad through a light workout. He recently relieved Lieut. Thomas J. Hamilton as head coach.

On the Baseball Trail

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 1.—Leaving three holdouts behind, the first squad of Chicago White Sox left tonight for Pasadena, Calif., to start spring training.

The squad, consisting of pitchers and catchers, will arrive on Wednesday morning ready to get into immediate action and with Manager Jimmie Dykes already on the ground to greet them.

Lou Comiskey, president of the club, decided to remain awhile longer in Chicago, with a view of luring his three holdouts, Zeke Bonura, first baseman; Merritt "Sugar" Cain, pitcher, and Second Baseman Jackie Hayes, into the fold.

Daytona Beach, Fla., March 1 (AP).—Manager Frankie Frisch, although he is 38 years old, was perhaps the "fittest" man in the St. Louis Cardinal baseball training camp, which opened today.

Frisch has been here a month taking daily exercise under the Florida sun. He worked off 11 pounds during the four weeks.

Two workouts were held today. Nine players still were missing, but only two — Jerome Herman (Dizzy) Dean eccentric pitcher, and Johnny Mize, young first baseman—were classed as holdouts.

Havanna, March 1 (AP). — Glenn Spencer, third-string catcher of the New York Giants who has been holding out for assurance he would be kept with the team all season, sent word today that he was on his way from Miami. He will sign soon after his arrival tomorrow.

The Giants held their usual long daily practice session, despite a chilly wind.

New Orleans, La., March 1 (AP).—The Cleveland Indians' battery men went through a two-hour workout today to open the Tribe's training activities. With the signing of Denny Galehouse a few hours earlier, the only holdout pitchers were Johnny Allen and Willis Hudlin. Manager Steve O'Neill, after catching Rookie Tom Drake's offerings, remarked, "He's got a better hook now than a lot of big leaguers will have in July."

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 1 (AP).—Two rookies, Louis Menendez, an infielder, and Charles (Chief) Marcella, former Providence College outfielder and Cape Cod League graduate, stole the show with fielding gems during today's single Boston Bees' practice session.

Tel. & Tel. Net $174,826,414 For Last Year

$9.35 on Common Exceeds Dividend First Time Since 1930.

New York, March 1.—In its annual report of operations for 1936, made public today, the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. shows a net income of $174,826,414, equal to $9.35 each on the 18,865,093 shares of common stock outstanding at the end of the year. This is $49,019,909 more than the $125,806,505, or $6.74 a share, earned in 1935. Last year was the first since 1930 that the company earned more than $9 a share, and it is the best showing made since 1929, when $12.57 a share was cleared.

The regular dividend of $9 a share has been maintained uninterrupted since 1921, although from 1932 to 1935, inclusive, the company had to dip into its surplus to do so. The company earned $6.52 a share in 1934, $7.37 in 1933, $7.82 in 1932, $8.92 in 1931 and $9.92 in 1930.

The number of telephones in service increased last year by 881,000, compared with a gain of 456,000 in 1935 and one of 298,000 in 1934. There were 14,453,000 Bell telephones in service at the end of the year. This number, however, still was 740,000 less than the maximum reached in 1930, but was 1,725,000 more than the low point of August, 1933.

At the end of the year there were 641,000 stockholders of record of A. T. & T. The average number of shares held per stockholder was 29. Geographically, the stock is widely held. No stockholder of record holds as much as 1 per cent of the total stock. Approximately one-third of Bell System employes own stock in the company. Including the holders of common and preferred stocks of the company's principal telephone subsidiaries and excluding duplications, there are about 715,000 Bell System stockholders.

Wheat Higher On Export Cut By Argentina

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 1.—Stimulated by notable curtailment of Argentina's exportable surplus and by uncertainty attending the Kansas crop outlook, wheat prices rose 1⅞ cents a bushel maximum today. The total amount of wheat now remaining for export from Argentina is estimated at only 88,328,000 bushels, against 122,300,000 a month ago.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ⅞@1¼ cents above Saturday's finish; May, 1.32⅜@1.32⅞; July, 1.14¾@1.14⅞; September, 1.11⅞@1.12; corn ⅛@1¼ up; May, 1.07¾@1.08; July, 1.02½; September, 95½; oats ⅛@½ advance; May, 46⅞@47, and rye showing 1¼@1⅝ bulge; May, 1.06⅝. ### Stocks Drag Except for a Rally in Steel; Metals Recede; U. S. Bonds Soft.

New York, March 1.—Stocks dragged through an uninteresting market, until the last hour or two, then a push in United States Steel lifted prices to an irregularly higher close. Sales of well under 2,000,000 shares were the smallest in several weeks. Government bonds softened, although no changes were reported in money rates. Dollars weakened a little under francs and sterling. Farm products rose. May wheat climbed a cent to 132¾ cents a bushel.

For Wall Street the first of March ordinarily is a time merely of a more active temporary demand for money, and it frequently brings a little unsettlement in the securities markets, partly because of preparations for income tax payments and Government financing at the middle of the month. For most corporations it is merely the end of two-thirds of a quarter, but for the farming country it is the great leasing and moving date. Public sales of machinery and live stock are held, debts are frequently paid, new ones more frequently contracted and a general reshuffling takes place.

On the farms also March 1 is regarded as the first of spring. It begins with further expansion in general business activity. In the steel, iron and non-ferrous metal industries - large part of the activity can be traced to military preparations abroad, and at least some of it to our own arms plans. Demand for steel and other metals is none the less real, and so also is that for other commodities useful in building armaments and in making general preparations for war.

Steel at New Top.

As the afternoon trading wore on the impression of strength in the steel industry created by the reports on the high rate of operations and the hardening of prices grew on the market. Steel common, which had held steady around 111 during most of the day, gradually gathered strength and managed to move up about 4½ points by the middle of the final hour to a new high price around 115½.

Buoyancy in steel helped to rejuvenate other sections of the market, but the performance elsewhere was rather listless. Utilities were uninspired, although Telephone hardened on its good earnings statement for last year. Motors marked time. Truck shares climbed a little. Mack rose sharply.

Most of the oil section was soft. Packing stocks failed to carry on their advance. Among the more active groups were rubbers and fertilizers. Low-priced mines absorbed profit-taking with difficulty. Smelters, Kennecott and Anaconda dropped 1 to 2 points. Coca-Cola hardened on its earnings report. General Electric rose in the afternoon. Rails did well.

Federal Funds.

So great was the surplus of funds in many of the big banks, alter allowance for the increased requirements, it was considered unlikely that immediate effects would be felt in the money market. Some of the banks talked of an early rise in the rate charged for Federal funds, but plenty of institutions seemed satisfied for the moment to take what they could get on these funds, namely, one-eighth of 1 per cent. A few bankers are opposed to selling Federal funds at such a low rate and say that banks which ought to call some loans are carrying the loans, netting them 1 per cent, by borrowing Federal funds from neighbors which would rather compete for some of the loans.

Steel Output 85.8% Highest Since 1929

New York, March 1 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week advanced 3.3 points to 85.8 per cent of capacity, compared with 82.5 per cent last week, the American Iron and Steel Institute estimated today. A month ago operations averaged 79.6 per cent of capacity, while a year ago the rate was 53.5 per cent. The sharp spurt put activity of the steel industry, the Institute said, at the highest level since October, 1929, when the stock market crash was followed by a contraction in production.

Life Insurance Sales Here Dip 15% for Year

January Average for U. S. as a Whole 3 Per Cent Under Year Ago.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

A 15 per cent decline in new life insurance written in the District of Columbia in January in comparison with the corresponding month last year, is revealed in the monthly statistical report of the Life Insurance Sales Research Bureau, of Hartford, Conn. The average for the country was off 3 per cent for the comparative period. The local recession was the largest for some time.

A gain of 11 per cent over January a year ago was announced for Maryland, while Virginia sales advanced 3 per cent. North Carolina sales showed a 13 per cent increase and South Carolina's a sharp upturn of 37 per cent. South Carolina's record was broken by Nevada, however, which led the entire country with a gain of 51 per cent. West Virginia registered a 1 per cent recession.

New business written locally last month amounted to $4,070,000. Maryland sales aggregated $6,661,000; Virginia's, $5,639,000; West Virginia's, $3,655,000; North Carolina's, $6,198,000; South Carolina's, $2,490,000. The South Atlantic district which also includes Delaware, Georgia and Florida, totaled $39,698,000.

In the Nation, Detroit showed a 10 per cent gain and Philadelphia and Boston also reported increases.

Savings Conference.

The Eastern Savings Conference under auspices of the Savings Division, American Bankers Association, will be held in New York City, March 11 and 12, according to notices received here.

A large number of subjects of great interest to savings bankers will be discussed. These will include monthly payment credits personal loans, trend of interest rates, how to popularize savings, savings banking under changed conditions, position of Federal Housing Administration mortgages in savings banks, and savings departments, and what securities may be used for investment of bank funds.

The speakers' list will include Philip A. Benson, president of the

Cotton Advances To Season's High

New York, March 1 (AP).—On the most active demand in the current upward movement, cotton rallied to further new highs today. The belief gained ground that cotton was undervalued and large half-year consumption figures made a favorable impression. May sold up from 12.79 to 12.90 and closed at the high with final prices 10 to 21 points net higher.

Cottonseed Oil.

Cottonseed oil was firmer early today on covering, but broke under renewed liquidation and selling by local interests on expectations of large increase in lard stocks. Final prices were 14 to 20 points net lower. Sales, 135 contracts. Bleachable spot, nominal; March closed, 10.75; May, 10.89; July, 10.94; September, 10.92; October, 10.81.

Safeway Stores Sales.

New York, March 1 (AP).—Safeway Stores, Inc. reported for the four weeks ended February 20 sales of $27,510,237, against $23,470,722 in the like period of 1936, an increase of 17.2 per cent.

Timken Defers Dividend.

Detroit, March 1 (AP).—Directors of the Timken-Detroit Axle Co., where plant operations have been suspended since February 24 because of a strike and shutdown, have postponed action on the regular 25-cent quarterly dividend on common stock.

$4,000,000 Celotex Issue Offered Today

4½ Per Cent Ten-Year Debentures Priced at 101½.

An offering of $4,000,000 of 10-year 4½ per cent debentures of the Celotex Corporation, dated February 1, with attached common stock purchase warrants, and 40,000 shares of common stock, insofar as the offering of warrants may be deemed to constitute an offering of common stock, is being made today by Distributors Group, Inc. The debentures are priced at 101½ per cent and interest.

The warrants, which must be exercised not later than February 1, 1947, will entitle the holder to purchase at $50 per share one share of common for each $100 principal amount of debentures.

The debentures are redeemable from February 1, 1940, at 103, with a reduction of one-half per cent each year until 1945, and thereafter at par.

Proceeds will be used to redeem at 105 a total of $821,500 of 6½ per cent first mortgage bonds due 1944 and to redeem at 115 a total of $1,706,700 principal amount of 6 per cent cumulative debentures due 1954. The balance will be used for additional working capital.

Burd Piston Ring Offering.

An offering is being made today of 60,000 shares of Burd Piston Ring Co. common stock, par value $1, at $12.50 per share. The underwriter is Van Alstyne, Noel & Co.

Life Insurance Sales Here Dip 15% for Year

January Average for U. S. as a Whole 3 Per Cent Under Year Ago.

Dime Savings Bank, Brooklyn, N. Y., and second vice president of the American Bankers Association, who was a speaker at the recent annual banquet of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking.

Noble R. Jones, president of the savings division of the association, will talk on "Savings Banking Under Changed Conditions." W. R. Williamson, actuarial consultant, Social Security Board, will speak on "How to Capitalize the Thrift Influence Under the Social Security Program."

Other speakers and their subjects are: Lindsay Bradford, president, City Bank Farmers' Trust Co., New York, "What Securities May Be Used for Investment of Banking Funds." Charles F. Aufderhar, jr., Savings Bank Trust Co., New York, "What Do We Known About Municipal Bonds?" Besides the business sessions, there will be two luncheons and a banquet.

Reserve Requirements.

Local member banks have been reminded by the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, Va., of increased reserve requirements amounting to 33 1-3 per cent. Half of the increase became effective yesterday and the remainder May 1. Banks have been sent charts listing the amount of the new requirements.

Reserve city banks in Washington, Richmond, Baltimore and Charlotte, N. C., place 17½ per cent of their demand deposits and 5½ per cent of time deposits with the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond through April 30. Other banks in the Fifth Federal Reserve District place 12¼ per cent of demand deposits and 5¼ per cent of time deposits.

After May 1, reserve city banks apply 20 per cent of their demand deposits and 6 per cent of their deposits in the time classification. The other institutions must have 14 per cent of demand deposits and 6 per cent of time deposits placed with the Richmond Reserve Bank.

A. B. A. Spring Meeting.

The annual spring meeting of the American Bankers Association's executive council will convene at Hot Springs, Ark., April 18-21. Among local bankers expected to attend are President Robert V. Fleming, of Riggs National Bank, latest past president of the National bankers' organization; President Francis G. Addison, jr., Security Savings & Commercial Bank; C. H. Pope, vice president and treasurer, Munsey Trust Co.; George O. Vass, vice president and cashier of Riggs National Bank; Wilmer J. Waller, vice president and cashier, Hamilton National Bank, and E. E. Mountjoy, local deputy manager for the National Association. Mr. Fleming and Mr. Vass are members of the council.

April 10 and 11, are dates for the meeting of the executive council of the Southeastern group, Investment Bankers Association and Southern Pines, N. C., will be the place of its spring conference. Local members leave here April 9, and return April 12, losing only one business day. An attendance of more than 100 is already promised.

Court Proposal Will Be Debated

President Roosevelt's proposals to alter the setup of the Supreme Court will be debated by two members of the Junior Bar Association at the monthly meeting of the East Sligo Valley Citizens Association tomorrow night in the Liquor Control Building, Silver Spring.

The speakers will be Ben G. Wilkinson, jr., of Takoma Park, who will defend the President, and Leo N. McGuire, of Washington, who will oppose the plan. Mr. Wilkinson is vice president of the Young Men's Democratic Club of Takoma Park and a graduate of the Harvard University Law School. McGuire, a Georgetown University Law School graduate, has been active in Washington legal circles for five years.

Cherry Blossom Festival To Be Topic of Meeting

With Washington's annual display of Japanese cherry blossoms only a month distant, a group of civic leaders will meet at 2 p. m. Thursday to discuss the prospects of a festival to celebrate the occasion.

Official Notices

COMMISSIONERS OF THE DISTRICT OF Columbia, February 17, 1937. A public hearing having been held by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia on December 14, 1936, in the matter of closing certain streets, and in connection therewith the dedication of new streets, and the said Commissioners, being satisfied as to the equity, justice and advisability of said closings, and that the same are in the public interests and not detrimental to the interests of abutting property owners, notice is hereby given that the said Commissioners have prepared the following order: "Ordered: That pursuant to the provisions of Public Act No. 307, approved December 15, 1932, Macomb street between Little Falls road and Mansfield street northwest, and Weaver terrace between Lowell street and Little Falls road northwest, are hereby ordered closed, same to take effect on and after March 15, 1937, such action being taken, however, in connection with the dedication of land for new street area, all as shown on map numbered 2003 in the office of the surveyor of the District of Columbia, the title to the land comprised in said area so closed to revert to the abutting property owners, as shown on said map." Any and all parties interested must file objections to said closings in writing before the effective date of above order; otherwise said order shall become effective on March 15, 1937, as aforesaid, and said street area shall on and after said date become closed in accordance with the provisions of said act. MELVIN C. HAZEN, GEORGE E. ALLEN, DAN I. SULTAN, Commissioners, D. C.

YOU'RE IN FOR IT NOW, BUD — I WARNED YOU!
IT'S ABOUT TIME THESE PROFESSORS LEARNED GOOD ATHLETES DON'T HAVE TO STUDY, NED!
SO, YOU'RE THE BEST PLAYER ON THE FRESHMAN BASKETBALL TEAM, AND YOU DON'T HAVE TO STUDY MATHEMATICS — OR ANYTHING ELSE?
WELL, I'VE SEEN YOU PLAY AND YOU'RE WRONG ON YOUR FIRST CLAIM — YOUR SECOND CLAIM IS NOT ONLY WRONG BUT RIDICULOUS—
THAT LEAVES ONE LITTLE MATTER I FORGOT TO MENTION — YOU ARE HEREBY DECLARED INELIGIBLE FOR THAT LAST GAME BECAUSE OF SCHOLASTIC INEFFICIENCY!

WHAT IS THE PRIME MINISTER OF ANDERIA DOING RUNNING AROUND THIS COUNTRY IN DISGUISE?
I'M TRYING TO SAVE MY COUNTRY!
WE ARE A NATION WITHOUT A RULER— PRINCESS TANIA HAS DISAPPEARED!
THE PRINCESS! WHAT HAS HAPPENED?
I WISH I KNEW— BUT UNTIL SHE IS FOUND, YOU MUST HELP ME— YOU ARE ENOUGH ALIKE TO BE TWINS—YOU DOUBLED FOR HER BEFORE!

BIG CHIEF WAHOO

By Saunders and Woggon

WHILE BIG CHIEF WAHOO IS LEISURELY APPROACHING NEW YORK, HIS AFFAIR WITH MINNIE-HA-CHA IS APPROACHING A CRISIS!
THE DUKE OF BURPINGHAM TAKES THE LEAD
WHY IS MY FRIEND SO SAD TONIGHT?
AH, PRINCESS! I AM WHAT YOU AMERICANS CALL "ON THE BLEMISH"!
OH— YOU MEAN "ON THE SPOT", DUKE. BUT IN WHAT WAY?
MY PATER HAS CABLED FOR ME TO RETURN TO OUR ANCESTRAL MANOR IN EUROPE, ALAS!
I-I'M REALLY SORRY!
THEN, WHY SPURN MY SUIT? AFTER ALL, YOUR BALLY CHIEF WAHOO UTTERLY IGNORED YOUR LAST LETTAH, DIDN'T HE?
THAT'S TRUE— BUT I MUST THINK—
VERY WELL, DUKE— IF CHIEF WAHOO DOES NOT APPEAR BY APRIL 1 TO CLAIM MY HAND— I'LL MARRY YOU!
APRIL 1
HMMM! THAT DATE! IS MINNIE IN EARNEST? OR IS THIS A BUILD-UP TO AN APRIL FOOL LET-DOWN?

This Insulating Board is

A WALL OF PROTECTION
CERTAIN-TEED provides efficient Insulation as well as great structural strength.
Applied to interior walls, CERTAIN-TEED offers these important advantages: Insulates as it beautifies . . . Provides permanent decoration . . . Corrects acoustics . . . Reduces the passage of sound through walls and ceilings . . . And it is easily cleaned. Ordinary insulating materials lose much of their efficiency through the absorption of moisture. This cannot happen with CERTAIN-TEED. Use it inside your house—for new construction and for remodeling.
No Down Payment, 3 Years to Pay on the F. H. A. Plan. COSTS NOTHING TO FIND OUT
Don't delay. Get the facts. Inquire about our low prices—and save. Old roofs made new by applying CERTAIN-TEED Millerized shingles right over the old roof.

COATS

It's fashionable to look young! And to get you into the proper frame of mind, our whole Spring collection of coats is planned to take years off your age. You're going to look prettier, gayer, more light-hearted than you have since you were sixteen.

Here's the way it's done. The casual coat has bobbed its skirt and it's younger. The dress coat has the flaring fullness of a dancer's skirt and it's younger. The sports coat takes to vigorous, alive colors and it's younger. The "topper" is brief and to the point—and it's younger.

So if you want to look as young as spring itself start out with a coat from The Hecht Co.'s sparkling collection. It's brimming over with Youth! And our modest prices will keep the wrinkles out of your pocketbook, too.

THE HECHT CO.
THIRD FLOOR

A gloriously young Margy Jr. coat with a magnificent full back—very flattering to the figure. Belted in contrasting leather. In the Young Washington Shop in beige, shrimp, gold or blue. Sizes 11 to 17.

A fleecy casual coat from the Better Coat Shop with extra-wide revers and crystal buttons. Gold, beige, St. James rose, melon or nude. Misses' sizes.

A Better Coat shop coat with contrasting tuxedo revers in luggage tan, gold, beige, black, melon or nude. In misses' sizes.
